2 Killed, 13 Injured As Snow Wets Streets

Head-on Crash Fatal to Newsman In Maryland; Pedestrian Dies

Two persons were killed and at least 13 were injured on snow-swept highways in and near the District yesterday.

The dead:

Olive May Crawford, colored, 35, of 1545 Fourth street northwest.

The woman's death was the seventeenth this year in Washington traffic and the first since March 19. Last year's toll at this time was 27.

She died at Freedmen's Hospital of spinal injuries after being struck by an automobile in the 1800 block of First street northwest. Police said the automobile was operated by Robert L. Miller, 20, of Berwyn, Md. He was charged with reckless driving.

Riley was killed when the automobile in which he was alone skidded and crashed into another, containing four Baltimore grand jurymen and operated by a Baltimore detective, on Crain highway near Central avenue in Prince Georges County, Md. All five in the second automobile were injured.

The grand jurymen were en route to inspect the House of Reformation at Cheltenham, Md.

Traffic Signal Blamed

Others injured in and near Washington included an Arlington, Va., man, whose automobile plunged 20 feet from a bridge on Lee boulevard and three Georgetown University students hurt in a collision at Thirty-fourth street and Woodley road northwest. A defective traffic signal was blamed for their crash.

Riley died in Casualty Hospital here. Others hurt in the same crash were Detective Albert Kendrick, 35, Baltimore, head and knee injuries; Maj. Julian De Court, 62, U. S. A., retired, head injuries; Edwin Hooper, 52, chairman of the jury and athletic director of the Baltimore Fire Department, head injuries.

The other two occupants of the automobile, who received cuts and bruises, were William C. Nolte and George Hilde.

Riley, Annapolis correspondent for the New York, Philadelphia and Washington newspapers, had reported sports and other news in the Maryland capital nearly half a century.

Active in Democratic politics, he was a member of the Maryland Legislature from Anne Arundel County at 21, served on the Annapolis City Council and was a candidate for mayor and for the State Senate.

A son of Dr. Elihu S. Riley, author, lawyer and historian, he was graduated from St. John's Academy and the University of Maryland Law School. He entered the practice of law at Annapolis and simultaneously began work as a newspaper correspondent.

He became interested as a young man in military matters and served

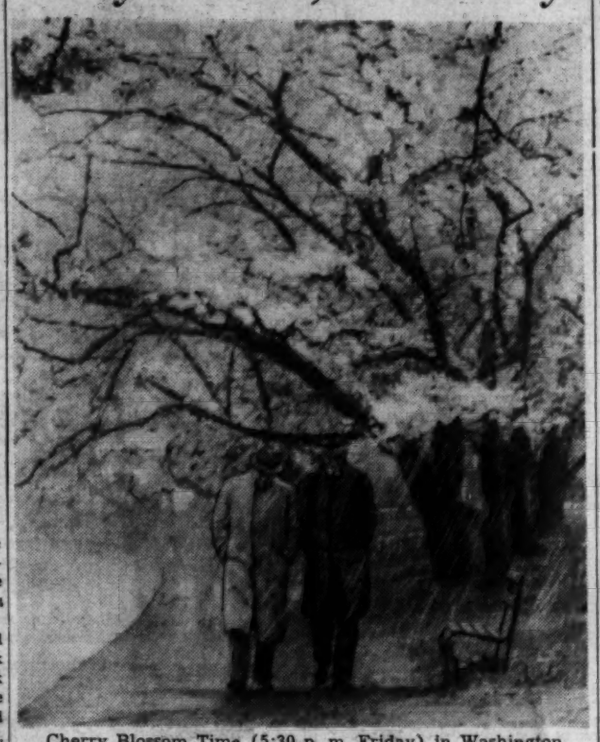
Winter's Encore

Cold Snap Will Not Harm Cherry Blossoms, Officials Say



Cherry Blossom Time (5:30 p. m. Friday) in Washington

Winter played a return engagement in Washington last night—with a temperature forecast of 26 degrees before dawn today—but it will bring little or no harm to the cherry blossoms, according to Weather Bureau officials.

Today, the weatherman said, will be cloudy with a temperature in the low forties. Rain and warmer weather was forecast for tomorrow.

Washington, in common with all the United States, was the butt of a prankish nature. While the East and the deep South shivered in near freezing temperatures and breasted snow-laden blasts, the Pacific Coast sweltered in the grip of premature summer. Three per-

Dewey in Rift With Simpson

Row With Leader In N. Y. May Cost Him 26 Delegates

By International News Service

Albany, N. Y., April 12.—National Committeeman Kenneth F. Simpson, of New York, today broke openly with Thomas F. Dewey, aspirant to the Republican Presidential nomination, after Dewey supporters jammed through the State committee "a purge" resolution aimed at Simpson.

The resolution calls for a meeting of the State's delegates to the National Republican Convention for the purpose of electing new national committee members. J. Russell Sprague, Dewey campaign manager, is scheduled to succeed Simpson.

The fight, which followed a harmony plea by newly elected State Chairman Edwin F. Jaeckle, is expected to reduce Dewey's New York State support at the convention from an estimated 86 delegates to about 60.

Simpson is leader of New York

Mystery Blast Jars D.C. Homes

Families Thrown From Beds; Explosion Heard for a Mile

A house occupied by three women and two children at 1324 Harvard street northwest was rocked early today by a mysterious blast which shattered windows in a large part of the block and was heard more than a mile away. Families nearby told police they were thrown from their beds.

The front door was torn from its hinges, a bay window beside the brick facade was blown in and a gaping hole torn in the floor of a balcony under the window.

The home was occupied by Mrs. Edna M. Holland, a teacher at Armstrong High School, and her mother, Mrs. Mary Miles, an Interior Department employe, and another woman and two children. Mrs. Holland had been at church and was just about to enter the building when the explosion occurred. She became hysterical.

Wallace Bragg, a gasoline attendant, was entering his home across

Single D. C. Girls Face Lonely Lives Bravely, Dr. Hart Says

But He Urges Women to 'Make Marriage a Business'

Lonely Washington women, "frustrated in their normal biological destiny," should be credited with courage of a rare sort in facing with determination the prospect of mateless lives.

This analysis of a typical Washington problem came yesterday from Dr. Hornell Hart, Duke University sociologist and lecturer on happiness, a few minutes before he spoke on "Life Should Be Thrilling" in the Agriculture Graduate School.

His audience was one chiefly of women Government workers.

Allies Agree To Buy 2,500 U. S. Planes

Consent to Share Cost of Developing Later Models; Order Totals $500,000,000

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Allies purchasing mission concluded arrangements here yesterday for the immediate purchase of 2,500 warplanes to cost approximately $500,000,000.

Reluctantly they bowed to an Administration ultimatum that the Allies share the cost of developing later model craft for our Army, and prepared to sign contracts for three types of new 400-mile-an-hour pursuit ships.

Later, additional orders are to be placed for from 2,500 to 3,000 light bombers and other types, it was said, running the total to be spent to $1,000,000,000.

New Funds Discussed

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt discussed with Congressional and Naval leaders the possibility of asking Congress for additional funds this session for stepping up the Naval building program.

Attending the conference were Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, and Chairmen Walsh and Vinson of the Senate and House Naval Affairs Committees. Afterwards, Walsh told reporters that another meeting would be held soon to determine whether to ask additional funds to start work on a few more warships.

$18,000,000 to Be Sought

Officials thought that about $18,000,000 would be sought to begin a new building program contemplated under an authorization bill now pending in the Senate. Walsh said the President expressed general approval of the $963,000,000 Navy appropriation bill reported to the Senate this week, and the $653,000,000 authorization measure which would add 43 ships and 1,000 warplanes to the Fleet.

Arthur Purvis, head of the Allied mission, protested strenuously against having to pay part of the cost of retooling factories for the later models to be delivered to the American Army. Secretary Morgenthau, head of the Government aircraft coordinating committee, however, adopted a take-it-or-leave-it stand, and Purvis finally agreed.

The Army had insisted that as this Government had paid the cost of developing the planes released to the Allies, the latter should bear the cost of the new jigs, dies and other materials necessary for production

Poor Little Oscar! Divorce Breaks Up Home of Eye-Bug

By the Associated Press

San Jose, Calif., April 12.—A dispute over an "eye-bug" affectionately known as "Oscar" was settled amicably today in the divorce trial of Clifford Hayes, Palo Alto lumberman.

Superior Judge R. R. Syer granted a divorce to Evelyn Orme Hayes and gave the "eye-bug" to Hayes.

Mrs. Hayes said her husband gave her the bug at their wedding in 1934. Hayes countered that he "attached great sentimental value to Oscar" because he had belonged to his grandfather.

Oscar is about the size of a pinhead and wears a white shell. Attorney Arnold Rumwell explained that the bug hibernates in a matchbox filled with sugar until he is awakened by several drops of vinegar.

Then, Rumwell said, Oscar is placed in a human eye where he obligingly swims around and removes particles irritating the eye. That done, he is returned to his sugar and promptly goes back to sleep.

Rumwell offered to have Oscar demonstrate on Judge Syer. The judge demurred with the remark, "the court will assume you were sober when you saw Oscar perform."

Nazis Warn Allies After Rail Attack

Station Bombing May Force Similar Action on British Isles, Germans Say

By C. Brooks Peters
Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, April 12.—Germany warned today that she may be forced to alter the commands to her air force and order it to attack objectives other than ships and antiaircraft defenses on the British Isles.

The immediate occasion for the warning was an alleged attack by British planes on a "small" railroad station somewhere on the southeastern coast of Schleswig-Holstein. The British are said here to have dropped several bombs, one of which damaged a sport field near the station, while the detonation of another near the railway is alleged to have broken windows in the station. No one was reported injured.

The railroad station, the Germans declare, is located 45 to 60 miles from the nearest sizable community and not in the neighborhood of any shipping center. They failed, however, even when specifically asked, to reveal the name of the station at which the incident took place.

First Such Attack

This is the first time, it is said here, that a German transportation line has been attacked. Should a repetition of this sort of incident occur, the Germans assert it will demonstrate that it was a "planned action" and "for Germany a wholly new situation in the conduct of its aerial warfare against England will be given. "The Reich," the German news agency statement adds, "will then immediately take necessary action."

This warning to Great Britain moreover is played up in the press. And the German editors quote a passage from Chancellor Hitler's speech before the Reichstag September 1, 1939, in which he stated:

"From now on, bombs will be returned with bombs. Whoever fights with poison, will be fought with poison. Whoever withdraws from a humane conduct of war cannot expect from us that we will do other than to take the same."

Precedent Set

The Germans do not seemingly question the legitimacy of communication lines as military objectives for airplanes. What they claim, however, is that should the British repeat such an attack, they would set a precedent which would justify the Germans—in their alleged poi-

Capt. Lind, Navy Budget Officer, Falls Dead at Pier

Capt. Wallace L. Lind, 52, budget officer of the United States Navy, fell dead in Baltimore last night as he walked up the steps of a pier to greet his son who was returning from a five-year stay in South America.

At Johns Hopkins Hospital, where the body was taken, doctors said death probably was due to a heart attack.

Before his assignment to the budget office in Washington last July, he had been commanding officer on various battleships. Most recently he commanded the ruiser Omaha, flagship of the European Squadron.

During the World War he was executive officer on one of the ships used to transport American troops. Serving under him was Joseph A. Gainard, later captain of the City of Flint. Capt. Lind and Gainard were associated on various assignments, and Capt. Lind escorted Capt. Gainard about the city when the Flint's captain was a visitor here.

Planes Battled Above Car As Woman Envoy Fled Oslo

Shrapnel Dented Auto; Hid in Woods All Night From Air Raid

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, United States Minister to Norway, reached the little town of Hoelkef (Holjes), Sweden, on the Norwegian-Swedish frontier yesterday after a narrow escape from death by German aerial bombs during a flight from Oslo with King Haakon VII and the Norwegian government.

She reported that the King was alive and well when she left him, although suffering from the strain of events which followed the German invasion of his country.

The 70-year-old woman diplomat escaped bombing three times—at Hamar, whence the Norwegian government fled as the Germans entered Oslo, at Elverum and at Nybergsund.

Following is Mrs. Harriman's diary of her experiences:

Finnskoega, on the Swedish-Norwegian Frontier, Saturday, April 13.

"I came to the border because all telephone and telegraph connections were down where I was, at Elverum, after the raid, and I had to communicate with United States Minister Sterling at Stockholm.

"I shall begin with Oslo on Tuesday, April 9.

"After the air raid alarm which awakened me, I was called by telephone and asked if we could take over the British Legation as German warships were approaching Oslo.

"I immediately went down to my office, called the foreign office and my story was confirmed. This was between 3 a. m. and 4 a. m. and I was told that the government would inform me of their plans later.

"When Legation Secretary Raymond Cox arrived we dispatched a cable to the State Department in Washington giving the facts.

"Very soon the French Minister called and made the same request as the British.

Consuls' Families Assembled

"We called the consuls and they came to the legation quickly, having instructed their families to follow.

"I spoke again to the foreign office and was told that the government was going by special train to Hamar and they thought it would be well for me to go along.

"It had been decided that it would be well for me to follow the government in case Oslo was cut off from communication with the outside world and I would be in a position to keep Washington informed of the Norwegian government's activities.

"Then the message came that there was not sufficient time to reach the train the government was taking at 7 a. m. Meantime, the wives and children and members of the legation and consulate arrived and 20 of us breakfasted between 5 a. m. and 6 a. m.

"Having found it impossible to cable Washington, I telephoned the Stockholm Legation and informed them what was happening so they could relay it to Washington.

"After breakfast we had to go to the air raid shelters.

"German planes were circling overhead and Legation Secretary Cox generously decided to remain in charge of the legation with Consuls Preston, Kelsey and Perkins.

"By 9:45 a. m. all those who were going were in the autos and we left for Hamar in a procession of four cars.

Plane Fight Overhead

"As we approached Lillestroem there was a sudden smack of machine-gun fire not very high overhead and a Norwegian plane was chasing a Heinkel bomber.

"We moved slowly forward in a tightly packed line of cars and were glad to get out of range.

"As it was, the third car ahead of us was struck by falling shrapnel and was dented.

"As we passed an army field near Lillestroem, we saw it had been bombed and the hangars were burning.

"I believe the Norwegians succeeded in saving the airplanes.

"Villagers crowded the street through which we passed.

"Cars and cars and cars and many people on bicycles, some of them English friends of mine, streamed along.

No Poverty There

"I reflected how different the appearance of these evacuees was from those in most countries. Here was no real poverty to be seen—there never is. It is so pathetic that these people who had solved the riddle of living with fair distribution to all should have to have this tragedy happen to them.

"At Hamar we were told that the royal court of Norway and the British and French ministers and others had proceeded to Hosbjor as all available rooms had been taken by the government and members of the storting (parliament). So I continued on.

"We arrived at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, finding all members of

'Technical Enemies'

Britain Seizes 20 Danish Ships; Others Flee to Neutral Havens

By the United Press

London (Saturday), April 13—Great Britain has started seizing Danish merchant ships as "technical enemies" as a result of the German invasion of Denmark in order to prevent them from being used by the Germans, it was stated authoritatively early today.

Twenty Danish ships whose tonnage totals 26,000 have been seized as prizes of war in British ports and will be requisitioned by the Allies.

Customs officials detained nine Danish fishing boats Thursday at Grimsby.

The masters and crews will be permitted to continue on their ships if they agree to sail under an Allied flag.

The decision was taken, it was explained by a spokesman, as result of the German invasion of Denmark.

"So far as the owners are concerned, compensation will in due course be arranged for the use of the ships although it will be necessary to arrange terms so that no benefit can pass to German control during the war.

"Naturally no details of this can be announced.

"It will be seen that it is to the benefit of all interested parties that these ships should come into Allied possession because the alternative is that they must take shelter in neutral ports and remain immobilized for the remainder of the war."

By the Associated Press

New York shipping sources yesterday had reported that England and France were preparing to seize the ships of Denmark's modern merchant fleet and, in anticipation of such a move, Danish officials had directed ship skippers to seek refuge in neutral ports.

Steps were taken to reach an agreement but there was no immediate indication of the progress. Henrik de Kauffmann, Danish Min-

Ring Closing

By Peter C. Rhodes,
United Press Staff Writer

Norwegian Army Headquarters, Narvik Front, April 12.—British destroyers have sunk every ship in Narvik harbor, it was said authoritatively today and the German garrison, hemmed between British sea and land forces and Norwegian troops closing a ring around Narvik, was described as cut off.

Reports reaching Norwegian headquarters said the British had sunk five more German destroyers.

[British or other official confirmation of this information was lacking. London reported only Tuesday's unsuccessful naval attack on Narvik and Berlin announced yesterday that two more British destroyers were lost at Narvik, indicating they had been sunk by mines.]

British Across Bay

Persons coming from Narvik said British troops have reached Ankenes, across the bay from Narvik, and a British base was reported to have been set up midway down Ofotenfjord at the village of Ballangen.

The British destroyers were said to have sunk British, German and neutral merchant ships in their clean sweep of the harbor.

Most crews of the sunken vessels had been brought ashore by the Germans when they took the town, but eyewitnesses who came through the Norwegian lines said they had seen men trying to clamber up the sides of the fjord, many of them bleeding.

Norwegian soldiers and others who left the city said that after Tuesday's battle of Narvik, when the British destroyers were beaten off by the Germans, a new battle was fought on Wednesday and the British scored a victory, landing a fairly large military force farther down Ofotenfjord immediately after the attack.

German Lines Thin

The British began their second attack at 5:35 a. m., these persons said.

G. O. P. Talking Of Glenn Frank As Keynoter

Author of Program Report Linked With Stassen in Forecasts

By Robert C. Albright

Dr. Glenn Frank, author of the Republican National Committee's recent program report, last night was being mentioned along with Gov. Harold Stassen of Minnesota in a small field of candidates for keynoter of the Republican National Committee.

Many informed Republicans believed the choice would lie between these two men when the committee on arrangements for the G. O. P. national convention meets in Philadelphia on Tuesday.

At the same time it was indicated that House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, could have the post of permanent convention chairman virtually for the asking. Martin, regarded by many as more than a "dark horse" Presidential possibility himself, may not wish convention office.

Dr. Frank, former president of the University of Wisconsin, has figured in the speculation for temporary chairman and convention keynoter only since his program committee report proposing sweeping revision of farm, business and fiscal policies, and calling for abandonment of "fatalism of outlook."

Report Praised

Frank, two years in the G. O. P. doghouse while his report was in preparation, heard his report praised as "liberal and forward looking" by Capitol Republicans, and as "sound and constructive" by former Gov. Alf Landon.

Stassen, 33-year-old, 6-foot-3 Governor of Minnesota, is the keynote choice of many of his party's liberal wing, who regard him as Presidential timber in 1944, when he will have put on the necessary years. They cite his successful State administration, colorful eloquence and accent on youth.

Both Democratic and Republican statisticians, meanwhile, were waiting for final figures on Tuesday's Illinois primaries as spokesmen for both parties claimed Midwest trends in their favor.

Republicans pointed out that the last reported Roosevelt total—1,068,831 votes—included ballots from 410 more precincts than were counted in New York District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey's last reported aggregate of 825,219.

G. O. P. Still Hopeful

Dewey votes from 1,038 precincts still remained to be counted while the Democratic count was only 626 precincts short. Republican Party henchmen were hopeful final returns would show a different picture, with the G. O. P. vote total more closely in line with the Democratic. Democratic spokesmen stuck by assertions that the Illinois trend was Democratic, and said later figures would bear this out.

Last Associated Press figures last night showed that in 7,708 precincts out of 8,336, President Roosevelt polled 1,068,831 votes and Vice President Garner, 175,825. In 7,298 precincts out of 8,336, Dewey's count stood at 825,219.

The President's totals still remained far below the 1,416,411 cast for him in the Illinois primaries four years ago. Dewey's appeared likely to exceed the 910,795 total cast for both Senator Borah and Col. Knox in 1936.

So far as the Republican Presidential race is concerned, Tuesday's Nebraska and Illinois primaries virtually wound up the individual State contests between Republican candidates. Score—Dewey victories over Vandenberg in Wisconsin and Nebraska, plus Illinois' uncontested vote for the New Yorker.

No other such contest was in sight, and deadlines for filings are passed in all primary States except West Virginia and Maryland. Only a remote possibility of a Taft-Dewey primary clash still remained. Taft had promised to file in West Virginia if Dewey challenged him there.

Other developments:

Chairman Farley of the Democratic National Committee ordered a subcommittee study on a plan for improving the system by which delegates and alternates to national conventions are chosen. Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, recently urged that a convention resolution to this effect be complied with. Named to the subcommittee by Farley were Senator Green, of Rhode Island, chairman; Louis M. Jiggitts, of Mississippi; James A. March, of Colorado; Representative A. D. Folger, of North Carolina, and Ramsay M. Walker, of Idaho.

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Idaho, announced his support of Senator Wheeler, of Montana, for the Democratic nomination for President because "he would never permit this country to become involved in a European war."

Former Senator Frelinghuysen (Republican), of New Jersey, announced his support of Senator Taft, of Ohio, for the Republican Presidential nomination, although his home State of New Jersey is regarded as Dewey territory.

State Republican conventions in Missouri yesterday chose 12 of Missouri's 30 delegates to the G. O. P. national convention, all uninstructed. Four of the district meetings indorsed Representative Dewey Short, of Missouri, as favorite son for the Vice Presidential nomination.

Iowa's Republican State convention yesterday indorsed Hanford MacNider, former national commander of the American Legion, former United States Minister to Canada and former Assistant Secretary of War, as Iowa's favorite son candidate for President. The State's 22 delegates later voted to do all in their power to promote MacNider's cause at the convention. Harrison E. Spangler was elected by the delegation to his third four-year term as Republican national committeeman.

Bankers Call SEC Proposal 'Unworkable'

Investment Trust Spokesmen Concede Regulation Welcome

By the Associated Press

Two members of the investment trust industry told a Senate Banking Subcommittee yesterday that they would welcome Federal regulation of the business, but contended legislation proposed by the Securities Commission was unworkable and went "far beyond reasonable regulation."

The witnesses, first to speak for the hearings on the SEC proposal, were Arthur H. Bunker, executive vice president of the Lehman Corporation, and Cyril J. C. Quinn, vice president of Tri-Continental Corporation and associated companies. They said they represented the so-called "closed end" type of investment trust.

Both men conceded there had been in the industry in the past "abuses" which should be outlawed, but contended the SEC had given an exaggerated picture of conditions by selecting the worst examples for citation to the committee and failing to give adequate account of the performance of companies not guilty of the practices.

Industrial Capital Cited

Bunker told the committee that the investment trust industry remained "perhaps the most important organized reservoir" of new venture capital and urged that "nothing should be one in the name of regulation and control that will immobilize this great dynamic pool of capital or which will impair its ability to invest intelligently in American industry."

Asserting that the SEC's study of investment trusts had not taken into account the shrinkage of all security values which took place while the industry was in its infancy, Bunker contended the commission's conclusions were "unrealistic and give no true picture whatever of the actual comparative performance achieved."

In response to questions, Bunker expressed the opinion that "looting" and other practices condemned by the SEC had been responsible for no more than 10 per cent of an estimated $3,000,000,000 shrinkage in assets held by investment trusts. He added the loss from this cause in the last eight years had not been more than 1 per cent of the total assets of the business.

Quinn Notes Ambiguity

Quinn, dealing with the proposed legislation in more detail, said "some sections are pretty ambiguous, some places are absolutely contradictory and some places are so vague it is difficult to comment on them."

"There is hardly a paragraph and certainly not a section that doesn't require revision."

Quinn testified that he approved a requirement for registration of investment companies and classification of the types of companies, but he called the classification proposed in the bill "illogical and absolutely misleading."

He also urged a requirement that stockholders' consent be required before any basic change in management policy could be adopted, prohibition of short sales and participation in pools, outlawing of certain transactions between a company and its officers and affiliates, full publicity for company affairs and other provisions.

He said, however, that he did not believe the Government should "put the industry in a straitjacket or treat investors like incompetent children."

Roosevelt Signs Bill to Keep Trade Program 3 Years More

Pacts Hailed as Brake on Dislocation Of War and Possibility of Dumping In U. S. Market of Cheap Products

By Felix Cotten.
Post Staff Writer

Administration sources yesterday envisioned the prospect that the reciprocal trade agreement may be used as a brake against the effect of war dislocations and a possible heavy influx of foreign goods at the close of the European war.

The act under which agreements have been negotiated with 21 countries was extended for an additional three years yesterday when President Roosevelt signed the bitterly fought extension bill.

Secretary of State Hull, father of the trade agreements program, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, who gave it his support during the period of trial, and Senator Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, and Representative Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, who piloted the extension bill through Congress, were present at the signing.

Each received from the President's hand one of the four wooden pens with which he affixed his signature.

The President said the program had brought "demonstrable benefits to the Nation as a whole and to every interest directly concerned" without inflicting injury on any group of producers.

Much of the opposition in Congress, he declared, seems to have been based on "unwarranted fears as to what might happen in the future."

"There is nothing," he added, "more destructive of public welfare than the conjuring up of groundless fears for the sole purpose of discrediting a constructive policy which is invulnerable to attack on any legitimate basis."

In reply to criticism of procedure used in negotiating agreements, he emphasized that all interested Government agencies worked together on the agreements and that every opportunity was afforded persons affected to present their views.

"Under this procedure," he continued, "all recommendations made to me with regard to trade agreements represent the collective judgment of all agencies of the Government concerned with any phase of the matter, based upon most painstaking study of all pertinent information. I have never known an example of more effective collaboration among the various divisions of the Government and between the Government and the general public for the good of the entire Nation.

"Needless to say, this procedure, which has worked so well in the past, should be continued in the future."

He said also: "The action of the Congress in continuing the operation of the trade agreements program is expressive of the determination on the part of our people to retain unimpaired, for the next three years, this powerful instrument for promoting our national economic well-being and for strengthening the foundations of stable peace."

So far as the future of the trade agreements program is concerned, it was conceded that, while the war lasts, opportunities for extension of the program are not large or promising.

The only tangible moves now being made are desultory negotiations for an agreement with Chile and for a supplementary agreement with Belgium. Obvious difficulties exist in the case of the latter country, which is in the middle of the war zone. Chile, although thousands of miles away, has felt the shocks of war in its foreign trade.

The State Department intends, despite war hindrances, to watch for opportunities to extend the program to additional countries.

One possible use while the war lasts of the reciprocal trade agreement powers, official sources said, will be to make adjustments in existing agreements to meet war conditions.

State Department experts are expected, now that the powers have been extended, to try to make some advance blueprints of the type of agreement under which administrative objectives might be most readily achieved.

Immediately after the close of the war, however, it is said, it may be necessary to use the powers as a brake against the dumping of large quantities of cheap foreign goods. When the war ends, it is said, possibly 20,000,000 or 30,000,000 men engaged in the business of war will return to commercial and industrial activity.

The reciprocal trade powers, it is said, thus might become a protective instrument pending the negotiation of new agreements intended to reopen world trade.

This might be done, it is pointed out, by puttin a "ceiling" on imports. Any action taken would be through negotiation, it is said, and thus other countries would be put on notice in a conciliatory way of what the United States deemed necessary to protect its interests.

County and is expected to control the 24 delegates from that county. He probably will be joined by several up-State leaders who are supporting the candidacy of Frank E. Gannett, Rochester publisher.

Dewey supporters sought Simpson's ouster because of his coolness toward the Dewey candidacy. They contend that Simpson's opposition will be less effective in other States if he is stripped of his national committee membership.

Simpson lost little time in outlining his stand.

"I regret," he said, "that the Dewey managers saw fit to start a purge within the party.

"However, it has cleared the air. Their action was caused by my lack of enthusiasm for the Dewey candidacy. In my opinion, the Republican and independent voters of New York City have not become satisfied that Mr. Dewey is the best available candidate.

"Republicans will appreciate that I am now, of course, relieved from any further favorite son support of Mr. Dewey."

The anti-Simpson resolution was adopted by vote of 209 to 69.

More Pension Pay Asked for Higher Paid U. S. Workers

Representative Barry (Democrat), of New Pork, introduced a bill providing for pensions of not less than half pay for Civil Service employes who retire after 35 years' service. The pension would be based on the average salary for any consecutive five years.

"The present retirement law is in the interest of the low-paid employe," Barry explained, "and many of them get more than half of their basic retirement pay upon retirement.

"Yet those with incomes in the higher brackets are limited to a $1,200 pension, although their salaries may have been four times that amount."

Senate Votes To Add Three Appeals Judges

Reed's Lone Fight, Tangle With Barkley Are in Vain

By John B. Oakes

Despite a charge that "the courts are being packed with unnecessary and useless judges,' the Senate yesterday voted to add three new seats to the United States Circuit Courts of Appeals.

An increase of one judge in the Sixth Circuit (Michigan, Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee) was approved after Senator Reed (Republican), of Kansas, had singlehandedly attacked the proposal in debate that engaged him in a lively tangle with Majority Leader Barkley.

Thereupon, without argument from Reed, the Senate voted to add two judges to the Eighth Circuit (Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas, Nebraska and the Dakotas), although an increase of only one had been suggested in the House-approved bill the Senate was considering.

Provides Six District Judges

The measure, which probably will be passed by the Senate Monday, also provides for six new district judges in California, New Jersey, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, New York and Florida.

The judges of the Sixth Circuit disapproved the proposed addition, Senator Reed said. He declared he wanted to know if they had "as much influence in keeping additional judges from being appointed as the senior Senator from Kentucky has in getting one appointed."

Protesting that "the mere fact that I happen to live in that circuit is a coincidence," Senator Barkley went on to assert that the judges in the Sixth Circuit had been able to improve the condition of their docket last year only "by working day and night all year without a vacation."

Barbour Protests Attack

Senator Barbour (Republican), of New Jersey, protested against Reed's assault on the bill as a whole. When Senator Smathers (Democrat), of New Jersey, came to Barbour's defense, Reed declared:

"It takes a lot of gall to come in here and ask for an additional judge for a district where a vacancy has occurred for 18 months due to the inability of the Senator from New Jersey and Boss Frank Hague of New Jersey to decide who the additional judge should be.

"I think it takes a lot of nerve to come out of the wheat fields of Kansas and decide whether New Jersey needs another judge," Smathers replied.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt nominated James P. Leamy, of Vermont, to be United States District Judge for that State.

Dunbar Club to Exhibit

Six members of "We, the Chemists Club" of Dunbar High School, and Antoine McCoy, 18, of the Chemical Cantors, of the same school, will have exhibits at the twelfth American Institute of Science and Engineering fair opening tomorrow at Education Hall of the American Museum of Natural History in New York.

Vague Memory Conceals 'Leak' On FCC Order

R. C. A. Man Forgets Who Told Him Of Television Ruling

By James D. Secrest

The Federal Communications Commission was balked last night in an effort to trace the source of a "leak" on the television order of February 29 as it concluded a week's hearing on the effects of the order authorizing limited commercialization of visual programs beginning September 1.

Robert M. Pritchard, press relations man for the Radio Corporation of America, was summoned by Chairman James L. Fly to explain how he had been able to tip off RCA of the original order's contents several hours before its release.

Asserting that his recollection was somewhat hazy, Pritchard finally concluded he had obtained the information from a newspaperman. Having been a newspaperman himself for 20 years, he declined to name the reporter.

Question Dropped

Frederick I. Thompson, Alabama newspaper publisher and a member of the commission, questioned the right of the press agent to fall back upon the prerogative of a reporter, but the commission decided to drop the matter on the ground that Pritchard was not sure which newspaperman had given him the tip.

An early adjustment of the row between the FCC and the R. C. A. and a reinstatement of the original order, perhaps with modifications, was predicted in radio quarters as the hearing ended despite the fact that President Roosevelt at his morning press conference came to the defense of the FCC.

R. C. A. indicated a willingness to meet the FCC half way and adopt a suggestion made earlier in the week to David Sarnoff, R. C. A. president, by Senator Burton K. Wheeler. Manton Davis, R. C. A. vice president and general counsel, told the commission that R. C. A. would alter the design of its television receivers to tune in any type of television transmitter the FCC decided to license.

Roosevelt Backs FCC

Previously Sarnoff had told the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee he did not think the extra expense of $20 to $40 was warranted. R. C. A. television receivers now are designed to receive only transmissions on 441 lines, the standard adopted by a majority of the manufacturing industry.

President Roosevelt said he thought the FCC was doing the right thing in trying to prevent a monopolistic control of the television industry at the outset.

Television development should proceed along the same lines as radio, where competition between networks and stations exists, the President said. In radio any receiver can tune in any standard transmitter.

41,000 Troops Are Mobilized For Georgia Games

The War Department announced yesterday that 41,000 troops have been completely mobilized at Fort Benning, Ga., for the first war games in history involving a full Army corps.

The force, consisting of the First, Fifth and Sixth divisions and special units, will engage in two weeks' preliminary maneuvers, and then meet another Army corps, May 9-26, on a 2,000,000-acre battleground in Louisiana and Texas. The latter force of 25,000 men will concentrate April 25, in east Texas.

All Army special schools, it was said, are being closed early this year to permit students and faculty to take part in the maneuvers, which the department said would "mark the high point in the history of Regular Army training."

D. C. Lets Contract To Remodel Ward For Use as Clinic

The District Commissioners said yesterday they had awarded a contract for $30,720 to remodel the old contagious ward at Providence Hospital for use as an out-patient health clinic. Lee T. Turner, of this city, received the award.

It was pointed out the ward has not been used in five years as a contagious ward. In 1906, the District built the ward, but it is not now under the supervision of the municipal government.

The clinic will be operated by the hospital and will treat patients from the welfare and health departments.

Murray Urges U. S. to Compel Job Creation

Industrial Leaders Should Be Drafted, Plan Drawn, He Says

Industrial leaders should be "drafted" for service in a war on unemployment, Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizers Committee, asserted here yesterday.

The Scottish-born labor leader proposed to the Temporary National Economic Committee that Congress adopt a joint resolution empowering the President to "commandeer" the Nation's great industrialists.

"We should say to them, 'You are citizens of the United States and you have a job to do to save the greatest democracy in the world,'" Murray declared.

Long-Range Plan Urged

These industrialists would sit down with leaders of Government, labor and farm groups and evolve a long-range economic plan for the country, he explained.

The sharp-tongued C. I. O. executive, who said he spoke for 500,000 steel workers, demanded that Congress regulate the introduction of labor-saving machinery and mass production methods for the protection of displaced workers.

He suggested reduction of the maximum work-week to 30 hours "at prevailing earnings or more," compulsory dismissal wages for workers displaced by technological advances and a Federal vocational training program to prepare these workers for new jobs.

Steel Rolling Mill Cited

The shock of technological unemployment could be cushioned through collective bargaining in many plants where union contracts are in force, Murray said, but Federal action is essential to regulate such industry-wide developments as introduction of the automatic steel rolling mill.

Murray contended that development of the automatic rolling mill has displaced 38,000 steel workers, while nearly 50,000 more are threatened with unemployment in the near future.

He said the automatic rolling mill has dotted the industrial valleys of Pennsylvania and Ohio with "ghost towns," where more than half the population is on relief, where real estate values have decayed and municipal services deteriorated.

Can't Find Figures

When Murray and Senator Joseph C O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, were unable to find certain statistics bearing on productivity per man-hours of employment in the steel industry, the union spokesmen blurted:

"I don't care so much about those figures. The figures are in New Castle, Bradford, Martin's Ferry, Duquesne and Homestead—they are the figures of human beings walking the streets, out of work."

Statistics marshaled by Murray contrasted sharply with those introduced into the record Thursday by Charles R. Hook, president of the American Rolling Mill Company. Hook had stated that total employment in the steel industry rose from 399,914 in 1925 to 502,417 in 1937.

Murray said the impact of technological changes in the steel industry "did not begin to make itself felt until 1937, the year where Mr. Hook's figures stop."

Steel Employe Called

Referring to Hooks display before the TNEC of two automobile fenders, one a hand mill and the other an automatic rolling mill product, Murray said, "I want to submit to the committee a piece of human evidence."

He called to the stand Michael Russell, 48, who worked 32 years in the U. S. Steel plant at New Castle, Pa., before losing his job in 1937 when the corporation shut down its hand rolling mills.

Russell said that in 1938 he found a job as an acetylene welder. When he told his prospective employer his age, however, the foreman replied, "Hell, man, you're too old to start work for this company."

No Plans to Help, He Says

Murray said he knew of no plant in the entire steel industry which has mapped out plans "to help thousands of displaced workers like Mike Russell."

The labor leader charged that "no sense of social responsibility has come into the hearts of the industrialists," adding that he "doesn't see anybody in Congress getting up and waving his arms about unemployment, either."

"It may be that there just isn't any political sex appeal in the problem."

Senator O'Mahoney replied that he had found that "the great majority in industry and labor want to cooperate in solving this problem, but a small group at each extreme spend so much time in name-calling that the reasonable 95 per cent can't make themselves heard."

Committee for Majority

"This committee wants to be a microphone for the majority group," the chairman said.

Murray asserted that the country's present condition could lead to "the greatest prosperity or the craziest national economy ever recorded in the history of any civilized nation."

"We aim to secure the participation of labor in the economic benefits of technological changes and to eliminate the devastating consequences of such changes on workers, their families and entire communities," Murray said.

"The record of the steel industry during the past decade in abandoning entire plants or large departments of plants in one knockout blow reveals an ignorance of social conditions that defies description."

The technology hearings will be resumed at 10:30 a. m. Monday, with the committee turning its attention to the railroad industry. First witnesses will be J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, and Dr. J. H. Parmelee, the director of research.

Pennsylvania Jury Acquits 8 Democrats

Lawrence, Bashore Among Those Cleared Of State Pay Roll Plot

Harrisburg, Pa., April 12 (AP).—Eight Pennsylvania Democrats charged with conspiracy to assess the State pay roll for political contributions were acquitted late today.

The jury—all Republicans—had deliberated little more than four hours.

Foremost among the defendants were State Democratic Chairman David L. Lawrence and State Secretary Ralph M. Bashore, both members of the cabinet in the administration of Gov. George H. Earle. It was supplanted by Republicans in 1939. The six other defendants were Democratic county workers.

It was the second acquittal in successive trials for Lawrence. He had been freed of a charge of blackmail and extortion for political purposes. All the indictments resulted from a grand jury investigation of charges made during the 1938 primary campaign.

Plans Are Ready On Restoration Of Appomattox

Lynchburg, Va., April 12 (AP).—Park service officials were ready today—75 years to the week since Lee's army surrendered—to start the work of restoring the tiny, all but abandoned community of Appomattox Courthouse.

In making known that H. A. Gurney has been named acting historical technician with headquarters at Appomattox, the service said that the long-scale task of building a monument at the surrender ground will be "an attempt to recapture the atmosphere of the little town as it was in the '60's."

A tentative master plan, details of which will require years to carry out, calls for the rerouting of the present highway to follow as far as possible the track of the little dirt road over which Lee's ragged men trudged in their attempt to reach Lynchburg.

Piercy Given 2-Year Term In Shooting

Defendant Faces White Slavery Trial Late This Month

For shooting at a 17-year-old girl he is alleged to have brought here from Staunton, Va., to be a white slave, James R. Piercy, 29, was sentenced to two to three years in the penitentiary by Justice Peyton Gordon of the District Court yesterday.

The girl charged Piercy with beating and threatening her. She said that February 7, when she refused to join a plot to rob one of her patrons, Piercy followed her to 507 L street northwest and fired a shot at her.

Justice Gordon commented that there was more to the case than a mere shooting. Taking cognizance of the other charge against Piercy, the court excoriated him as a man who brought the girl to Washington for immoral purposes and made her walk across a bridge from Virginia, with a view to escaping punishment for white slavery.

The shooting on L street, said Judge Gordon, was part of the beating and abuse by which the girl said she was terrorized. The court conceded, however, that the shooting charge was based on the same transaction as the charges of carrying a concealed weapon and destroying private property (a taxicab window which was shattered by the bullet) on which Piercy was sentenced by the Police Court to a year in jail. The penitentiary term will be concurrent with the jail sentence.

Assistant District Attorney Krouse said that Piercy probably would be tried for white slavery the last of this month. The possible penalty is $5,000 fine and five years in the penitentiary.

Following Piercy's trial, Abraham Blum, waiter, is due to be tried on a charge of pandering.

Senate to Ask Court About Cotton Claims

The Senate, which has long argued whether to allow $4,261,768 to a group of cotton cooperatives in connection with the old Farm Board's operations, decided yesterday, 34 to 29, to ask the Court of Claims for its opinion.

The allowances were proposed by Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, as compensation for losses claimed by 12 cooperatives.

Pan American Peace Praised By F. E. Hasler

He Expresses Hope World Will Follow Example of West

Hope that "misguided nations, led by false, fanatic prophets," may soon find the peace and good will now shared by the 21 American republics was expressed yesterday by Frederick E. Hasler, president of the Pan American Society, Inc.

He spoke at a luncheon at the Carlton Hotel tendered by the society to the governing board of the Pan American Union. Undersecretary of State Welles was an honor guest at the function, part of the union's golden jubilee celebration.

Contrasts Hemispheres

"One of the finest accomplishments of the Pan American Union," said Hasler, a New York banker, "has been an acceptance of the fact by the members of our family of nations that for the preservation and protection of each and all, the larger and stronger nations must help the smaller and weaker ones."

Contrasting the peace of the Western Hemisphere with strife and destruction in Europe, he added:

Across the ocean we see the antithesis of our Christian ideal—the small, defenseless nations ravaged and economically enslaved by tyranny, ruthless ambition and craving for power.

Castro Makes Response

"Let us thank God," Hasler concluded, "that the nations of the Americas are free from the tyrannies which have cursed other parts of the world."

A brief response thanking the society for its sentiments was made by Hector David Castro, minister of El Salvador, in behalf of the governing board of the Pan American Union.

Earlier in the day, Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the union, was awarded the 1940 gold medal of the Inter-American Commercial Arbitration Commission, at ceremonies in the patio of the Pan American Union Building.

Dr. Mann Describes Ships That Passed Quietly in Night

Shipping to West Africa to collect wild animals for Washington's Zoo, every day was July 4 on the outbound voyage, according to Dr. William M. Mann, director of the Zoo.

First details of the arrival of the Mann expedition in Liberia were made public yesterday by the Smithsonian Institution, cosponsor of the animal hunt with Firestone Tire & Rubber Co.

"All the top decks, hatch covers and sides of the ship have brilliantly painted American flags on them and these are illuminated at night, as on July 4 around the Washington Monument at home," Dr. Mann wrote.

"This is quite in contrast to ships that have passed us in the moonlight, sailing without lights and not answering our radio greetings—I suppose for fear of giving away their positions."

He said he has established contacts in Liberia with missionaries "who talk casually of places that to me have always spelled romance and excitement. Elephants to them are merely an annoyance. They root up the gardens. Leopards come in sometimes at night and claw at missionaries or their natives."

New Drug Hits Disease Like 'Machine Gun'

Cousin of Sulfanilamide Attacks Germs With Little Regard for Kind

By Howard W. Blakeslee

Associated Press Science Editor.

Cincinnati, Ohio, April 12.—A new medicinal chemical, sulfadiazine, which in animal disease experiments attacks like a machine gun, was announced today to the American Chemical Society.

Most medicinal chemicals are like rifle bullets in that they hit only one class of disease germs. Sulfanilamide, for example, although one of the most sensational discoveries of this century, attacks only streptococci, one of the main classes of human disease organisms.

But sulfadiazine—made of vitamins and sulfanilamide—attacks both streptococci and another common cause of human ills, the staphylococci, which appear in pus-forming infections. It also kills pneumonia germs.

The new chemical was discovered and synthesized by the American Cyanamid Co., one of the large industrial chemical concerns, whose name comes from the cyanamid process of extracting gold. It was branched out into many other chemicals.

The synthesis was done in the Stamford, Conn., laboratory and reported by Dr. R. O. Roblin, jr., J. H. Williams, P. S. Winnek and J. P. English. They made sulfadiazine by splitting the molecule of vitamin B-1 and combining one of the halves with sulfanilamide.

B-1 is the nerve vitamin, whose molecular structure was discovered only four years ago.

Agudath Achim Synagogue to Be Opened Tomorrow

An elaborate program has been planned for the opening of the new Agudath Achim Congregation Synagogue and Talmud Torah at 909 Quackenbos street northwest, at 2 p. m. tomorrow. The structure has been built by a congregation that started meeting three years ago in Stansbury Hall.

Nine rabbis will participate in the ceremonies, three cantors will provide music, and greetings will be presented from local organizations and from Jewish War Veterans Post No. 58.

The building committee was composed of Irving Fox, Sol Spivak, Leonard Kaplan and Henry Gold. Rabbis who will participate are Joshua Klavin, Jacob A. Dubrow, M. H. Levinson, Solomon H. Metz, Henry Segal, Henry Silverstone, Zemach Green, Norman Gerstenfeld and Isadore Breslau.

Mrs. Mackay Is Named To Red Cross Post

The District Chapter of the American Red Cross yesterday announced that Mrs. R. C. Mackay, of 1026 Sixteenth street northwest had accepted appointment as acting first vice chairman of the volunteer special services, to succeed Mrs. Philip Young, who resigned.

Mrs. Makay has been a staff assistant since 1937, and is chairman of the Walter Reed unit of the hospital and recreation services. She spent several years in China in Red Cross work.

D. C. Census Isn't Kept Secret, Senator Tobey Tells Reed

The current census—with particular reference to Washington—came in for another rap from Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, yesterday in a telegram to Vergil E. Reed, acting director of the Census Bureau.

Tobey said he had received numerous complaints from Washingtonians that answers to enumerators' questions have been kept anything but secret.

Specifically, he cited two local apartment buildings where counters failed to find residents at home and left blanks to be filled out and turned over to apartment managers for collection by census workers.

These blanks, Tobey charged, were open for any and all to see because envelopes were not provided. As he put it, quoting a woman who complained:

"Everybody saw what everybody else put on the blanks—and are still talking about it."

He also pointed out that among his complaints were those of District residents who asked enumerators for separate census forms which could be filled out and mailed, but were told they "weren't available."

"Will you kindly take immediate action to prevent such loose practices," Tobey telegraphed Reed, "and insure that they do not continue."

Garnett Brown, supervisor of the local count, said he had heard of Tobey's message, but declined to comment. He added that "things here are going along smoothly and we've had very few complaints."

Honors as the first community to file a complete 1940 census count with the Washington headquarters went yesterday to Odessa, Del.

The little town in New Castle County had a count of 391 residents, a gain of 6 over 1930. In the census ten years ago Centertown, Mo., was the first to report.

$35,000 Still To Be Raised For Boys Club

$4,182 Is Tabulated At Luncheon Report In the Cosmos Club

Somehow, somewhere the 623 workers in the Police Boys' Club campaign must dig up $35,000 by Monday night.

That amount is needed for the drive to reach its goal set at $86,000, and the campaign manager, Mack L. Langford, yesterday asked his workers to apply added pressure over the week-end to obtain this subscription from Washington citizens.

Yesterday's luncheon report at the Cosmos Club produced an additional $4,182, which brought the campaign total to $51,886 at present. The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, told the group members they were "doing the work of apostles" in bringing happiness to underprivileged boys.

"Every dollar contributed to this campaign," Bishop Freeman declared, "is a purchase of good insurance against misery and deprivation for handicapped boys."

Gneisenau Sunk Off Oslo, Norse Say

Swedes Tell of Fight; Seven Nazi Vessels Reported Trapped

By Thomas F. Hawkins,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Stockholm, April 12.—Struggling against both time and the invader, Norway's fighting men tried tonight to complete an impenetrable ring of steel around Oslo, their German-conquered capital, where seven Nazi warships are reported bottled up.

With their forces clinging to positions along Oslo Fjord, narrow waterway leading to Oslo, a defense semicircle already was reported established running from Moss, 35 miles to the south, thence east and north to Halden, 60 miles away. To complete the ring fortifications were being thrown up in the broad valleys of the northwest.

Elsewhere, the Norwegian government conceded that the Germans were in control of Kristiansand, on the south coast; Stavanger on the southeast coast; Bergen, on the west coast, and Narvik, on the northern coast.

Military secrecy hid the situation at Trondheim, above Bergen. Fragmentary reports from that port said five German warships, including a pocket battleship, were observed off shore and that the British had concentrated a fierce naval and air attack there.

Swedish Coast Tests Defenses

Stockholm, tonight, lost all telegraphic communication with Oslo.

At the same time the entire Swedish and west coasts were ordered blacked out tonight and tomorrow night to test the nation's antiaircraft preparations.

The sinking of a large vessel of undetermined nationality in the Skagerrack was witnessed during the morning from Stroemstad, Swedish coastal town near the Norwegian border.

For hours before the ship went down in flames heavy cannonading was heard from the direction of the Oslo Fjord entrance. [There was an unconfirmed report in London that the German battleship Gneisenau had been sunk in the fjord, a report later repeated as a fact by the Norwegian high command.]

The Norwegian newspaper Tidenstegn published a communique of the Nazi-sponsored government of Vidkun Quisling in Norway branding continued resistance of Norwegians to the German invaders "a crime and completely useless waste of lives."

Advices from Oslo, before the breakdown of communications, said the German commander there ordered the arrest and trial before German military courts of all persons distributing false rumors.

At Trondheim, the German commander was reported to have decreed death for anyone found guilty of sabotage.

Additional advices from Trondheim said the Nazi commander had barred any departure of the civilian population and advised the people that "there is no fighting in the whole of Norway."

To the north of Trondheim British naval activity continued at Namsis, where two British destroyers were seen steaming along the coast, just outside Folde Fjord.

Other Units Reported

Elaborating on the report of British naval forces off Namsis, the Stockholm newspaper Allehanda said that in addition to the two destroyers, these other ships were believed to be in the vicinity: Two British battleships, four cruisers and two destroyers, together with large numbers of aircraft.

No German warships were seen.

A Norwegian army communique, issued today, listed these German naval losses: "The battleship Gneisenau at Oslo Fjord; the cruiser Emden and several smaller ships sunk, also; at Kristiansand, the cruiser Karlsruhe; at Stavanger, the (Norwegian) destroyer Aeger sank a big German warship; at Bergen one German cruiser was sunk. Several of our own warships were sunk."

The communique also gave the Norwegian defense line as extending through Mysen, Glomma, Oeieren, Romerike, Hitedal, Tyri Fjord and Vikersund.

It listed eight towns as bombarded by the Germans, but said the damage was slight.

King Bombed Four Times

New York, April 12 (AP).—King Haakon and his staff were bombed four times in their flight from his temporary Norwegian capital to an unknown spot of safety, an American girl declared today in a short wave broadcast (C. B. S.) from Stockholm.

The girl, Betty Wason, of Indianapolis, Ind., said she was told the story of the flight by a Swede who was a member of the royal party.

"Tonight," said Miss Wason, "none of us knows exactly where the royal party is hiding. They fled from Nybergsund last night after four air attacks which came in rapid succession."

Her account, in part, follows:

The first alarm was given by the Swede who was seated in his automobile outside the house where the king and his entourage had taken refuge. At the first blast of the horn King Haakon, Crown Prin e Olav, the British and Polish ministers, and other government officials fled from the house into the nearby woods. There they had to stand waist-deep in snow while bombs fell all around them. A second blast from the automobile horn told them all was clear and they emerged from the woods.

Hiding Place Machine Gunned

But within an hour the second attack came, and this time the fliers used both machine guns and bombs. With sheets which they had jerked from beds, the court and visiting ministers fell flat in the snow and tried to camouflage themselves. When the firing eased up, the party dashed from one woods into another close by; soon planes machine-gunned the exact spot where the refugees had been lying. A nearby school which had first been considered as the refuge, was struck by an incendiary bomb and burned to the ground.

After the third raid the King found a car and he and his party went to a safer place; by the time the German planes returned a fourth time, they were well on their way to a new refuge. The only member of the party injured was a government official who received a bullet wound in his hand.

Danes Saw No Signs of Fight In Kattegat

Sweden Reported Nazi Troopships Had Been Sunk There

By Louis P. Lochner
Associated Press Staff Writer

Gilleleje, Denmark (on the Kattegat), April 11.—Real naval war hasn't yet come to the folks who live along the Danish shores of the Kattegat.

Although British warships and planes have edged toward the Kattegat (and, according to Swedish reports, on Wednesday night destroyed an undetermined number of German troopships, near Swedish shores close to where the Skagerrak joins with the Kattegat), the Danish shore police, fishermen, machinists and ordinary people don't know anything about any major battle within the Kattegat itself.

Heard No Cannon

Neither at Helsingor (Elsinore) famed from Shakespeare's Hamlet, nor at this nearby spa of Gilleleje at the lower end of the Kattegat, nor at Skagen, 135 miles away at the upper end, could I find anyone who knew of a big and thunderous battle.

I talked to Danes all along the route but nobody had heard any cannonading. One airplane had been seen by one machinist. Nobody had seen any debris of smashed or sunken vessels nor had anybody on the Danish coast discovered corpses.

The skipper of the little fishing smack "Ostjernen" assured me as he calmly puffed away at his pipe, "we started from Skagen Wednesday, put in here at Gilleleje Wednesday night. But we heard and saw nothing."

His four mates nodded gravely in assent.

"How long we'll lie here we don't know," one of his mates said. When we got here Wednesday night we learned all boats had been forbidden to leave the harbor until further notice. So no fishing boats have gone out into the Kattegat since."

The little harbor was full of small craft of all sorts.

At Helsingor one little tugboat carrying back from Swden about a dozen residents of Helsingor had been permitted to enter. German guards closely scrutinized each passenger, I was told. At the pier stood German sentries and one Danish policeman.

At Gilleleje I interviewed about a dozen inhabitants, separately.

To my quesiton whether any of them had heard any connonading, each person interrogated replied with a shake of the head and "ikke," Danish for no, or not.

They all agreed that if there had been a regular naval encounter in mid-Kattegat, which is only 135 miles across, every citizen would have heard it and there probably would have been windows smashed from the concussion.

Recall Jutland

One oldtimer recalled how, during the Jutland battle of 1916 (the British call it the battle of Jutland, the Germans know it as the battle of the Skagerrak) countless windows at Jutland were shattered from the terrific noise.

To find out if at the upper end of the Kattegat there were any knowledge of a big battle, I telephoned the chief of police at Skagen, which approximately marks the boundary between the Kattegat and the Skagerrak.

To my question of whether any cannonading had been heard up his way, he replied, "ikke."

Then I asked other stock questions, whether villagers had said anything about hearing such noise, whether any planes had been seen, any battleships noticed, any dead or wounded washed ashore, any debris of vessels accumulated.

All this elicited a negative reply. "We saw nothing unusual," the police officer concluded.

The population along the route still seemed dazed at the events of the past days.

There was not outward bitterness. Nobody expressed himself in a manner derogatory to the German troops.

Mrs. Harriman Tells Story of Escape

the British Legation, including Minister and Lady Dormer.

"French Minister Comte de Dampierre and Countess de Dampierre were there with the secretary of the legation of Paris and his wife. The count naturally looked worried and weary but the countess looked full of spirit and smart in her otter coat.

"I telephoned our legation at Oslo and heard the news.

"The news came from the government at Hamar that it might be best to move towards the Swedish frontier.

"After supper it was whispered to me to move to Elverum, as the Germans were within one half hour of Hamar.

"We rushed back to repack our things.

"The British minister was most kind and helpful.

"We drove off in a long line of cars.

"How right we were! The Germans took Hamar and our mountain retreat at Hosbjor as well."

"On entering Elverum, King Haakons' two cars passed us and a lump came into my throat when I thought what tragedy the moment must have meant for him, for if ever a man deserved the best of life it is he—devoted, wise, charming and kingly. He never spared himself for a moment in seeking the best points for his kingdom.

"On the outskirts of Elverum soldiers in white snow suits were barricaded. Most effective these proved in throwing down the German advance and saving the king.

"There the Hotel Central was full

"Sir Cecil Dormer, the British minister, sought out the government's new quarters in the wood and told us to go to a farm some kilometers away.

"We had just settled on Herodsbygd when Sir Cecil had a message that the Germans had reached Hamar in nine armored cars.

"So, we proceeded to Sweden with his entourage.

"As a neutral minister, there seemed no reason for me to follow, and I decided to remain in contact with the Norwegian government.

"By that time, with but one hour's sleep in 28 and having had much excitement, I was ready for bed.

"My secretary, maid and I shared a room.

"Wednesday morning we were awakened by the roar of six German planes flying toward Elverum and flying very low.

"The farmer's wife explained we must cook and buy our own food, so we bought eggs, bread and sardines.

"We lunched on poached eggs.

"During the day I was able to reach the government twice by telephone and our legation once.

"Just as we were going to bed that night there was an air raid alarm and all the lights went out.

Hid in Woods

"We were taken to a wood adjoining the house and told we must run there if planes came and not to undress all night.

"I called the American Legation in Stockholm and gave Minister Sterling a cable for the State Department, then retired.

"Thursday planes were centering over Elverum and we heard we were being caught in a trap, as all bridges were being burned and the roads barricaded.

"I wanted to get nearer the Swedish border, where the government had moved in the night.

"I had been told that I could see the foreign minister that afternoon if I could reach him.

"We could see Elverum being bombed. Thick yellow smoke was rising.

"Planes were coming over mostly in fives, but we counted 11 in one flight.

"We hoped to get to the road going east to the Swedish border.

"After driving some miles we were stopped by the soldiers at a great barricade across the road. They said 'Go back as fast as you can, as we expect seven German armored cars.'

"They were fine young men and gave us sympathetic smiles.

"Two carloads of doctors and Red Cross nurses stood behind them as at all other barricades we passed.

"As we retraced our steps, a number of Heinkels passed overhead toward Elverum and when we arrived at Hostjor, we saw that Elverum now was on fire:

"It burned steadily for hours, but the Norwegian government had left.

"We took the road eastward and were told that it would lead eventually to another barricade but it seemed the only direction away from the line of fire.

"After some miles we found a farmhouse where a sweet-faced woman offered shelter if we could all sleep in the parlor.

"So there we were with a couch for me and a divan for the other two.

"That day I had one egg and one piece of toast for breakfast, three sardines and one piece of toast for lunch and two poached eggs for supper.

"I was glad to get to sleep on my tiny couch.

Escape Over Ice

"He searched all the neighboring forests for a passable road. He arrived with news that soldiers at the barricade would help us pass. He and two friends did all they could to help.

"At the barricade, which looked strong, we got our car squeezed through one end of it. Then the car was run down hill by the chauffeur, firstly to the river and went for 150 yards along the ice which still was just thick enough to hold, and then the soldiers pushed it up the steep icy bank again.

"As we reached Elverum, we found a Red Cross hospital and a church standing, but the rest of the town was demolished.

"The big Hotel Central, where I spent one half hour Tuesday night, was completely destroyed. The telephone exchange was destroyed, and so was the police station.

"From Elverum we drove to Nybergsund and reached there about 3 p. m., where I was to have visited the government yesterday. We found the hotel there razed to the ground, having been bombed yesterday at 4 o'clock while the king and the government were in it.

Plans to Go Back

"Fortunately they escaped.

"An attempt had been made to destroy the Blommen River bridge as well, but they settled all around but not on it.

"Here again there was no telephone connection, so I proceeded to the border.

"Notwithstanding my diplomatic passport and the American flag on the roof of the car, there seemed some doubt in the minds of the customs officers, but they finally decided to admit us after considerable phoning.

"I promptly telephoned to Minister Sterling at the Stockholm legation and gave him my news and heard in return what he had learned by telegraph from Oslo.

"I now plan to return to Norway and get as near the government as I possibly can."

Entourage In Flight

Mrs. Harriman was accompanied by her chancellory clerk, Miss Lundgren, who previously had been forced to flee from Helsinki when the capital of Finland was bombed by Russian planes; her maid, Elizabeth Fisher, and her chauffeur, Lars Froslie.

The minister said she crossed the border in order to establish contact with Stockholm so that she could forward a report to the State Department in Washington. She was unable to obtain telephone or telegraph facilities in central Norway, she said.

Dies Quiz Told Loyalists Slew Maryland Boy

Witness Declares Lincoln Brigader Was 'Murdered'

By the Associated Press

A "road to adventure" that Vernon Selby followed from quiet town of Chestertown, Md., to Spanish civil war battlefields assertedly ended with Selby's being "murdered by these sadists," his mother learned today.

For months Mrs. Walter Selby had been trying to learn the fate of her son, who fought with the loyalists. The State Department in Washington worked in vain to discover what had happened to him.

John Honeycombe, who said he was a Los Angeles Communist, told the Dies committee yesterday that he had heard that Selby was taken from a camp where Americans arrested by the loyalists were quartered and was "murdered by those sadists."

Mrs. Selby had testified she had received letters on stationery bearing the name of the friends of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade urging her not to worry about her son.

Honeycombe said he was with Selby in Spain, and that Selby once had a shrapnel wound in his shoulder.

When he was trying to return to the United States, Honeycombe continued, he went to loyalist heaquarters in Barcelona to confer with the minister of war. He quoted that official as saying that the brigade of Americans was responsible to "the Communist Party—the Third Internationale."

Both Arrested

Later, the witness testified, both he and Selby were arrested without charge and returned with other Americans to the front lines under guard and without arms.

There the Americans were given little food, were denied adequate protection, and "the most terrific sadistic pressure" was exerted upon them. It was from a camp—Castle Defells—near Barcelona that Selby was taken and "murdered," Honeycombe added.

The committee, investigating enlistments in the United States for the Spanish republican cause, also heard Maxwell Wallace, of Detroit, testify that his son, Albert, and other Americans had been killed because the Communists "thought it would be better to kill them rather than let them come back and let Americans know what the Communists really were doing in Spain."

Another witness, William C. McCuistion, of Frederick, Md., told the committee that he saw Tony Demaio, of Hartford, Conn, officer of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade which fought for loyalist Spain, shoot two other brigade members to death in a Barcelona cafe on May 2, 1938.

A short time earlier Demaio had been on the stand and, in response to questions, said he never heard of the two men in question.

McCuistionfi a seaman, testified the shooting took place while Demaio was conducting a roundup of stragglers.

One an American

The men killed, the witness said, were an American named Matthews, traveling under the name of Aronofsky, and a Canadian named Moran. He did not further identify them

The American, McCuistion asserted, died on the spot. Moran, he said, was taken to a hospital where McCuistion presumed he died (Earlier he said flatly that the man had been shot to death.)

The witness said he talked to Demaio about the shooting afterwards and "he said he had to do that to save his own life."

McCuistion said he had walked into the cafe just as the shooting took place and he believed that it followed resistance by the two to Demaio's attempt to arrest them. Stragglers were being rounded up, the witness asserted, because many men were trying to flee the brigade.

Demaio then took the stand and said he never heard of young Wallach. He failed to identify as Wallach's two pictures shown by J. B. Matthews, committee investigator.

the street at 1323 when a sheet of flame roared up in front of 1324, the concussion hurling him to the street and showering him with glass from second floor windows in his home. He said the blast appeared to come from under the front porch.

All lights were on in the Holland house, Bragg said. He dashed across the street and attempted to rouse the occupants but got no response. He then turned in a fire alarm.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Buzzard, at 1319 Harvard street, were thrown from bed by the shock.

Within a few minutes, a crowd of some 300 gathered about the shattered building.

Residents of the block, reassured, returned home and began the task of closing glassless windows with nailed-up curtains, boards and other improvised shutters.

Several neighbors told police they saw a grey automobile a few minutes before the blast driving the wrong way along Harvard street, a one-way thoroughfare. They were unable to give a more detailed description.

Another witness told police that he saw a red flare on the porch immediately before the blast let go.

Capt. Floyd Truscott, commanding the Tenth Precinct, was called from his home and began an investigation with the fire marshal.

British Sink Every Vessel At Narvik; Landing Reported

One soldier told me he watched from the shore of Narvik and saw three German destroyers sunk by British fire. Two more German destroyers, he said, blazed in the fjord all day and finally were run aground on the rocky shore.

In the hills and mountains back of Narvik the Norwegian soldiers have built an iron ring around the town and the British naval action apparently left the German forces, estimated at about 5,000 men, without outside communication. The Norwegians have mobilized about 30,000 men in this region.

The lines which the Germans have pushed out into the interior are extended and thinly held, military men said, and would be extremely vulnerable to any determined Norwegian attack.

German detachments originally were sent out as far as Osevantan, where they were halted by a much larger Norwegian patrol. They were using confiscated Norwegian trucks, but the trucks were of little use in roads blocked by huge snowdrifts piled up by the blizzard of the last three days.

On Thursday afternoon a Norwegian patrol went out and arrested a German patrol which had been advancing toward the Norwegian positions. Norwegians trapped it in a gully and the Germans surrendered. Fourteen prisoners were taken, all extremely well armed with automatic rifles and modern equipment.

I examined their material and found it similar to that used on the Western Front. Members of the patrol which captured the Germans said they seemed pleased to be taken prisoner.

The Norwegian soldiers said the Germans skiied "very well." I learned from the general staff that they were all from the Tyrol.

Norwegian military planes are moving constantly over the territory particularly on reconnaissance work over Narvik and the surrounding fjord.

We were almost captured yesterday by a German patrol which later was taken by Norwegian troops. We had left the frontier intending to ski down a fjord opposite Narvik and take a boat across. On the way down after watching a group of armed men topping a hill, we decided that they were Norwegians and went out to meet them. Thinking we were Germans they waved back, but one of our party noticed their equipment and we retreated.

Roosevelt Acts To Avert Woe In Greenland

He Asks Red Cross To Study Question Of Supply Ships

President Roosevelt has taken action to prevent distress among the 17,000 inhabitants of Greenland in case their supply ships from Denmark are cut off by the war, he revealed yesterday.

Disclosing at his press conference that he had asked the Red Cross to investigate the possibility of assistance being required, the President declined to discuss any political matters linked with the big Danish possession.

He described as very premature questions on whether the Monroe Doctrine would be invoked should Germany seek to extend her control of Denmark to Greenland, some 1,600 miles from St. John's, Newfoundland.

Nearer America

The President said he had been reading an encyclopedia and various other works on Greenland and had also talked to a number of geographers and geologists, and his researches had convinced him that Greenland, from the point of view of ancient history and its fauna and flora, belongs much more closely to the American continent than to the European continent.

That is a very simple fact, the President commented, but at the present time he is looking at Greenland from the humanitarian point of view, rather than the political angle.

The President praised the Danes for having done what he called an awfully good job with the Eskimos. He pointed out that the Greenlanders have a system of community government and their self-government has worked well both from the social and economic angles. In spite of that, the President said, it has been necessary for Denmark to send ships to Greenland bearing supplies which the natives cannot get or grow themselves.

Question Hypothetical

The President said he has the Red Cross looking into the matter of these supplies for the south and west coasts of Greenland to keep the natives from starving this summer. The Red Cross relief won't involve a great deal of money, according to the President, who said he thought the American people would be glad to chip in and help the people of Greenland.

"What about Germany occupying Greenland?" a reporter asked.

The President replied that the reporter was being awfully hypothetical.

"Well, a lot of people are hypothetical with me," the reporter insisted.

The President smilingly agreed it was good that Americans should begin to take some interest in remote places such as Greenland. He said his interest in Greenland dated back several years to the time when Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, who was American Minister to Denmark, stopped off in Greenland and took some pictures which she later screened at the White House. The President said he got quite thrilled about the interesting life led by the Greenlanders.

Air Holdings Expanded

New York, April 12 (AP).—Tri-Continental Corporation, a leading investment company, disclosed today it had expanded its holdings of aircraft and air-line shares the last three months.

Tri-Continental, the report showed, had net assets at the end of March equal to $2.86 a share against $3.03 at the close of December, and $2.49 at the end of March, 1939.

"Any girl here," pooh-poohed the spokesman, Miss Eva Gradijan, vice president of the Interior Department Recreation Association, "can get married if she wants to. Men aren't hard to marry."

And, marriage or no marriage, said Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin, Civil Service commissioner, women here have every opportunity "to develop their creative selves."

That was an advantage Dr. Hart already had voluntarily conceded without, however, accepting it as a satisfying substitute for "normal biological destiny."

"On the credit side," he said, "are rich resources in music, entertainment, social life; a high educational level, opportunity to be part of a great creative enterprise . . . but Washington inflicts unhappiness because it draws together great numbers of lonely women for whom no mates are available.

"I feel like giving a tribute to the women of Washington . . . They are making a courageous endeavor to find satisfying and service-filled lives—to meet discouragements and loneliness with chins up."

His picture of Washington women was based on replies to a questionnaire he distributed to a female audience here two weeks ago. On the other side of the picture he saw "job boredom" but, on the whole, greater general happiness among women clerks than elsewhere because of greater job security.

Washington's unmarried women, he said, "are making a brave struggle. They could get married in, say, Detroit or other places where men are in the majority."

Propinquity, he believes, is "one of the biggest helps to marriage. Women in their twenties should make marriage a major objective. They should devote vacations and week-ends largely to that aim."

He turned thumbs down on the "love 'em and leave 'em" philosophy and praised Southern women as model men-catchers. They "make marriage a business," he said, and they marry earlier and stay married with greater permanence than their sisters in the higher latitudes.

But where there is a scarcity of men, and women are hard-pressed for mates, something constructive and satisfying may be found in work.

"Almost everything has interest," he said.

ister to the United States, called at the British Embassy in Washington during the day, presumably to discuss Britain's attitude, and he appointed a committee of Danish officials to study the problem also in New York.

The Washington Legation estimated that there were now about 175 or 200 Danish vessels outside the Allied blockade area. The Danish merchant fleet numbers more than 700 ships.

Speaking of the Allied plan, one Danish official in New York summed it up this way:

"They want to take our ships and we are trying to talk them out of it."

Shipping sources also said that England planned to take over and operate Norway's fleet of 1,987 ships, the fourth largest merchant fleet in the world. This plan was being delayed pending the outcome of the naval battles raging around Scandinavia.

Rumania Stops Loading Goods For Germany

Cabinet Maps Embargo; General Staff Meets; Nazi Demands Waited

By the Associated Press

Bucharest, April 12.—Rumania tonight suspended the loading of freight cars for Germany.

At the same time it was learned the loading of Danube oil barges had been stopped for several days.

Foreign diplomats, pointing out the action might amount to a virtual embargo on exports to Germany, expressed fear that the move would speed a crisis in German-Rumanian economic relations.

The suspension of freight car loadings, it was learned, followed presentation by Germany to Rumania of a long list of commodities on which the Reich is placing a virtual embargo against shipment to Rumania.

The Rumanian general staff held an urgent meeting with Premier Tatarescu tonight.

The cabinet's economic council, composed of the ministers of finance, internal and external commerce, will prepare a long list of Rumanian raw materials which will be embargoed as vital for the country's own use.

In informed quarters it was said that the government is expecting to receive stiff demands from Germany within the next few days.

Germany is expected to demand formally that Rumania demobilize in order to speed up work in factories and fields for Germany.

It is believed also in informed circles that Germany will demand that Rumania, as part of the Reich's living space, direct her exports almost wholly to the Nazis.

Largest Ever Laid; Big Nazi Arms Ship Reported Blown Up

By Edwin Stout

Associated Press Staff Writer

London, April 12.—Britain corked the Skagerrak and Kattegat today with mines designed to cut the lifeline of Germany's expeditionary force in Norway, and British planes pounded the cork tight despite withering fire from German warships, planes and antiaircraft defenses.

The Royal Air Force lost five planes, the air ministry said, when its bombers penetrated into Kristiansand Fjord and attacked two German warships. The full extent of the Nazi losses was not known, but the ministry said at least two German fighter planes were shot down in flames. Others were seen seriously damaged.

[In Berlin, D. N. B., German official news agency, said eight of Britain's most modern bombers were downed by German planes in an attempted raid on German bases on the Norwegian coast tonight.]

The British announced that at least two German supply ships had felt the blows of their aerial attack.

An 8,000-ton ammunition ship went up in a thunderous explosion under the bombs of British night raiders while a 5,000-ton supply ship was "probably damaged by two large bombs seen to burst close to her stern."

British fliers rove last night over a wide area "extending from Oslo Fjord to the Baltic coast of Germany," attacking ships and bombing a German seaplane base on the Baltic coast.

With the Skaggerrak and the Kattegat mined and the navy keeping watch on German North Sea bases, the British are seeking to halt the flow of food and munitions to Norway's Nazi invaders while the Norwegians strike down from the hills at German garrisons.

Four areas in all were mined in the North Sea, the Skagerrak and the Kattegat, the admiralty announced, touching Norwegian, Danish and German coasts and also territorial waters of Sweden and the Netherlands.

The well-informed British Press Association said the field was the largest ever laid, extending 420 miles northward at its westernmost limit.

Experts compared it with that laid between the Orkneys and Norwegian territorial waters by Britain and the United States in the World War, the greatest field of that conflict. It covered a distance of 233 miles and 71,000 mines were used.

The British said they left channels for certain traffic to move.

Swedish Tanker Sunk

Other developments in the sea war included:

All but 14 of the crew of the destroyer Gurkha, sunk Wednesday by German warplanes, were rescued and landed today on British soil.

Sinking of the 9,076-ton Swedish tanker Sveaborg, bound from the United States to Sweden with a cargo of gasoline, was announced in London. She was reported torpedoed off the Scottish coast.

The 247-ton German trawler Friesland, captured off Norway, reached a Scottish port.

Survivors of Wednesday's British-German fight in far northern Norway before Narvik said about 50 men of the British destroyer Hardy, which was wrecked and run aground in that battle, landed under German fire but their fate was unknown.

British were silent on events along the Norwegian coast and in Norway except to say there was no major naval engagement in the Kattegat today despite Swedish reports of heavy detonations heard in those waters.

A naval official said the explosions may have been due to depth charges, since the Germans doubtless have worked diligently to locate British submarines which have been active there.

Eight Ships Seen

The British announcement of bombing attacks on German supply vessels carried on during the night said the destroyed ammunition ship was one of a formation of eight found steaming at high speed to the north through the Great Belt, narrow channel between two islands of Denmark.

"A direct hit was registered on the ammunition ship, which was blown up with such force that the attacking aircraft were rocked by the force of the explosion," the announcement said.

Another line of ships was bombed farther north and believed damaged, it was reported, though the darkness prevented observation of the full effect of the attack. The announcement added: "This attack was met by aintiaircraft fire from the ship or shore batteries, which was ineffective."

Guns Roar on 30 Miles of Westwall

Paris, April 12 (AP).—Cannon roared along a 30-mile stretch of the French-German front today and French anti-aircraft guns barked at Nazi planes near Paris.

The significance of the extensive artillery duel was not disclosed in the high command's evening communique. Scattered local actions hertofore have characterized the front fighting.

Roughly, the fire between opposing batteries extended from the Bitche region to Lauterbourg, between the Vosges and the Rhine. This is the Maginot "hinge."

icy of returning measure for measure allowing the precedents set by the enemy to determine the form the German reprisals will take—retaliating in kind.

With the new air bases in Scandinavia which their invasion of Denmark and Norway secured—and the high command declared today that new air bases were being built in Norway—the Germans feel their chances of success in such attacks on the British Isles will be considerably enhanced. The full significance of the German warning to the British, however, is indicated by the experience in Poland. For there, particularly in Warsaw, German planes attacking military objectives under fire frequently hit and seriously damaged buildings near the objectives. Once such aerial warfare begins in this conflict, it is difficult to believe it can be confined within the limits set.

Norway Causes Despair

Informed sources in Berlin indicate that the Germans are beginning to despair of reaching the "political understanding sought" with the "old Norwegian government." Contacts which the Reich's officials have had with the "old Norwegian government" since the invasion began, it is said here, have not led to any positive result.

It remains to be seen, it is said here, what final conclusions the German government will draw from "internal Norwegian developments." In German quarters, it is said, the impression is strengthening that there is a certain lack of "action and decision" in Norwegian government circles which, it is said, is in clear contrast with the "growing clarification in the public opinion of the land."

The Reich's contact with the Norwegian King, however, is said to still exist.

Quisling Recognized

One conclusion the Germans already seem to have drawn from "internal Norwegian developments." That is the recognition of Maj. Vidkun Quisling, the Nazi leader, as prime minister of Norway. Heretofore, the Germans have steered clear of referring to Quisling as the Norwegian government leader. But the semiofficial "news service" from Germany declares that "as symptomatic of the German view," one may point out that the interview of Quisling with a German press representative has found particular attention in Berlin.

What the interview concerned is not known here, for it has not yet been published. It would indicate, however, that having apparently failed to reach a satisfactory accord with the Norwegian government, the Germans, recognizing a government decidedly satisfactory to themselves with all the legal advantages inherent in such recognition.

Germany meanwhile continues to declare in face of the issuance of the first war communique by the Norwegians that neither a de jure or a de facto state of war exists between Norway and the Reich, and today's German army communique makes no specific mention of any engagements having taken place yesterday between German and Norwegian troops. German occupation, it is claimed, is proceeding according to plan.

"Fairy Tale Sea Battle"

The whole weight of the German propaganda apparatus today was turned upon the "fairy tale great sea battle" between British and German naval units, and the former president of the Norwegian Storting (Parliament), Dr. Karl Joachim Hambro, who was claimed to be

Eyewitnesses Tell How British Landed Under Fire at Narvik

50 Troops Gain Shore Despite German Batteries but Their Fate Is Unknown; Destruction of Destroyer Is Described

By the Associated Press

London, April 12.—Britain today received the story of what is believed to have been the only landing yet made by any British fighting men on the Norwegian coast.

Returning survivors of Wednesday's blazing battle at Narvik said that about 50 men of the British destroyer Hardy, which was wrecked and run aground in that battle, made a landing under fire of the German shore batteries, apparently determined to continue the fight.

Eyewitnesses aboard the destroyers Hotspur, Hostile and Haovock, which managed to withdraw from the fight, said their comrades aboard the Hardy when last seen were landing with rifles and ammunition.

The fate of the Hardy's survivors, however, is not known. They have not been reported since the battle, except for German accounts of having captured prisoners at Narvik, ore port above the Arctic Circle.

The British admit that another destroyer, the Hunter, was sunk at Narvik.

Survivors of another of the series of fights which made up this week's battle of the Norwegian coast returned today to tell of what they saw, the last hours of the destroyer Gurkha.

Gunner Jack Squires said that about half a dozen German warplanes attacked the Gurkha about 3 p. m. Wednesday afternoon.

"When the vessel began to sink, we closed the bulkheads and managed to keep afloat nearly four hours," he said. "We kept firing and brought down a couple of German planes—one of them the blighter that got us."

Aides Rescue Commander

Other members of the crew asserted the Gurkha's commander stuck to his post while his ship sank under him, but was saved from death by two sub officers who "almost hurled" him into a rescue boat.

The commander is Capt. A. W. Buzzard, 37, son of Sir Farquhar Buzzard, who was physician in ordinary to King George V.

One survivor reported that while another British warship was rescuing the survivors, German planes swooped down again, dropping more bombs—all of which missed their marks.

"We were not sinking fast enough to suit them and they determined to finish us off," he said.

All but 14 of the Gurkha's crew were rescued and landed today.

spreading rumors of such sea engagements.

It is natural, the press points out, that the British navy would endeavor to hamper German occupation of Norway as well as the German line of communications, but that a large-scale naval battle has occurred as the press declares, is a "fairy tale." "Such propaganda," the Germans say, represents the Allies' effort to sustain the morale of their own people as well as to protect Anglo-French prestige in neutral states. Hambro, it is alleged, is the tool of this "propaganda"—in addition to being "of Jewish ancestry"—who is sending out absurd reports from Sweden both to further it as well as in an endeavor to disturb the "quietude" of the Norwegian people.

"Quietude" Stressed

The press endeavors to demonstrate to the German people moreover that this "quietude" characterizes the situation in Norway. For tonight, it is reported with pictures that a German military band gave a two-hour concert in Storting Square in Oslo yesterday. The band, it is said, marched to the square behind a battalion of a Norwegian Guard Regiment. So far as the military situation is concerned, the high command reported all was quiet in Denmark, and that the enemy was not sighted anywhere by German reconnaissance planes patrolling the west coast of Denmark.

In Norway, however, it appears to have been in frequent contact with the British. A special bulletin tonight declared that eight British bombers had been shot down today when they attempted to fly into Norwegian territory.

[London admitted the loss of five planes in this engagement.]

The German line of communications was said to remain intact. The Reich's troops were claimed yesterday to have extended the territory occupied by them about Narvik, to have taken Evenaes and disarmed the Norwegian troops there without fighting. Everything is reported to have been quiet so far as land activity is concerned about Bergen, Stavanger and Christiansand.

Batteries Seized

The Germans claim to have extended their lines in all directions about Oslo, according to plan. Whether through combat or just by marching was not indicated. In this action Drammen and Eidsvold were said to have been reached. Coastal batteries near Drontheim, furthermore, are alleged to have been taken over and made ready for "defensive action."

Near Drontheim, an attack by British airplanes was claimed to have been successfully repulsed. Yesterday afternoon light English naval units "vainly" endeavored to force their way into Drontheim Fjord, the high command declares, while a simultaneous attack by British torpedo airplanes had no effect whatsoever.

Other British planes meanwhile were said to have unsuccessfully attacked Stavanger. They were repulsed, the Germans allege, and one Vickers-Wellington was shot down by antiaircraft batteries.

Units of the German air force were reported to be assisting the invading troops by reconnaisance flights along the coast over land and far into the North Sea. New air bases are being built as well as naval bases, it is said, although construction has been seemingly hampered by snow, and since noon of April 10 numerous antiaircraft batteries were said to have been put into commission.

British Stop All Mail Sent From Germany

American Steamers Are Among Vessels Halted by Blockade

Copyright by New York Times

London, April 12.—The British blockade is stopping all mails from Germany and contiguous states, including mail carried in United States steamers, it was learned today.

The reason for this procedure is the belief that, since Great Britain started to blockade German exports, the Reich has been sending many commodities in small bulk but in big value through the mail which hitherto had not been touched on outward voyages.

Foreign Exchange Vital

The British position is that German exports result in the production of foreign exchange—one of the most vital necessities for Germany if she is to win the present war.

For months Great Britain has exercised the blockade on any neutral ships which might be carrying goods from Germany. Up to a few days ago she did not exercise control over mails in a similar way, though she stopped all mails going to Germany.

According to the ministry of economic warfare the United States Department of Commerce figures show a heavy increase in goods imported from Germany. Other evidence is seen in the fact that decreases of freight shipment have been accompanied by a rise in German goods of a character suitable for mailing, either seen in the mail holds of neutral ships or offered for sale in neutral countries.

Precision Tools Mailed

It is believed that needles for textile machinery, which by weight are worth more than silver; chemicals, dyestuffs, optical goods, cameras, surgical instruments, and precision tools, such as watchmakers' instruments, all are being sent by mail. Imitation stones to the value of $1,000,000 yearly, and watches to the value of $300,000 yearly are estimated to be reaching the United States.

Not only is mail being stopped on United States ships bound from Europe, but other ships passing through the British control. It will be forwarded on the next ship, or as soon as it has been opened and passed on.

Premier Calls On Sweden To Resist

Broadcast Regarded As Advance Rejection Of Nazi Demands

By Otto D. Tolischus.

Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, Sweden (Saturday), April 13.—While the war in Norway, which Germany does not recognize as a war, has been brought to a temporary deadlock, Premier Per Albin Hansson, of Sweden, today broadcast a message to the nation, in which he declared that Sweden also faces an "hour of trial," but that she is determined to defend her neutrality, her freedom and her independence, whatever the cost.

This message, whose meaning is underlined by the increasingly difficult defense position to which Premier Hansson himself referred, and which is openly discussed in the press, urged the Swedish nation to resist. But the passage which commanded the principal interest of all political and diplomatic quarters was the following:

"It is not compatible with Swedish neutrality to let any belligerent power use Swedish territory for its operations. Nor had any such demands been made on us. If they are, they must be rejected."

This declaration, which rejects demands that have not been put, obviously represents a preventive rejection. It is directed against all belligerents and, technically, therefore, also is against any Allied attempt, should it be made, to seize Swedish iron mines. But in the minds of all listeners were present the insistent rumors of yesterday, denied by both German and Swedish official quarters, that Germany has requested Sweden to permit the passage of German troops to Norway. If such a proposition has been entertained, Premier Hansson today has killed it and thus involved the fate of Sweden.

The premier added, "This neutrality means that we must preserve independent judgment and action in all directions." And in the beginning of his message, he emphasized that the fate of Norway has deeply moved the Swedish people. In political quarters, this is regarded as an answer to attacks in the German press on the supposedly unneutral attitude of the Swedish press.

Hambro's Statement

London, April 12 (AP).—Carl Johan Hambro, president of the Norwegian Parliament, said in a statement issued today through the British ministry of information that "nowhere does one see any signs of (Norway's) surrendering."

Hambro left Norway shortly after the German invasion began and is now at Stockholm. His statement was to have been delivered over the Swedish radio yesterday but the arrangements were canceled.

Asserting that all parties were consolidated in making a "united people," Hambro said, "through the Norwegian legation in Finland offers have come from Danish, English and French ambulance corps to proceed to Norway, where their services may be of the greatest importance."

"A report too has come through from military chiefs in Norway telling of the determination which fills both them and their troops. Despite all the immense difficulties—and they should in no way be underestimated—mobilization is proceeding."

Christian Front Suspect Kidnaped, Attorney Fears

New York, April 12 (INS).—While G-men sought Claus Gunther Ernecke, one of 17 defendants in the Christian Front sedition trial, Ernecke's attorney asserted tonight that his client might have been kidnaped or murdered.

Ernecke's failure to appear at the trial today caused cancellation of his $7,500 bail and resulted in postponement of the trial until Monday.

Leo Harley, representing Ernecke, said that the German-born defendant, accused in the alleged conspiracy to overthrow the United States Government, had been threatened with death.

Ernecke, Healy said, left his Brooklyn apartment this morning and supposedly started for the courthouse.

of the later models the United States will receive.

If this Government had not stepped aside to permit Britain and France to take planes on order for the Army, we would have completed our program without additional development cost, officials contended.

Contracts for the 2,500 pursuit ships had been virtually complete, pending the settlement of this issue, and aviation circles here believe they will now be immediately concluded. The planes to be bought are the Lockheed P-38, the Bell P-39 and the Curtiss P-40.

At the same time, the War Department approved the release of an improved Lockheed-Hudson light bomber. The British have bought earlier models of this type.

Included in the 2,500 pursuit plane order, it is said, are between 500 and 600 craft which had been scheduled for delivery to the Army.

In the face of possible Administration efforts to enlarge the naval building program, Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, proposed curtailment of the present battleship program until naval battles during the European war settled the question of whether airplanes have made the dreadnaughts obsolete.

He said he would move to strike out one of two 45,000-ton ships in the 1941 naval supply bill on the ground the battleship vs. bomber question is likely to be settled soon abroad.

Economic Aftermath

Germany's invasion of Denmark and Norway has introduced a new element of uncertainty into the foreign trade outlook.

Undoubtedly our direct export trade with all the Scandinavian countries will suffer as a result of recent developments. Shipments to Denmark, which amounted to $24,000,000 last year, are certain to suffer a very severe shrinkage. And if Germany succeeds in maintaining her hold on Norway, that country, too, will find it increasingly difficult to carry on normal trading operations.

Communications with Sweden — a country to which we sold $97,000,000 of goods last year—is also bound to be adversely affected, whether or not Sweden is drawn directly into the conflict. Altogether, an export trade of about $166,000,000 to the four Scandinavian countries of Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Finland, will be jeopardized by the current extension of the European conflict. That, of course, will mean an immediate increase in unemployment here.

While the outcome of the struggle for control of Norway remains uncertain it is futile to speculate about its long-range consequences. In the case of Denmark, however, it may safely be concluded that Germany will take for her own use the meat and dairy products formerly shipped to Great Britain. The Department of Agriculture has issued a cautious warning against optimistic expectations of any immediate increase in sales of such products to the British from this country, to take the place of diverted Danish exports. Canadian farmers are more likely to benefit.

On the import side, interrupted communications with Scandinavia will deprive us of wood pulp needed for papermaking, and also of newsprint paper. Last year about one-fifth of our wood pulp supply came from the Scandinavian countries, chiefly from Sweden and Finland.

Difficulties will result from the tie-up of many Danish and Norwegian ships and the diversion of others to sea routes outside the danger zones. Increased risks of loss of goods in transport, together with reduced tonnage for carrying, will also add to the cost of transportation—and emphasize the need of the Allies for keeping purchases from this country at a minimum.

Unjust Amendment

Before the Senate Civil Service Committee Representative Ramspeck has denounced as "unworkable" the Keller-Nichols amendment to his civil service extension bill. That amendment would withhold civil service status from Government employes appointed from areas having more than their allotted quotas of civil service positions, until the quotas of all under-apportioned States had been filled.

The effect of this provision would be to deny civil service status to thousands of workers coming from the District and from the neighboring States of Virginia and Maryland, which account for a great proportion of the excess quotas.

As Senator Byrd explained, the heavy local over-apportionment is due to the fact that during the World War citizens from distant States would not come to Washington because they could secure better positions elsewhere. If the amendment remains, as Charles I. Stengle, representing the American Federation of Government Employes, has pointed out, employes hailing from the District could not acquire civil service status until enough Virgin Islanders had come here to fill the islands' quota.

Obviously the provision is utterly unworkable. It would result in the most arbitrary and indefensible kind of discrimination. Some Government employes would be taken into the civil service at once. Others working alongside them, quite as competent and possibly more efficient, would be indefinitely or forever barred from acquiring civil service standing. Moreover, they could neither be transferred nor promoted to a civil service position.

Possibly some Congressmen are advocating this unjust arrangement in the hope that it would make the lot of the excluded so difficult as to encourage resignations and dismissals, thus leaving more jobs available for their own constituents. That seems the only plausible reason for favoring the plan, unless it reflects a sadistic desire to inflict punishment upon many Government workers appointed from the District and neighboring States.

The Continental System

In spite of the more rapid tempo, the far greater destructiveness of modern weapons, and the increased suffering demanded from civilians, there is a striking parallel between the present war and that which raged throughout Europe in the early years of last century. The present war, in fact, resembles that of the Napoleonic era much more closely than it does the 1914-18 struggle.

At the beginning of the nineteenth century, as now, a single dictator was endeavoring to unite all Europe by force of arms. Napoleon's methods were not merely those of direct military conquest and open annexation of territory. They also involved the establishment of "protectorates" very similar to that which Hitler has forced on Denmark and seeks to establish in Norway.

Behind Napoleon, as behind Hitler, there was also a revolutionary social force seeking to break down old traditions and establish new political procedures. Then, as now, this social force was of more fundamental importance than the armies which it inspired. Then, as now, it was underestimated by those who saw only its evil features and could not evaluate its popular appeal.

In order effectively to combat his principal opponent—the tenacious British people and their dominant sea power—Napoleon established his famous Continental System. With the invasion of Scandinavia Hitler's intention of doing the same is clearly revealed. When the Continental System of Bonaparte was at its height only one continental nation—Russia—was in a position to withstand it. Substituting France for Russia, that is the case today.

There is, in the military, diplomatic and economic influence which Germany now exerts from the Arctic Circle to the Mediterranean, and from Madrid to Moscow, no similarity to the 1914-18 picture. There is a real parallel with the Europe of 1805.

Having once decided to subordinate the entire continent to his will, as a preliminary to coercing England by destruction of her trade, Napoleon proceeded from conquest to conquest. In these he showed no consideration whatsoever of neutral rights, the traditions and wishes of the conquered peoples, or any factors other than his primary objective.

But in the end the task proved beyond his powers. The attempt to blockade England by cutting off her commerce with Europe broke down. Nevertheless, history records that the novel ambition of conquering sea power by extension of territorial dominion seemed more than once actually attainable.

Hitler, an omnivorous student of Napoleonic history, is now evidently embarked on an effort to revive the idea of a continental system. The emphasis which the Berlin broadcasts are placing on the termination of trade between Great Britain and Scandinavia is indication that this was one of the primary motives for the current coup. It is perhaps insufficiently realized that the events of this week are not so much an effort to break the blockade of Germany as to forward the development of a blockade of Great Britain.

To follow the Napoleonic pattern will require certain further Napoleonic steps. The greater part of the trade of southeastern Europe is already in German hands, so extension of military action there seems unlikely. Spain is not merely a poor market, utterly impoverished by the civil war, but is also ideologically sympathetic to Germany and difficult to reach. Holland and Belgium, however, adjoin Germany, constitute important British markets, and could easily be overrun.

The conquest of the low countries was early recognized by Napoleon as essential to his Continental System. It will be equally so to Hitler if, as recent events indicate, his underlying objective is to blockade England by closing as much of Europe as possible to English trade. For that reason a German invasion of Holland, or Belgium, or both together, is now to be anticipated. Their peril is very real and nothing is gained by pretending otherwise.

Napoleon failed primarily because of British sea power, which prevented the Corsican dictator from getting to grips with England and which also enabled the British merchant marine to keep the seas no matter how many battles were won by the grande armee. The present activity of the British fleet, striking at German sea power wherever and whenever it can be found, is evidence of the extent to which Great Britain still relies upon this weapon.

But relatively it is less strong than in the time of Pitt and Nelson. The use of the submarine, and more particularly the airplane, as commerce raiders gives modern Germany weapons of which Napoleon had no inkling. His Continental System began to break when Trafalgar demonstrated the impossibility of destroying England's sea power. The as yet unfought Trafalgar of this war would seem to require aerial as well as naval domination.

Discussion Imperative

One of the most controversial features of the President's fourth reorganization order is the proposed transfer of the Civil Aeronautics Authority to the Department of Commerce and the vesting of the functions of the abolished Air Safety Board in the CAA—to be known hereafter as the Civil Aeronautics Board. Members of Congress, officials of the agencies concerned, and representatives of the aviation industry are reported to be both surprised and deeply concerned by this unexpected announcement.

It would be interesting to know who are the master minds engaged in directing the reorganization of the Government's administrative machinery. For it is quite evident that the officials, public and private, who are most directly affected by proposed changes are frequently taken unawares, as in the present instance.

It would seem only an act of common courtesy to give Government officials whose positions are to be wiped out, or whose status is to be radically altered, advance notice of such intentions. Furthermore, the advice and admonition of practical administrators are needed to prevent errors of judgment.

Had expert advice been sought in advance, the President might have hesitated to return control over aviation to the Department of Commerce, especially in view of the unsavory record of the old Bureau of Air Commerce. To be sure, the order provides that the Civil Aeronautics Board is to conduct its quasi-judicial and rule-making functions independently of the Secretary of Commerce. But the fate of the once independent Farm Credit Administration, following its transfer to the Department of Agriculture, is a warning against taking assurances of continued independence too seriously.

It is also doubtful whether the functions of the Air Safety Board can be handled as well by an agency also charged with regulation of air commerce. David Behncke, president of the Air Line Pilots Association, believes that the two functions must be kept separate to secure a maximum degree of air safety, so that "those who make the regulations will not be placed in the position of investigating themselves when a crash occurs."

For these reasons and because of the excellent work done by the Air Safety Board since its establishment, the proposed changes in organization set-up are meeting with strong opposition. Senator McCarran has already introduced a resolution calling for Senate disapproval of the third as well as fourth reorganization plans. The former provides for separation of the functions of the Administrator of Civil Aeronautics from that of the board.

It is to be hoped that the Senate will avail itself of the opportunity thus afforded to discuss the advantages and disadvantages of the proposed changes, instead of permitting them to become effective by merely remaining silent for 60 days.

Orchestral Dirge

The possibility that Washington may find itself without concerts by the National Symphony Orchestra at the Watergate this summer, and next winter in Constitution Hall, has become a probability. The Orchestra Association has backed up its directors with a vote to abandon plans for the 1940-1941 season.

This action, the association has indicated, means that it has done all it intends to do in connection with the five-month-old wage dispute that has deadlocked union negotiations. This still leaves room for a move from the union. Orchestra members, however, have apparently definitely turned down the plan offered by the conciliation division of the Department of Labor and accepted by the association. Since five to six weeks are necessary to prepare for a ten-day campaign to raise funds for financing, prospects will be hopeless unless the deadlock is broken almost immediately.

Many music lovers who were confident that the dispute would of course be settled, are now seriously worried. It would indeed be disgraceful to have the nine years of arduous effort spent in building up the National Symphony go to waste just as the organization is taking its place among the leading orchestras of the country. It would also be bitterly disappointing for the host of Washingtonians who have come to enjoy the summer evenings by the Watergate as well as the more serious winter programs.

With good music under a blackout in many countries it is the more tragic for a symphony orchestra to be extinguished needlessly in the capital of a peaceful nation, merely because of a wage dispute. It is strongly to be hoped there is still time for both sides to reconsider their positions and start at once to make plans cooperatively for the coming year.

Republicans Vs. Lewis

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. John L. Lewis remarks that he can expect nothing of the Republican Party and threatens to form a new party. The important question is not what Mr. Lewis can expect of the Republican Party, but what the people of the United States can expect of both the Republican Party and Mr. Lewis.

I believe that from the Republican Party the American people can expect a return to a commonsense administration of the Nation's affairs, living within the national income, a cessation of the coddling of disloyal and subversive groups, uniform enforcement of law and order without favoritism to special groups, the return of public confidence which will necessarily flow from the foregoing, and new jobs and greater opportunities for employment for the individual upon the resulting return of public confidence.

I believe that from Mr. Lewis and his cohorts the American people can expect continued labor strife, the continued stirring of class hatreds, a continued disregard for everything and everybody except those owing allegiance to Mr. Lewis, sit-down strikes, more and greater demands for legislation favoring those associated with Mr. Lewis at the expense of the great mass of unorganized workers and middle class people, continued demands by the Lewis group for the closing of the door of employment against all classes except those allied with the Lewis groups, and the continued growth of power of the type of labor leaders who are ready to resort to questionable tactics, threats and even violence to enforce their demands.

I think most of us will have little difficulty in making a choice, and it is devoutly to be hoped that Mr. Lewis will proceed to form his new party and give the American people a whack at it.

"The Grapes Of Wrath"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Gallons of ink and acid have been spilled, both pro and con, anent "The Grapes of Wrath." I reserved judgment until day before yesterday, when I saw the moving picture.

It is true, from beginning to end, I say this by virtue of personal observations made in Western States during recent years.

We must all admit that the subject is not a pleasant one. That is the reason, I take it, that critics denounce the book as fictitious and imaginary. It is very convenient for one, when reminded of an irksome or nauseating situation, to say: "It ain't so."

I suggest that the ladies and gentlemen who are loudest in their denunciation of "The Grapes of Wrath" make a personal tour of inspection. Not in evening clothes, but in overalls; not from a Pullman, but from a box car.

The cinema industry deserves the highest praise for acquainting the public with horrible social conditions which cry for correction—and which will be corrected—in the land of the free and home of the brave.

Science

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When I behold the magic of thy wonder, triumphant crowned with reason's brightest ray, I feel an humble penitent to pay a homage that no law can break asunder. The cloud that hid thy flame for ages under accursed bans was superstition gray, and in the name of gods, strange to convey, implored a holy wrath by riving thunder. But time, the universal conqueror of things potential to the latent mind, in crucibles enkindles living fires; and man, of all creation, emperor, discerns the light by changing years refined, and tops with lamps of science templed spires.

Some Quotations

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The following quotations are taken from a recently published book: "When reminded of some former statement, he would either stare in blank amazement, or curtly declare that he never said anything of the kind.

"Only people who indulge in such mental acrobatics are capable of risking elevating into a policy a series of radical changes of front. Only thus could a man believed to be the high priest of a rigid philosophy completely and cynically deny his entire past for the sole purpose of remaining in power."

"The masses had become apathetic and blindly credulous. The party members were utterly dependent for their livelihood on the continuance of the regime."

Lest some of the "apathetic and blindly credulous" masses think that these quotations are taken from a biography of the leader of the New Deal, or from a history of the New Deal, let me assure them that they are quoted verbatim from Hermann Rauschning's (ex-president of the Danzig Senate) new book, "The Voice of Destruction." The first quotation is in description of Adolf Hitler, the second of the German people.

Blood And Serum Bank

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please permit me to congratulate The Post for the great success of the campaign just completed for the Children's Hospital blood and serum bank. Those of us who have been interested for many years in the hospital are gratified not only at the material results of this campaign, but also for the great number of people who participated, thereby indicating their interest and belief in the work being done by the hospital.

This is bound to stimulate a more widespread interest in the hospital, so that it may continue to live up to its 70-year tradition of serving the sick children of Washington, and more especially the indigent sick, for whom 90 per cent of our work is done. We know that but for the espousal of this cause by The Post, it could not have been such a success, and we are deeply grateful to you.

It is perhaps unfair to single out individuals, but I would like to make acknowledgment of the splendid work done by Mr. James H. Lemon, Commander William A. Corley and Mrs. Winslow B. Van-Devanter.

President, Board of Directors, Children's Hospital.

For The C. P.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Regarding the letter which appeared in your paper of April 6, written by Paul Simmons, secretary, Young People's Socialist League, Washington Circle, I'd like to say this:

It is true that Mrs. Roosevelt urged in her column that all young people should join and become active in a political party; although Mr. Simmons states that she didn't mean the Democratic or Republican parties, she may not have had in mind the Socialist Party, either. However, I don't believe that she was thinking of any particular political party, although she could just as well have had in mind the Communist Party.

I agree with Mr. Simmons when he says "Neither the Democratic nor Republican Party has the courage to attack the real cause of our ills—the lopping off of wage earners' purchasing power in the form of profits for industrialists, interest for bankers, dividends for financiers, and rent for landlords," but the Communist Party, even more so than the Socialist Party, is capable of solving the problems of the youth and workers.

Many people have false impressions of the ideals of the Communist Party. It is and always will be for the benefits of the youth and workers.

Westbrook Pegler And Hoover Halo

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems that that brilliant but pugilistic columnist, Westbrook Pegler, has a peculiar bent for shattering the halo on the brow of prominent men. He is a bright young fellow and says many fine things; but I have noted for years that he seems to feel ordained to throw brickbats where others throw bouquets and weave garlands of beauty and praise.

Pegler's recent spasm is called forth by the halo which has been worthily won and modestly worn by J. Edgar Hoover, the justly famous head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Pegler seems to be grieved and peeved over certain publicity that recently came to Hoover in Miami, and perhaps elsewhere. As an observer of men and movements for a full generation in this country, I give it as my deliberate appraisal that no man now before the public, or who has been before the public in my lifetime, has invested more genuine genuis and self-effacing heroism in building his reputation than J. Edgar Hoover.

I first met him when I was a member of Congress and he was a young "limb of the law" in the Department of Justice, a mere atom, if you please, in the whirling mass of Government employes, unknown, unsung, and uncrowned. By dint of assiduous application, a rare order of ability, and a refreshing wealth of God-fearing character, he has climbed steadily upward to his present high place of national and international fame and usefulness, without one fleck upon his name. He has carved his shining pyramid of success out of "pure ether," so to speak, for he found a department that was but an atom in itself, and he has made it a positive entity of power in our national life.

Whatever his critics may say, I have never known J. Edgar Hoover to do a little or cheap thing. Many times he has taken his life in his hands for the sake of society. Instead of seeking publicity, he has actually seemed to run from it, and every star in the crown he has won is radiant with the light of consummate genius and sterling worth.

Attracted by his reputation, and never having heard him speak, I went the other morning to hear his address before the Federal District Attorneys of the Nation. I listened critically, and having heard platform masters in 42 States and many foreign capitals, I think I recognize a strong man when I hear him. I was really amazed at the easy grace and the comprehensive mastery of his subject which Mr. Hoover demonstrated in that address. And I came away thrilled to my fingertips by his gripping power and personality.

But J. Edgar Hoover is more than a personality—by the grace of God and heroic dedication to duty he has made himself an AMERICAN INSTITUTION. Every friend of law and order ought to thank God for such a man in such a position. Let's not pluck any stars out of the diadem of his modest greatness. Verily, his is "the crown that virtue wears." World's Champion Rassler

The Boss said, "You've covering the rassles tonight."

"Yessir," I said, scared half to death on my first day in the sports department.

"You understand about the rassles, don't you," the Boss said.

"Yessir," I said.

"Don't come back here with a volume," the Boss said. "All I want is what happened and why, short and not too sweet. And don't get taken in . . . "

"Yessir," I said.

I was prepared for the hippodrome, I thought. But I was still a little nervous about covering the world's championship match on my first night out on assignment. I did not know then that, barring Sundays, not one night has passed in years in which there was not at least one world's championship match somewhere between two rasslers, and sometimes three or four.

A long, gangular gent from Boston way, Mr. Stephen Casey, who along with a couple of dozen other half-tonners claimed to be the world champion rassler, was risking his title, as it was naively assumed, against Ernie Dusek, the Bohemian burp.

A yipping crowd of 1,750 customers, most of them habitues, was on hand for the customary Thursday thunder.

I missed the first two matches, having decided to hunt up Mr. Casey who had the remarkable record of over 400 victories, as they were called.

I found Mr. Casey just outside the ball-players entrance, communing poetically with the stars. He was a strainer-voiced Irishman, pining for Old Erin, miles away from the howling patrons inside.

"Shure and I'm goin' home," poetized Mr. Casey. "Four brothers I have and a mother, too, over there. And next week I'm sailing to be with them."

"What about Ernie Dusek? Have you ever met him before?"

"Here and there," Casey said, dismissing Mr. Dusek for more important things. "I think I'll bring the brothers back with me for a bit of rassling. I'm a lonely man, Mr. Wood."

I found Ernie Dusek more direct, but no less sweet-natured.

It is a disillusioning thought, but nevertheless a fact, that there is no more sweet-natured profession as a whole than that of rasslers for hire, those merry mastodons of the mat. Once outside the sweating, grunting, punch-rolling hippodrome of the ring, they would put a sewing circle to shame.

"Oh, yes," says Ernie, "I ain't afraid of no Casey, but he's a cute rassler. One of the best."

He was a little embarrassed when I mentioned the world's championship. "I been the world's champion of Canada," says Ernie. "Also of some other points. But I never held the New England world's championship before."

Having tested the pre-battle tempers of the champion and the challenger, and found them saccharine, I was wholly unprepared for their conduct on the mat.

Mr. Dusek climbed through the ropes with an un-Christian sneer on his large puss, and no sooner had the referee turned them loose than the nasty Bohemian grabbed a large chunk of Mr. Casey's leg in his mouth and began to masticate.

An expression akin to pain spread across the Irishman's pan, and his groans could be heard all the way to Boston.

Mrs. O'Sullivan, rassle-patron No. 1, rose from her ringside seat and prodded Mr. Dusek's left leg with a hairpin. Mr. Dusek, although a pacifist in international policy, loosed his teeth from the Casey flesh and snarled at the intrusive lady.

This ungentlemanly action provoked hisses and boos from the sports lovers.

While the Dusek's back was turned Mr. Casey sneaked in a beautiful arm-lock, and Ernie groaned to the stars. But a moment later the Dusek dropped to his knees, flipped Casey on his back, and began beating the Irishman's brains out against a post.

All the Boss' warnings had been in vain. This looked like plain murder to me, and I thought sadly of Mr. Casey's four brothers and mother waiting in Ireland.

The man sitting behind me, large, asthmatic, and bald, had been growing increasingly restive, and the next thing I knew he had grabbed my chair out from under me and flung it into the ring. From a sitting posture I glimpsed the referee picking it off the Dusek's head.

Ernie passed a greasy paw over his cranium lightly, as if brushing off an inconsiderate fly, and renewed his murderous assault on the poetic Irishman.

After about 15 minutes more of murder, mayhem, massacre and riot, they carried Mr. Casey out of the ring, and I thought his title, or one of them at least, had passed to the Dusek. But the referee stopped the cortege at ringside long enough to hold up the Irishman's hand.

Ernie, it seems, had committed a dastardly foul. Exactly what is foul and what is fair I never quite figured out in a year and a half of rassle-watching, but whatever the distinction is—and it changes from time to time—Ernie had transgressed.

Mr. Casey had made a remarkable recovery when I visited his dressing room, and he said he was all ready to leave for dear Old Erin, but I still was too impressed by the apparent fury of the ring action to remember the Boss's injunction.

I wrote five full pages on the great championship battle.

But the Boss was in good humor that day, and when he cut it to three paragraphs he hardly said a word. He was almost as sweet-tempered about it as a world's champion rassler.

Labor Racketeers

ALBERT MILLER recently was sentenced to six months in the workhouse on his plea of guilty to a charge of fraudulent voting in Manhattan. Mr. Miller's probation report showed that he was secretary and treasurer of a local of the Bowling and Billiard Academy Employes Union, a subsidiary of the Building Service Employes International Union. The official list of the B. S. E. I. U. is heavily infested with men with criminal records and veteran racketeers of the Lucky Luciano and Little Augie mobs. It is an outgrowth of a Chicago union racket in which men have been murdered. Miller's police and criminal records date back to 1930, when he was arrested for smuggling in Philadelphia. They include a term of two and one-half years in the New Jersey State Prison and the Rahway Reformatory for robbery in Camden and three months in jail on a similar charge of "disorderly conduct and suspicion" in Merchantville, N. J. Charges of breaking and entering in Philadelphia and of assault and robbery and felonious assault in New York are followed, in each case, by the entry, "Discharged."

Izzy Schwartz, organizer of Local 32-J of the Building Service Employes Union and international representative, by appointment, of George Scalise, the Brooklyn Labor racketeer, was indicted recently, together with his brother, Louie. They are accused of attempting to extort money. Izzy's record, in the files of District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, reports a previous conviction of a morals charge and a sentence of 11 months. Louis has no record. He is president of 32-J.

THE OFFICE of international representative, held by Izzy, is one of great power and financial responsibility. International representatives are answerable only to Scalise, the international president, and removable only by him. Willie Bioff was and, notwithstanding all the revelations concerning his activities and character, remains the representative of George Browne, president of the labor racket of the amusement industry of the United States and Canada.

The president of another local of the building service union has a record of a prison term in Atlanta and Lewisburg, Pa., on a charge of possessing and attempting to pass money orders which had been stolen in the robbery of a postal substation in Worcester, Mass.

There is a conviction on a charge of conspiracy in the record of still another local official of the B. S. E. I. U. in New York whose present duties give him authority to sign jobs in rotation to union members and opportunities to sell those jobs. The conspiracy consisted of a plot with other employes of an office in the government of New York County whereby, over a considerable period, certain fees were misappropriated and book entries were falsified. The man served a term in prison.

The names of these latter two are withheld on the ground that they appear not to be professional hoodlums or associates of hoodlums, except to the extent that such association is unavoidable in the official affairs of an organization dominated by racketeers. William Green, the president of the American Federation of Labor, may have the identifications on request.

Izzy Schwartz, on the other hand, is an old colleague of Scalise and appears to have been the strong character who shoved Scalise to the fore in New York affairs of the union, from which position of prominence he was selected by the Chicago mob for the presidency. Scalise never was elected by the rank and file, directly or indirectly. Louie Schwartz is just Izzy's passenger. He runs to fires with the crowd, as they say in such circles.

Albert Manganaro, secretary-treasurer of local 202 of the Commission Chauffeurs and Drivers of the Teamsters Union, recently was sentenced to from three and one-half to seven years in prison and warned to remain out of union activities on his release, with the admonition that his next conviction would result in a term of from 15 to 30 years.

MANGANARO BEGAN his criminal career as a thief in 1933, when he stole some bags of coffee by just loading them on his truck and driving off. He was charged with grand larceny, but was given a suspended sentence on the plea of petty larcency. He was then shop steward of his union, but in 1934, the year after his trouble, he became a delegate. In 1936 the secretary-treasurer died, and he got the job.

In 1937 he started to shake down merchant-peddlers who purvey fruit and vegetables to New York hotels and restaurants. He threatened to organize the negro helpers around the markets who load the peddlers' trucks. For $100 a truck he offered to give the merchants a favorable contract, and they settled for $1,850. In 1938 he demanded $2,500 but settled for $750. Last year he was being investigated and did not demand a contract.

The negro helpers are not now and never were organized by his union, and the threat to organize them and strike the merchant-peddlers was strictly a stickup, with an A. F. of L. charter as the weapon.

Manganaro is a low-grade hoodlum, and he was advised from the bench that if any harm should befall any of the prosecution's witnesses while he was in prison he would be required to serve the full time.

Thus five more criminals or ex-convicts are added to the A. F. of L. Rogues' Gallery of 100 promised to Mr. Green. They are no giants, but the rank and file do not deal with the giants of the international unions. They deal with the local officers. I will give Mr. Green some giants soon.

LUCKY LUCIANO
The names of his former associates, says Mr. Pegler, are now to be found on the official lists of the Building Service Employees International Union

A Life Of Washington

THE SHADOW of Carl Sandburg's superb life of Abraham Lincoln inevitably falls upon any ambitious American biography published within a few months of it. It is unfair, but one cannot help comparing Nathaniel Stephenson and Waldo Dunn's "George Washington" (Oxford, 2 vols., $10) with the Sandburg masterpiece. It is a competent narrative life, probably the best all-round record available today, with all the resources of modern scholarship behind it. It lacks, of course, Sandburg's imaginative genius. Two miracles do not occur within a twelvemonth.

Nathaniel Wright Stephenson, professor of history at Scripps College, had planned this book as the crowning achievement of his life. When he died, in 1935, he had written a first draft of the 650 pages which carry the story to Washington's inauguration as President. It is the best part of the book. Stephenson's colleague, Waldo Hilary Dunn, professor of English, revised the whole and added the final 250 pages.

Washington is no easy subject for a biographer. The stature of the man almost defies analysis. He commanded the respect of his contemporaries from his youth; he dominated the men about him to the end. Yet it is hard to put one's finger upon the secret of his power or of his charm. Call it moral character if you will; that is still no answer to the riddle, for many little men have had his simple goodness. Although Messrs. Stephenson and Dunn attempt to deny it, there was something cold about the man; he lacked the endearing littlenesses of Lincoln; there is no record that any of his associates ever saw him with his feet upon the table. We have seen too many marble statues of him; it is hard to believe that he was a passionate devotee of the Virginia reel well into middle life; that he could ride into battle "like an angel from heaven" (however that may be), that he was a good gambler, a sound drinker and liked a round of after-dinner singing. The facts are in the record; it is hard to assemble them into a believable picture.

But the story swings on, through the slow years of the Revolution, when his leadership was challenged and any man of lesser resolution would have resigned the burden, into the peaceful Mount Vernon years that preceded his Presidency. He burned himself out in war: he was a tired man when inaugurated, and the narrative seems to lag when it follows him to Philadelphia. Mr. Dunn, historian of the later years, makes Thomas Jefferson the devil of those later years, as the "bland, plausible . . . deep, sly" Benjamin Franklin was the target of Mr. Stephenson's prejudices. Washington's biographers, somehow, never seem able to forgive his adversaries as did Washington himself. From Governor Dinwiddie through Franklin and Patrick Henry and John Adams to Jefferson, he had the genius to differ hotly, then coolly to respect. It was another facet of his genius.

Aerial Anti-Climax

Planes Vs. Guns

EVER SINCE the first World War the average layman has heard and read so much about importance of aircraft in modern warfare that he has come to expect miracles of them and is rather astonished when the miracle does not occur.

The weaknesses of aircraft as fighting instruments, abundantly disclosed in the recent Spanish Civil War and in the undeclared war still raging in the Orient, have not yet become common knowledge except to close students of war. Even among these, some air power enthusiasts are still loath to recognize these weaknesses. But the current British naval operations off Scandinavia may give even the man on the street an opportunity to estimate air power at something like its true military value.

GERMANY'S AIR FORCE has been heralded far and wide as the very last word, not only insofar as individual aircraft are concerned, but as possibly the decisive factor in the war. Even if a small part of the claims which have been made for aircraft are justified, it would be a very simple matter for Germany to sink the British and French ships which are contesting the present effort of Germany to break the British-French North Sea front and to carry the war into Scandinavia with her combined land, sea and air forces.

All conditions appear to have been favorable, but according to the press accounts the great German air armada is not only not breaking the British-French grip on the North Sea but is unable to afford full protection to her transports which are crossing the Skagerrak.

THE REASON that aircraft cannot perform the expected miracles is that the gun remains the most accurate, most reliable and most economical weapon of destruction. Every reader of stories about sea operations against land forces has learned that the gun mounted on land is relatively far more destructive than a similar gun mounted on a rolling and pitching ship. With this point in mind, it requires very little stretch of the imagination to appreciate that aircraft are at a still greater disadvantage against anti-aircraft gunfire from land and ships, not only because of the superiority of the gun platform but also because of the greater protection which can be given the gun on land and at sea.

As a matter of fact, the aircraft enthusiasts have long since discarded the gun as their major weapon of offense against the land and sea forces and have adopted the bomb, and to a limited extent the torpedo. Realizing their vulnerability at reasonable bombing heights and their inaccuracy at extreme heights, they have attempted to overcome the inherent weakness of aircraft by adopting the well advertised "dive-bombing" attacks.

Their success on the North Sea front during the first seven months of the war, combined with submarine offensive, has been negligible. Nevertheless, it has been sufficient to warrant much concern as to what would be the result when operations were undertaken which would give a reasonably thorough test of the effectiveness of "dive-bombing" and other air attacks on ships. Such operations appear to be the combined land-sea-air offensive now being undertaken by Germany against Norway, which as previously stated, are for the purpose of breaking the British-French North Sea front.

Even on the basis of our limited information it seems fair to conclude that the efficiency of aircraft in such operations has been exaggerated.

TO THIS writer it appears that the German offensive against the North Sea front has been carried on unceasingly by both sea and air forces since the beginning of the war. In the Scandinavian operations, Germany has now thrown in her land forces. But the objective remains the same—that is, to break the British-French North Sea front.

Sooner or later, Germany may initiate operations on the other two fronts, either or both, which must be broken if she is to impose her peace terms. Obviously, then, these fronts are vital to the British-French interests. These fronts are the Maginot Line and the Eastern Mediterranean. The former is held primarily by the French land forces, supported by air and sea power, and the latter by the combined sea power of Great Britain and France.

What part air power is to play in the effort to break these fronts is now being watched closely by the entire world. At present it does seem that air power has failed dismally to perform the wonders which had been so freely predicted. Especially has the great German air armada failed to perform them.

THERE ARE those who have held that air power must remain closely interwoven as elements of land and sea forces and that the development of an independent air force is wasted effort. But even though the independent air forces in Europe may fail to do all that the man on the street has been led to expect of them, it does not follow necessarily that the theory of independent air force is wrong. The fact remains that war on land is different from war at sea, and neither can reach its highest development if bound to the other. The same is believed to be true of war in the air. The supreme test is in whether it is possible to coordinate the three arms. In Great Britain that job has been entrusted to Mr. Winston Churchill.

It seems that an answer to the question is near at hand in a locality renowned in British naval traditions—the locality where Nelson refused to obey the order directing him to retreat.

FIELD MARSHAL GOERING
Has the great naval struggle now raging off the coasts of northwestern Europe shown the power of his much-dreaded air armada, and, in fact, of air forces in general, to have been greatly overrated? See the discussion of this question by Capt. Donald C. Bingham in the article at the left

Sacrificing Unity

Third Term And Foreign Policy

THE SO-CALLED inner circle of New Dealers think of events in Europe in relation to their effect upon a third term. To them, everything is grist for the third-term mill. A year ago, before war began, Mr. Roosevelt must have a third term to prevent the war—Mr. Roosevelt was at that time making efforts to that end. After the war began last September 1, Mr. Roosevelt must have a third term in order to avoid American involvement, or at least to conduct our foreign relations under conditions of war abroad. Three months ago, when there was talk of peace in Europe, Mr. Roosevelt must have a third term in order to promote the peace. Since last Monday again Mr. Roosevelt must have a third term because the war has become active.

All this is the attitude of the New Dealers around the President. Whether it is the attitude of the President himself is a question. Some judgment thinks that Mr. Roosevelt began his course of silence about another term merely for reasons of domestic politics; that he wished to preserve some power over Congress, that he wished to avoid that loss of influence which is the usual fate of a President serving his last two years. He would keep Congress, and his party leaders, deferential to him by keeping them apprehensive that he might continue to be President. This judgment says that Mr. Roosevelt, having embarked on this course for reasons of domestic politics, is now embarrassed by the effect his course has on our foreign relations.

That Mr. Roosevelt's course has an effect on our foreign policy hardly needs stating. That the effect is unfortunate is a tenable judgment. In whatever attitude we take on the many, sudden, and increasingly complex problems thrust upon us by the war, it is desirable that the President should have national unity behind him. And the existence of the belief that persons close to him wish to use the foreign situation as a leverage for a third term—the existence of that is the most certain possible impediment to unity of support for the President, in Congress and in the country.

It is conceivable there are steps which the President ought to take for protection of America's interests. And it is conceivable he may be deterred from taking those steps, by the feeling that if he takes them his motive might be misinterpreted as having a relation to a third term. If it were clearly and unequivocally known that the President does not entertain any thought of a third term and will not accept one, he could have, in our foreign relations, such a strength of leadership and such a unity of support as statesmen rarely have.

AS THINGS stand, Mr. Roosevelt seems to have an attitude touched with restraint, perhaps with frustration. He makes the impression of thinking that our people ought to be more aware of the seriousness of the war in its bearing on our country, and of being faintly impatient because they are not. At a press conference this week, when someone asked him about the bearing of Germany's seizure of Denmark on Denmark's American possession, Greenland, he said he hopes this would make America think about our relation to the war. He went on to say he had been studying the status of Greenland, and had concluded it is a part of the American continent, which brings it within our Monroe Doctrine. The Monroe Doctrine would be even more clearly concerned if Germany should seize Holland, which has possessions in the West Indies and South America.

In scores of ways, developments in the war are apt to bring it closer to us. This Mr. Roosevelt knows. And he makes the impression of thinking that America does not sufficiently take this fact in. But neither the American people nor the people of any other country can be as completely informed about foreign relations as about domestic issues. In the field of foreign relations every people must rely on their statesmen possessing information which is not generally accessible. They must have confidence in their statesmen, must accept on faith what their statesmen do. This taking things on faith is facilitated if there is complete understanding that a statesman, in what he does or recommends, is absolutely free from possibility of being moved by any motive of personal political interest. Those who are urging Mr. Roosevelt to be receptive to a third term are not helping him in his conduct of our foreign relations.

This condition will become more serious as time goes on. Up to the Democratic National Convention, it does not matter so much. Everybody knows Mr. Roosevelt can get a third nomination from his party if he wants it, and that he can get it without regard to any development in our foreign relations.

BUT IF Mr. Roosevelt were nominated, once the campaign was on, the country would have an unhappy time. The third term question would be inextricably mixed with the question of our relation to the war. The campaign issue would be the war, as it was in 1916, when Wilson ran for a second term. Mr. Roosevelt would be two things. He would be President of the Unite States, responsible for our foreign relations, at an extremely critical time. But he would also be something else. He would be a candidate for reelection, under circumstances provocative of deep resentment on the part of the opposition party, approximately half the people, at least. He might take steps as President, steps forced upon him by developments in Europe—but he would be interpreted as, or accused of, taking those steps, not in his role of President, but in his role of candidate. He might know that, as President, he ought to take certain steps, but he might be tempted to refrain from fear of the effect on himself as candidate, and on his party. During several critical months from July on, the Executive would be hobbled, the country hopelessly divided.

Hearing Set Today On Capper Bill For Conventions

A hearing will be held today at 10 a. m. in the Senate District Committee room on the Capper bill to provide for the election of delegates to the national political conventions. Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, will preside.

The measure, which was drafted by John P. Mullen, Washington attorney, has been lying around the Capitol for several years. It was revived and set for hearing upon request of Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas.

Machinery for the election of a national committeeman and a national committeewoman from the District as well as delegates and alternates to all political conventions is provided in the measure. These jobs are now filled by appointment.

Sea And Air Battle Since Monday

Conflict in 5th Night as British Mine Baltic Entrance

By the Associated Press

London, April 12.—The naval and air conflict of the north slowed in this, its fifth night, while British warships planted a 400-mile minefield to keep German troops, supply and warships from getting home from Norway.

As reckoned from London, the German losses stand:

Four cruisers, 3 destroyers, several submarines and as many as 20 troop and supply ships, and at least 21 planes.

The damaged German ships, by the same reckoning:

One battleship, one cruiser, three destroyers.

The British concede they have lost:

Damaged: The battleship Rodney, by a bomb; the battle cruiser Renown, by shells.

(The Germans claim the British have lost seven destroyers, six sunk in the vicinity of Narvik and one elsewhere. They say, further, that German air action has damaged four British battleships, two battle cruisers, three cruisers, an aircraft carrier and two transports. The Germans admit that Norwegian shore guns sank the cruisers Karlsruhe and Blucher, but concede no outright naval losses to the British.)

The preliminaries to this far-flung engagement on stormy northern seas came Sunday night when British planes, on scout patrol, found the German battleship Scharnhorst, with cruisers and destroyers flanking her, moving northward.

Out to sea sped the British battle fleet to intercept the Germans. Then:

MONDAY

British warships laid minefields off Norway's coasts to block the iron ore sea corridor to Germany. The British destroyer Glowworm, hurrying to rejoin her sister ships after pausing to pick up a man overboard, was caught by two German destroyers and sunk.

The British home fleet, sailing out of Scapa Flow, and the mine-laying force, lying off the Norwegian northern port of Narvik, tried to trap the German battle fleet and its troop transports between them.

But the Germans slipped through.

TUESDAY

German troops occupied Denmark and seized Norwegian ports, landing from warships.

The British home fleet, sprawled in the waters off Bergen, was heavily attacked by German planes. The great flagship, H. M. S. Rodney, was hit by a heavy bomb, but her half-foot of deck armor saved her. Caught by the raiders as they were rejoining the fleet, the cruiser Aurora and the destroyer Gurkha were pounded with bombs. The Gurkha, heavily hit, slipped beneath the waves.

(That is the British story. But the Germans say this aerial foray resulted in heavy damage to four battleships, two battle cruisers, two heavy cruisers and two transports, in addition to the destroyer which the British admit was sunk.)

Meanwhile a German U-boat, heading, presumably, for Scapa Flow, was being sunk off the Orkneys by H. M. S. Zulu, a British destroyer.

Inshore along the Norwegian coast, momentous hours were slipping by.

Norwegian shore guns blazed with deadly effectiveness at Oslo and Kristians and, on the south coast, sinking the Blucher and Karlsruhe as they maneuvered to protect transports landing troops.

The Norwegian cruiser and minelayer, Olav Trygvasson, in Oslo Fjord, was reported to have sent to the bottom a German warship believed to have been the cruiser Emden.

The Scharnhorst, fast, sleek 26,000-ton German battleship, ran away from the 32,000-ton Renown, aided by a blizzard and a smokescreen from a protecting cruiser of the Hipper class. But Renown's guns hit her twice. Renown, herself, was pierced by a dud shell and another projectile carried away her main aerial.

WEDNESDAY

At dawn, five British destroyers, guns blazing, swept into the waterways to Narvik where, as Winston Churchill put it, the fierce fighting was worthy of any in the proud records of the British navy. Six German destroyers constituted the opposing force.

Britain lost two, the Hunter and the Hardy; two more were damaged, one badly. (The Germans said all four were sunk). A German destroyer was torpedoed, the British said, three others left afire. A number of German transport and supply ships and one ammunition vessel were sunk.

At Bergen Fjord, meantime, repeated waves of Royal Air Force bombers and, at dusk, a swarm of fleet air arm planes were attacking a cluster of German warships.

The R. A. F. men reported back that one light cruiser was hit, then vanished. The fleet air arm planes, scattering 500-pound bombs, got a second cruiser. A long trail of oil, seen later by scouting planes, marked the spot.

All this while other British warships, shelling their way into the Skagerrak, blasting at the Oslo Fjord and getting as far as the entrance to the Kattegat, just off Swedish shores, were erecting a barricade of death for German transport ships packed with troops to reinforce the original invaders of Norway.

Churchill, the man of the hour, has declined to "lift the veil" from this series of engagements. From Swedish shore reports and meager accounts brought out of Norway by refugees and by other means it appears, however, that the British sank at least two and perhaps as many as eight transports; that one German warship was torpedoed; that others may have been destroyed; that the British men o' war effected at least a partial entry into Oslo Fjord and that they may have tried to land some men there, and at least six and perhaps eight German planes were shot down in dusk raids on Scotland and Scapa Flow.

THURSDAY

British torpedo planes attacked German ships at Trondheim, hitting a destroyer. British landing parties occupied the Faroe Islands to keep the Germans from getting them. These Danish islands are but 250 miles from Scapa Flow, the British naval base.

British warships continued to attack in the Skagerrak and Kattegat. British bombers raided German-occupied Stavanger airdrome.

(The Germans said their bomber caught a big British flotilla at sea, damaging an aircraft carrier and a cruiser. The Germans said, too, that they repelled an attempt by "light English forces" to force an entrance into Trondheim Fjord, and sank two more British destroyers off Narvik.)

FRIDAY

The British laid their new mine field to cork the Baltic. During the night a German munition ship was sunk, a supply ship damaged, a British trawler captured. British planes flew to the attack at Kristiansand Fjord, pounding away at two German warships. There was a great sky battle and five British planes were shot down. At least two German planes, said the air ministry, were destroyed. Other British planes winged over the North Sea and Skagerrak, seeking naval prey.

A new Trondheim battle seemed to be taking shape. Five German warships, one of them a pocket-battleship, were reported unofficially to be lying off that port, which the British already had attacked from the sea and air.

(The Germans said the British lost eight of their most modern bombers in attacks on German bases on the coast of Norway. This may have been the German version of the battle over Kristiansand Fjord.)

Just For Protection

("We are taking over parts of Norway for its own protection." —Berlin statement.)

Why do you mind my beating you
Into a state of sad dejection?
Why worry if you're black and blue? . . .
I'm doing it for your protection.

If I come crashing through your house
And give no reason, none at all, sir,
Why should you squawk or kick or grouse?
I'm merely aiding you, that's all, sir!

If I then grab you by the throat
And make excuses very brittle,
Why must you any fear denote?
I'm just protecting you a little!

If I then throw you to the floor
And treat you like a savage stranger,
What makes you act a little sore?
Am I not saving you from danger?

Should I next jump upon your chest
And grind both heels into your torso,
I'm only acting for the best—
What makes you scream and yell and roar so?

If you are minding your own biz
When suddenly I do you dirt, sir,
Why must you ask, "Hey, what is this?" . . .
You ought to know I wouldn't hurt you.

If I bounce cobbles off your head
And leave you battered, bruised and bloody,
What makes you think I am ill bred?
It's all for your protection, buddy.

Should I relieve you of your dough,
And shove you 'neath some rug to smother,
Why do you label me a foe?
I'm doing you a good turn, brother!

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, April 12.

THE OLD GAG about travel being broadening is unquestionably true, and how about the life of a pretty blonde girl who sits all day in the cashier's booth of a movie cathedral and sees the multi-colored life of Times Square pass by, or stop and dicker for a ducat?

HUGHES

At any rate, there isn't much that Roberta Ritchie, who makes change at the wicket of the Paramount Theater here, doesn't know about the life of the giddy gulch. She sees or does business with them all—would-be crashers, fresh mugs, boys who would date, and the change-fumblers, and, of course, the shadier characters who frequent those parts. A half-million people pass her window on a normal day, and for seven years she's been watching the show and dishing out tickets. Roberta says that when a hit film or a hit band is in the house, she handles as many as 1,000 customers an hour, which is fast work with the dollars.

Her worst woe, she avers, are the women who fiddle through their messy handbags, and I can believe it, since it takes me 15 minutes to excavate a telephone nickel from mine. Lots of the boys insist on cracking wise, and others do their best to date her up, for she is very pretty indeed. But she slaps them down with some casual crack about her husband might not like it, and they bustle into the theater or else off about somebody else's business.

"When I'm busiest," she says, "I only see the customers' hands." And many of those must be no treat, either. But she likes it, has a pom dog named Midgie, and likes to play bingo. I'd like to have a crack at her job for one day, wouldn't you?

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—I saw little Luise Rainer, the Viennese star, standing on the corner of Madison avenue and Fifty-fifth street yesterday, chatting with a fiddler friend. With April in the air, her face was truly lovely.

Our recent primary voting day turned up one unhappy incident which showed that we girls are now electors in perfect equality with the lordly males. Miss Betty Slohr, a 23-year-old secretary, was pinched on a charge of illegal voting. That makes us full-fledged voters, all right, but I hope we all hold out for at least a pound for our ballots. A buck or two is beneath the traditional dignity of our sex.

Big benefit for French relief, with our dozen top milliners designing hats which were auctioned off at the dinner and fashion show, raised $11,000 for the cause and was an unusual affair because the temperamental hat people got together afterward and had a good gabfest at Lindy's Broadway restaurant, made famous in Damon Runyon's short stories. For one evening all artistic and business hatchets were buried, and Lilly Dache, John and Fred, Sally Victor and Florence Reichman, all aces, sat around, tearing herring and having fun. The next day, of course, they were at it again, in a nice but often kittenish way.

The Same Gown—Sophisticated or Naive

THE FIRST MRS. DE WINTER—No character from fiction (excepting always Scarlett O'Hara) has caused more commotion than Rebecca de Winter, Daphne du Maurier's ghostly heroine. With the filming of the novel, "Rebecca," there is even more conjecture over how the first Mrs. de Winter might have looked and dressed. Here is the way Kiviette, costume designer, conceives her—dark and vivid in an expensively simple black chiffon, its sleek bodice striped in black and white satin. A local store has the gown and Kiviette's entire "Rebecca" luxury wardrobe.

THE SECOND MRS. DE WINTER—To prove how worldly—or chaste—a gown may become through color or sheen alone, we here see the second Mrs. de Winter as portrayed on the screen by winsome Joan Fontaine. Although her gown is identical in line and cut to Rebecca's, she looks far less sophisticated. The reason lies only in the fabric of the bodice, dull pastel jersey, a modest replacement of Rebecca's stripes. Subtly enough, this toning down of fabric pattern and sheen changes the entire character of a gown and mood, although the silhouette is unchanged.

No Skid, No Slip For Lingerie Now Featured

Undergarments Were Styled to Overcome Skidding Tendency

By Marshall Adams

The Post Fashion Editor.

IT TOOK a couple of novices to revolutionize slippery undergarment designs. We refer to the "Molder" and "Sleeker" slips which have just arrived at a Washington store, modeled from the original sketches of a coed and a housewife whose individual demands on lingerie forced them into styling in spite of themselves.

Totally unlike the average slip, which either climbs the waist or curls around the neck, both the Molder and the Sleeker have been advance-tested and approved by local salesgirls, office forces and similar toilers. Both slips are controlled by zippers, the Molder with a side slide fastener and satin bands outlining the uplifted bra line and flattening the midriff. This was the idea of Mrs. Marshall Page (a Louisiana homemaker) for suave molding, and in its tea-rose or Blossom white crepe with opaquely finished (transparent) front panel, it really is pretty enough to be displayed minus a dress.

A University of California student designed the Sleeker with a slide fastener clear down the front to the waist and with reinforcement of bosom and midriff control. This slip is cut on the straight, minus side seams to eliminate fraying. Even though a coed thought up this slick idea, due to her own classmates' annoyance over constantly splitting seams, collegians have no corner on the Sleeker, for it may be had in sizes up to 40, but is collegiately priced at $2.

Bra Expert In Town

Also revolutionary is the Edith Lances brassiere, which, although not new this season, is still news to women who have not fallen heir to its uplifting influence. This bra is sculptural, just as the Sleeker and Molder are. Mrs. Lances herself, creator of the first real structural bra, is now in a Washington shop demonstrating her upheaval device. It has noncut straps and lifts the bust from below. Her personally fitted bra is especially good for expectant mothers or for "problem" bust-lines that need wise control, not binding submission.

'Courageous Fear' Essential in Fight Against Cancer

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

The first and most important element in the fight against cancer is the progress and improvement in technical methods of care. The second great weapon is research. The third is education of the public. As the first two claim new victories, which they are every year doing, education becomes more and more important, because the cure of cancer is essentially the individual's responsibility.

It is a personal problem. It cannot be checked or controlled by public health vigilance. It does not depend upon any environmental factor, such as the purity of water, or uncontaminated food, or quarantine of affected individuals, which are weapons in other diseases and are under the management of the public health departments.

The greatest element in the good results that we are having in cancer is what is called "courageous fear." "Courageous fear" consists in the determination to find out about suspicious symptoms early, the nerve to face the facts and the willingness to submit to treatment that will eliminate the danger.

How It Is Helped

Cancer control is helped by education through (1) public talks, magazine and newspaper articles, (2) radio talks, and (3) the use of libraries, leading to early treatment by (1) surgery, (2) radium and (3) x-ray, the only approved treatments.

The new low temperature treatment is a possible adjunct which has not been thoroughly evaluated as yet. But we can say definitely that it controls intractable pain in late stages.

A most important part of the educational campaign is to insist that these methods are the only ones which up to the present have been found to have any value. It cannot be too emphatically insisted that the use of serum of any kind yet discovered, is just as dangerous as the cancer itself. This goes for all other forms of treatments—pastes, caustics, etc. Their use wastes the precious time when real treatment could be employed.

The Watchword

Early diagnosis, early consultation about suspicious matters, is the watchword of successful treatment. It is here, particularly, that the individual must be willing to aid.

The commonest forms of curable cancer can be easily recognized by the person who has them. These are cancer of the skin and of the breast.

In early stages skin cancer has been proved to be curable in 95 per cent of cases (when taken early). When taken late, it is curable in only 30 per cent of cases. Cancer of the breast is curable early in 75 per cent of cases and in only 20 per cent of cases when allowed to drift.

Consult your doctor at once about any sore on the mouth, lip or tongue that does not heal up in 10 days or two weeks; about persistent white areas on the tongue, especially in the case of smokers; any lump, lack of symmetry, persistent soreness of the breast or colored discharge from the nipple; any irregular bleeding at any time of life; any lump or sore on the skin that does not heal in 10 days or two weeks; any mole, or wart, or wen on the skin which develops tenderness, changes in its texture or begins to grow.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man Tells Former Wife That His Second Marriage Was a Mistake; She Wants to Reclaim Him

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Due to financial reverses, my husband and I gave up our home eight years ago, storing the furniture. I was forced to take our daughter, 7, and go to live with my mother-in-law, 700 miles away, while he got a room—"until times were better," so he said. With no family ties and plenty of time on his hands, he managed to get around to parties, etc., although he had no money to spend.

A very sympathetic and understanding widow, with a lovely home, took him under her wing and he became quite infatuated with her. His visits to us dropped off. I was miserable living with his mother; being watched and criticized, and so I suggested to my husband that, since times were better, we rejoin him. But he put us off. Two years of this went on and I heard rumors that he was spending all his time with this widow and her child.

I took the problem to his mother, who went to see him, after which he came to see us the following week-end. He said he loved us and I asked him to prove it by making a home for us . . . It was nearly two years later that he called me long distance one day to ask if I could come immediately, as he had an apartment. In the meantime, I had decided to have my mother live with us, when we were back together. So the three of us joined him. But he acted strangely and after a few days he told me, "It's no use." He said he couldn't be happy with us, and it would be best if we got a divorce.

I got the divorce on grounds of desertion and was awarded custody of the child and support for both of us. Within the year he married the widow. That was about four years ago and it appears now that they are not at all happy and he is turning back to me. Our daughter visited them once in their home and she could see they didn't get along well.

Recently, my husband had to see me to discuss our daughter's future, and we spent quite a little time together. He showed me every consideration and affection; and now he tells me what a fool he was to let the other woman pull the wool over his eyes; that he was led astray, and that he is perfectly miserable and sorry for what happened. He says he would like to make it up to me in some way, but at the same time he doesn't want to hurt his present wife, as she befriended him when he was down and out. He says he no longer loves her, however.

I still love him and always will. I am wondering if I should see him occasionally, with the idea of getting what happiness I can in the present; and also in the hope that I can eventually persuade him to divorce this women and come back to us. Or should I try to forget him? I am here in Washington on a visit for the time being, and would like your answer as soon as possible.

While here, I have talked to him several times and each time he says he will try to spend an evening with me; but doesn't want to arouse his wife's suspicions as she is very jealous. He says I will just have to be patient. It would make me very happy to be able to hurt her as she has hurt me; because I blame her only for our divorce. Until recently, I had given up all hope of ever reclaiming him; and then he came back and revived my love. I will thank you for telling me what to do.

B. P. V.

Husband's Squawk A Twice-Told Tale

DEAR B. P. V.: The situation, as it stands at present, is a pretty sordid set-up, in my opinion. And what makes it sordid is your husband's snivelling attitude toward his alleged predicament, and your unscrupulous readiness to knife your successor in the back, even as you think she knifed you. You ask, "What to do?" My advice is—play fairly. Be decent. Keep out of the picture. Behave as you wish the other woman might have behaved, when your husband was playing the field behind your back eight years ago.

And keep this in mind: Your former husband's squawk against his present wife is a twice-told tale. What he says to you today, about her, was previously said to her, about you. He wouldn't be satisfied with or completely loyal to any wife; and no sooner is he hitched that he begins to wonder why he did it, and to think how joyful it would be if he could get unhitched. But I don't think he has any real desire to get a second divorce; and even if he finally got one—or were divorced for good reason — I doubt that he would remarry you. He's just handing you a line, as an easily impressionable lady—now that the novelty had worn off his alliance with the big hearted widow.

I think you would be wading in muddy waters to no purpose whatever in trying to claim him as a sometime beau; and in trying to gum up the works of his present marriage. Whatever social exchange is necessary with him, for the purpose of jointly planning your daughter's future, should be rather on the formal and impersonal side, with sentimental rehash and flirtatious "consideration" absolutely tabu. Such meetings should rightly be regarded as business conferences and not as potential love trysts.

Your desire to take jungle revenge (i. e., an eye for an eye; a tooth for a tooth) on his present wife, puts you in the same moral classification with her. What she has (in your eyes) done, you would do if you could, as you blandly submit. Indeed, you are already trying to do it—in encouraging HER husband to see you evenings, if and when he can outwit her "jealous" watchfulness.

Incidentally, if she is jealous, it probably means she has had good reason, before now, to question his fidelity; which means, in turn, that you have more rivals for his affection than his wife alone. And I imagine, if the whole truth were known it would develop that his present wife is as sorely dismayed with the bargain she got, as he professes to be. Put him out of your heart completely, and write him off as "good riddance of bad rubbish." M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

New Chairs Will Perk Up Dining Room

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

We're not an habitual crusader, but there is one cause that's near to our heart. That's the defense of dining rooms. We're sure that plenty of families who dispense with the amenities of this room will rue the day . . . for dining should be a gracious ceremony, an occasion, if you please, that deserves a proper setting, a certain privacy. So—if you're a lady with a drooping dining room, don't eliminate it arbitrarily, at least till you've considered ways to perk it up.

Cure-Alls

A pair of upholstered arm chairs at the head and foot instead of the usual wooden arm chairs makes more of a change than you'd think possible. Or else slip covers for all the side chairs in the same fabric as that used for generous swooping draperies at the windows. A very fresh recipe, indeed, for a tired dining room, is to use a glass top metal table and metal chairs for a seasonal freshener if not for the year around. Leather is a smart cure-all for almost any ailment a dining room might have. Modern leather covered chairs used with traditional furniture can be very stimulating. If you have a corner window or a bay window you really owe yourself a large bird cage of elegance in your dining room to house love birds or canaries. Or if you have a hand with plants, have a "flower place" in your sunny dining window. The real complaint of many dining rooms is that they have too much furniture in them. Better buy fewer, finer pieces if you want real distinction in your dining room.

Your Figure, Madame

Lily Pons Lives On Rigid Sleep And Diet Regime

IF THE infatuated Lochinvar who rode out of the west to camp on Lily Pons' doorstep had even suspected what a minutely scheduled life the average celebrity leads, he could have saved the train fare. Seeing a star tete-a-tete is something that takes arranging. Every appointment has to be fitted into a rigid schedule of vocal lessons, singing lessons, sittings for photographs, interviews, phonograph recordings, personal appearances and charity performances—not to mention rehearsals and costume fittings!

At first glance, there are a lot of advantages to being famous. Fame carries with it an aura of glamour. It would be very nice to have the world at one's feet, get red roses by the bale and circulate exclusively in cafe society. Truly, a celebrity's life is a glamorous one—what the public sees of it. But so much work goes on behind the scenes that there isn't much chance to have fun.

No Night Clubbing

For instance, Miss Pons never goes to night clubs or parties. She adores the opera and meant to go two or three nights a week this last season—she managed to get there three times during the entire season! She hopes it will be different next year. In order to get done all the things that are scheduled for her, she has to keep up her vitality. Therefore, she leads a very quiet life, aside from her career, and one of the most important things to her is nine hours sleep each night.

On her doctor's orders, she takes mineral and vitamin tablets daily. She is careful of her diet, which includes quantities of fruits and vegetables, and enough meat. After she has worked hard for a long time, she loses four or five pounds and only rest will bring her weight back up to the 105 pounds that she considers perfect for her height of five feet two inches. During the two summer months she has off, she spends virtually every day out of doors at her country place, storing up vitality for the next season. She likes to just lie in the sand and soak up sun, but she swims a lot.

Work in the garden to counteract nervous strain is the advice petite Lily Pons, opera star, gives to career women

Her favorite exercise, however, is gardening. It is restful and it's exercise. She has a really lovely figure: Bust, 32 inches; waist, 22 inches; hips, 32 inches.

Beauty Tips

She has two "beauty tips" which she passes along to other women. The first is to drink plenty of water. She likes 10 or 12 glasses a day and says that when she forgets and doesn't drink a lot of water, she notices the effect immediately on her skin. It is unusual for a Frenchwoman to drink water, but in France the climate is damp and in this country comparatively dry.

Her other tip is to have a daily foot massage—give it to yourself! She finds it very soothing to tired nerves. Use both hands and occasionally apply olive oil to lubricate the skin.

A Spring-Like Touch for Sunday Morning Breakfast

NOW'S the time to give your Sunday breakfast table a spring-like touch with Baked Eggs in Petal Cups. Heap the bread tray with spicy sugar buns, bring in a generous pot of rich fragrant coffee—then sit down and enjoy the luxury of this best-of-all mornings with the family.

Breakfast Menu

Strawberry Fruit Rings

Eggs in Petal Cups — Broiled Bacon

Sugar Buns — Coffee

Strawberry Fruit Rings—A gay way to serve breakfast fruit. Simply arrange alternate sections of chilled grapefruit and orange in a ring on individual plates. Fill center of each ring with fresh sugared strawberries.

Eggs in Petal Cups—Cut slices of bread into petal shapes with sharp scissors, allowing one slice for each petal (save leftover bread for a pudding). Line shallow individual buttered custard cups with bread petals, and brush with melted butter. Drop a raw egg into each, dust with salt and pepper and dot with butter. Bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees, until egg white is set and petal edges are crisp—about 15 minutes. Tuck tiny sprigs of parsley between petals. Place on serving plate and surround with curls of broiled bacon.

Shampooing for Old Furnishings

Spring cleaning is largely a matter of putting away the winter furnishings and making the house comfortable for warm weather. The less the rooms contain in the way of heavy rugs and hangings, pictures, mirrors, and bric-a-brac, the cooler they will be and the easier to keep in order. Fiber rugs, sheer curtains, linen or cotton furniture covers, and shelves and mantels bare of ornamentation give women a head start on the road to warm weather comfort and a leisurely way of life.

Naturally rugs and draperies, woolen blankets, and heavy clothes need to be washed or dry-cleaned before they are stored away to make them less attractive to moths.

400 Ignore Weather to Attend the Reception After Patricia Hurley-Henry Gwynn Wedding

Belmont Plantation Scene of Marriage Of Popular Capitalite

By Hope Ridings Miller.

AS LOVELY A BRIDE as I have ever seen, Mrs. Henry Beall Gwynn, her husband, and members of their bridal party greeted more than 400 guests who drove through rain and snow yesterday to attend the breakfast following one of the outstanding weddings of the season.

Historic Belmont plantation, the Hurley estate near Leesburg, Va., was the scene of the event that joined in marriage one of Washington's prominent young physicians and the first of last season's debutantes to become a bride.

The former Patricia Hurley is the daughter of one-time Secretary of War and Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, of Leesburg and Washington, while her husband is the son of Dr. and Mrs. William C. Gwynn, of Washington. Parents of both the bride and bridegroom stood with the wedding party to receive the long line of guests, who arrived at 1 o'clock for a breakfast and reception that lasted until midafternoon.

Hurleys Have 'Friday Luck'

It didn't just happen—that the former Miss Hurley selected a wedding date that fell on Friday. She purposely chose that day of the week because it is an especially lucky one in her family. Her parents were married on Friday, and her father was born on Friday. Furthermore, he received his Cabinet appointment on Friday.

The nuptial ceremony took place at high noon in the blue room of the historic mansion, which was banked with white azaleas for the occasion. Completely covered with blossoms was the famous mantel which was given by the Marquis Lafayette to an early owner, and which was flanked by tall cathedral candles to outline the improvised altar.

While the Rev. Arthur O'Leary, president of Georgetown University officiated, Sidney's orchestra played the nuptial music. Given in marriage by her father, the bride appeared in an exquisite gown of ivory satin made on princess lines with a full, circular skirt which terminated in a sweeping train. The long sleeves were finished with cuffs to match the collar, both being fashioned of rose point lace which had been worn by the bridegroom's great-grandmother, the late Mrs. Henry D. Beall, of Lynchburg, Va.

Orange Blossoms Flown From Florida

Also formerly owned by Mrs. Beall was the rose point veil, mounted on tulle and falling from a rose point lace cap, wreathed in pearls, and a spray of orange blossoms sent by plane from Florida. The bride carried an ivory prayer book, which her grandmother, Mrs. Henry B. Wilson, and her mother had carried in their weddings. A diamond pin and a string of pearls were her ornaments.

Mrs. Gwynn Tunure, sister of the bridegroom, was matron of honor. Her blue chiffon frock was made with a fitted bodice buttoned down the front and a billowing skirt, and was worn with a small blue hat, trimmed in matching grosgrain ribbon. Her flowers were blue delphiniums.

Miss Ruth Hurley Is Maid of Honor

Maid of honor was pretty Miss Ruth Hurley, sister of the bride, who was gowned in yellow chiffon, made similar to Mrs. Tunure's gown, and she carried Talisman roses. Little Mary Hope Hurley, another sister, was flower girl, wearing a frock of blue organdy made with a long skirt fashioned with ruffles and a blue straw hat. She carried a basket of sweetheart roses.

William C. Gwynn, jr., was best man for his brother.

Following the wedding, the bridal party took their places in line to receive the guests, who flocked to the Hurley home from Washington, New York, Baltimore, and the surrounding country.

Mrs. Hurley was a handsome picture in dark blue crepe, made on straight lines with short sleeves. The front of the costume was of white embroidered organdy to match her long white gloves. Her small dark blue hat was rimmed in front with a cluster of white violets. Mrs. Gwynn, mother of the bridegroom, was attractively turned out in a rose crepe gown, made floor-length and worn with a small blue hat covered with rose blossoms. A corsage of blue delphinium completed her costume.

Hoovers Send Handsome Gift

The bridal table was centered with a four-tier wedding cake, surmounted by a miniature bridal couple. Breakfast guests, served there, later wandered into the other handsomely furnished rooms of the mansion, and many lingered in the dining room to look over the array of wedding presents. A center of special attention was the piece of handsomely carved jade sent by former President and Mrs Herbert Hoover, and the silver tea service which was a gift of Mrs. Alfred O. du Pont. The latter was among the guests at both the marriage ceremony and the breakfast.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson Among Guests

Meanwhile, social and political notables had enjoyed the breakfast and reception that was almost as large as if the sun had been shining. Younger and older sets and in-betweens were well represented in the throng seen moving through the spacious rooms of the Hurley house. Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed were there; also Mr. and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Lewis and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, who arrived with Mrs. Bernard B. Jones.

Miss Eleanor Young was New York's and Newport's "glamour girl" when she came out a few seasons ago. She is even more glamorous now than she was then. She wears her dark hair off the face in "Scarlett" style. The three of them called last week on Miss Mimi Howard (daughter of Charles Howard of Sea Biscuit fame), at Foxcroft School, who is a cousin of Mrs. Vanderbilt, then left to spend a day and a half in Williamsburg before returning to Middleburg today for the races. Mrs. Young was formerly Miss Anita O'Keith, of Williamsburg.

Other guests of the Frosts include Mr. and Mrs. "Jock" McLean, of Washington; Mrs. Jane Fowler Bassett, Miss Wendy Iglehart and Whitelaw Reid, jr., all of New York.

The Middleburg races will take place over the beautiful Glenwood course, starting at 1:30. There will be six races during the afternoon. The feature event of the day will be the Middleburg Cup Steeplechase, the fourth event on the card, which will be run over 4 miles of timber.

Panama Ambassador Decorates Mexican and Cuban Envoys

Grand Cross of the Order of Balboa Also Awarded to Chilean; Guests Enjoy Food and Drink After Ceremonies

By Carolyn Bell

William—the town's most popular doorman—and his colossal umbrella were very much in demand at the party given by the Panamanian Ambassador and Senora de Boyd yesterday afternoon. Feminine guests arrived muffled in furs, to ward off the chill winds and unseasonable snow.

Decorations, and more decorations, were in order at the party. The Mexican Ambassador, who, the day before, had presented a decoration, received the Gran Cruz of the Order of Vasco Nunez de Balboa from Panama. The Cuban Ambassador was awarded the same order yesterday and the Minister Counselor of the Embassy, Dr. Jose T. Baron, received the decoration in the absence of his chief.

Dr Fuentes Is Decorated

After everyone had gathered in the drawing room the decorations were made. Also receiving orders was the Minister of Bolivia, Dr. Lyis Fernando Guachalla, who was presented with the order in the degree Comendador con Placa, which goes only to those of ministerial rank. The Comendador's decoration without placa, was bestowed upon Dr. Rafael Fuentes, counselor of the Mexican Embassy and Ramiro Guerra, delegate from Cuba to the economic consultative conference now being held at the Pan American Union.

Listening raptly to the speeches which followed the presentations were Senora de Cabero, wife of the Chilean Ambassador, who wore a chic black hat spiked with a tall quill; Senora de Guachalla, smart in a cocoa brown ensemble; Senora de Castillo Najera, wearing a silver fox jacket over her black frock; Senorita Erma Castillo Najera, wearing a charming halo hat, and Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Cajigas, she in a trim black and white printed frock.

The medal of Caballero of the Order of Vasco de Balboa was presented to Hugo Gouthier, second secretary of the Brazilian Embassy; Fernando Saboia de Madeiros, also Brazilian second secretary, and George Hager, former president of the International Rotary Club. The group of diplomats and Mr. Hager all took part in the Congress of Foreign Ministers held in Panama last year.

Food and Drink Follows Ceremony

Following the presentations, guests wandered into the adjoining salons to partake of food and drink. Champagne and whiskies were served. Pouring at the tea table, centered by a bouquet of spring flowers, were Senora de Briceno, wearing a bright red hat atop her dark blue costume, and Senorita Conchita Guardia, in a printed frock. Piping-hot enchanades, rolls stuffed with chicken salad, and a variety of sweets adorned the table.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wearing a smart hat of blue cornflowers and a blue print ensemble, was among the guests, as were Senhora Martins, with a sequin-edged veil decking her flaring hat; Mrs. William Jennings Price, the Third Secretary of the Mexican Embassy and Senora de Sierra, she wearing a teal-blue hat; the Minister of Honduras and Senora de Cacares, the Ambassador of Ecuador and Senora de Alfaro and Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Munilla, she wearing a beige straw sombrero with brown jersey veil; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, the Dominican Minister and Senora de Pastoriza, Senora de Fuentes, with a pink petal hat atop her black curls, and the Counselor of the Peruvian Embassy and Señora de Garland.

Ruth Hale Becomes Bride Of Wiley T. Buchanan, Jr.

MRS. WILEY THOMAS BUCHANAN, JR.

Washington Man Wed in Midland, Mich., Home of Bride's Parents; Presbyterian Church Flower-Decked for Ceremony

A wedding of wide interest here took place yesterday in Midland, Mich., when Miss Ruth Hale became the bride of Wiley Thomas Buchanan, jr., of Washington. The bride is the daughter of William J. Hale, of West Park Drive, Midland, while her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Buchanan, of Dallas, Tex.

White lilies, smilax, gladioli and white tapers decorated the First Presbyterian Church where the wedding took place with the Rev. V. V. Nicholas officiating.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white tulle over satin. The frock was made with a shirred bodice, heart shaped neckline, short sleeves and a long train decked with white satin bows. Her bridal veil of tulle was caught with a coronet cluster of white baby orchids. She wore white tulle mitts and carried a spray of orchids and lilies of the valley.

Miss Margaret Abell, of Chevy Chase, Md., served as maid of honor. Her gown of French rose chiffon was made with a heart shaped neckline, short puffed sleeves and long bodice with a full skirt.

Bridesmaids were Miss Anne Henry, of Detroit; Miss Harriet Ernst, of Cleveland; Miss Dorothy Doan, of Midland, cousin of the bride; Mrs. Charles W. Tennison, of San Antonio, Tex., sister of the bridegroom; Mrs. David C. Ewart, of Boston, and Miss Janet Collings, of Midland, Mich. They wore gowns of art blue chiffon, made like that of the maid of honor. All attendants carried arm bouquets of blue delphinium and American Beauty roses. They wore flower hats.

Miss Margaret Ann Towsley, flower girl, was dressed in a blue chiffon gown—a miniature of the bridesmaids' dresses. She carried a colonial bouquet of roses and forget-me-nots.

Avon Buchanan, of Dallas, Tex., brother of the bridegroom, served as best man. Ushers were Frank Maas, Charles Koester, Corwin Lockwood, William A. Byrne, all of this city; Robert Schneider, of Alexandria, Va., and Lee Doan, of Midland, Mich.

After the ceremony there was a reception at the Midland Country Club. A buffet supper was served to 400 guests and dancing followed. In the receiving line was the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Herbert H. Dow, who wore a gown of blue chiffon with a matching hat. Also receiving were Mr. Buchanan's parents. Mrs. Buchanan was gowned in a dusty pink marquisette and navy accessories.

The bride was graduated from Holton Arms School and Connecticut College in New London, Conn. The bridegroom was graduated from Terrill School in Dallas, Tex., and studied at Southern Methodist University and George Washington University.

When the couple left for their wedding trip to Mexico City the bride wore a blue traveling suit trimmed in platinum fox fur and a corsage of white orchids. They will be at home at the Kennedy Warren Apartments after June 1.

Friday Night Dances Inspire A Wave of Dinner Parties

Younger Set Holds Forth at Sulgrave Club, Mrs. West's Group at the Willard; Patricia Prochnik Entertains for Guest

Over half of Washington's upper crust was out dancing last night. Lights gleamed brightly from the Sulgrave Club where the younger set, for the most part, held sway at the Friday night dance.

Meanwhile, in the ballroom of the Willard Hotel, members of the Friday Evening Dancing Class gathered for their pre-final meeting of the season. Mrs. Parker West, guiding spirit of this popular club, has announced that the final meeting will be held on May 3. This last party, which is always a dinner dance, will be given in the large ballroom of the Willard Hotel.

Many dinners were on tap before the Sulgrave dance. Miss Patricia Prochnik, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Prochnik, was one of the hostesses. She entertained in honor of Miss Laurie Kerr, here from West Orange, N. J., as the guest of Miss Aileen Harris, who was also a dinner guest. Tinsley Adams, Hal Clagett and Aidler Mackall completed this congenial gathering. Miss Diana Rowland entertained at a dinner party at her home on Massachusetts avenue and Francis Martin was a dinner host.

Scores of dinner parties were given before the meeting at the Willard Hotel. Judge and Mrs. Ernest Van Fossan entertained in honor of Mrs. Russell Hoffer, who is here from Chicago. Mrs. Arthur MacArthur was hostess at the Willard preceding the dance and Mrs. Fred Weigester gave a large party in her apartment at the Kennedy Warren.

Representative and Mrs. John Vorys entertained in honor of their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Shed, who are visiting here from Columbus. Mr. and Mrs. Homer Hendrick gave a party in their home in Kenwood and Mrs. Emerson Howe was another dinner hostess last night.

49 Pilgrims Converge on Washington, Guests of D.A.R., for the Convention

Mrs. Roscoe O'Byrne, Of Brookville, Ind., Is Official 'Mother'

Girls Are Winners Of State Good Citizenship Awards

By Jesse Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

Managing better than the "Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe," Mrs. Roscoe C. O'Byrne, of Brookville, Ind., national chairman of the D. A. R. good citizenship pilgrims committee, is for four days official "mother" to 49 girls. They are winners of good citizenship awards from every State in the Union and from the District, who are here as guests of the National Society, D. A. R., until Tuesday.

Headquarters for the girls, who were arriving by almost every train up to 5 o'clock last evening, was Mrs. O'Byrne's suite in the Washington Hotel. Large trays of apples and oranges were set out invitingly on the table where State badges were arranged in order, ready to be pinned on the girls as they arrived. At one end of the room was a piano which was in use part of the time—Carolyn Wood, of Mrs. O'Byrne's State, being one of the gifted musicians in the group.

After they had registered and been assigned to their rooms at the hotel, some of the girls went shopping or sightseeing with local D. A. R. members or wives of members of the Congressional delegation from their States. They were undaunted by the rain. Miss Anne Tuohy, of the local committee, met the pilgrims at the station as they arrived.

After dinner last night they visited the D. A. R. buildings and were received by Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general. Later they were entertained by the District Good Citizenship Pilgrims Committee at the new chapter house, 1732 Massachusetts avenue.

In addition to Mrs. Roy C. Bowker, district chairman, Mrs. Robert and national vice chairmen who received them, they were welcomed also by the good citizenship winners in the various local high schools, from among whom Eloise Collingwood was chosen as the District pilgrim. These were Marjorie Tate, Anacostia; Anne Wickard, Central; Ellen Elizabeth Stiles, Eastern; Patricia Rhine, McKinley; Barbara Ann Baer, Western, and Ellen Anderson, Wilson.

Marker Unveiled At Chapter House

National officers of the D. A. R. gathered at Memorial Continental Hall yesterday for the annual meeting of the National Officers Club, of which Mrs. J. Y. Talmage, of Athens, Ga., is president. They held a luncheon in the banquet hall of the building with Mrs. Talmage presiding. Tonight another event for members of the club will be the annual dinner, which will be given at the Willard Hotel, with Mrs. Georgette Ross Howard as guest speaker and Miss Marie Coffey, soloist.

Guests of honor for the evening will be Mrs. Grace L. Brosseau, Mrs. Lowell F. Hobart, Mrs. William A. Becker and Mrs. George Maynard Minor, honorary vice presidents general.

Yesterday afternoon many local D. A. R.'s and a number of those here for the congress which opens Monday night at Constitution Hall, attended the unveiling of a marker, placed on the new chapter house of the District. It was presented by E Pluribus Unum Chapter in honor of Mrs. Harry C. Grove, president of the chapter house corporation, and also a past regent of the chapter and past State regent of the District.

Mrs. Carl H. Smith, regent of the chapter, made the presentation to Miss Lillian Chenoweth, State regent, who presented it to Mrs. Grove for the chapter house.

Dames of Loyal Legion Hear Rep. Plumley at Banquet

Representative Plumley, of Vermont, addressed members of the Dames of the Loyal Legion last night at their annual banquet. He paid tribute to Thomas Jefferson as "that man who was, and still is, the greatest and most influential exponent of both liberalism and Americanism."

Representative Plumley, speaking on the subject, "Keep Government Free," asserted that "no method of procedure has been or ever will be devised by which liberty can be divorced from local self-government."

The banquet was the highlight of the opening day of the annual convention held at the Mayflower Hotel. Mrs. David Daniel Good, of Philadelphia, national president, presided. Opening the conclave, she warned that, although geographical boundaries of this country have not changed, as they have in Europe, "foreign idiologies are fast gaining foothold, supplanting truly American principles, on which our country was founded." True allegiance, she said, "is based on paramount respect for and fidelity to the national Constitution."

The morning program included a welcome by James A. Emery, commander of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the District. Reports of officers and committee chairmen comprised the business of the sessions. A short memorial service was held in honor of Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker, past national president and president of the District society at the time of her death a few weeks ago.

Today Dr. Stewart W. McClelland, president of Lincoln Memorial University at Harrogate, Tenn., will be here to conduct another service in her honor, paying tribute to her efforts in behalf of the university. It was at her suggestion that the Clara Barton Memorial committee decided to give the balance of its memorial fund to the school to train girls in nursing. There are now two scholarship students in training in Philadelphia.

Officers in charge of arrangements for the meeting besides Mrs. Good are Mrs. Harrison Smith, secretary, of Philadelphia; Miss Minnie B. Wade, senior vice president, of New York; Mrs. Edward S. Moulton, junior vice president, of Providence; Mrs. Rex Rhoades, treasurer, of Washington; Miss Anna F. H. Knight, registrar, of Philadelphia; Miss Ellen L. White, chancellor, Brooklyn, and Mrs. Annette G. Yoho, historian, of San Francisco.

Cold Snap Will Not Hurt Cherry Blooms

Weatherman Forecasts Warmer Weather for Fete

sons died of exposure in Indiana when their automobile became stalled.

As a steady drizzle dampened the Board of Trade's festive spirit yesterday, the Cherry Blossom committee looked askance at murky skies and turned thumbs down on last night's scheduled opening of the annual celebration. The entire program was postponed until today and tomorrow.

When the mercury crept slowly downward into the 30's shortly before 4 p. m. yesterday, the day-long rainfall turned to hail, then to great white flakes of snow.

The hail lasted nearly half an hour, said the Weather Bureau. Forecasters, however, were certain last night the snow would end before daybreak and "wouldn't amount to much."

Only one event in the scheduled Cherry Blossom Festival will be canceled outright, said Edgar Morris, chairman of the arrangements committee. That will be the polo game between the Third Cavalry of Fort Myer and the War Department which was to have been held this afternoon.

"The polo grounds will be in no condition for the game and it will have to be removed from the program," said Morris.

Although an estimated crowd of 200,000 is expected to view the cherry blossoms over the week-end, out-of-town visitors have not as yet begun to arrive in the numbers earlier anticipated. Hotels, train lines and bus companies reported "slightly above normal" passenger lists.

One major bus company said it did a larger business last week than this.

Postponement of the cherry festival, it was predicted last night, will be a boon rather than setback for Washington merchants and sightseeing concerns.

Boon to Merchants

"Many persons will come by motor," said Col. Harrison Brand, of the Board of Trade, "and they'll probably prefer Saturday and Sunday of the original schedule."

Even with the opening festivities planned for last night, most hotels reported the bulk of their reservations were for the week-end starting today.

A steady influx of visitors is expected throughout today and even a larger crowd than first hoped for will be on hand at 7:30 p. m. when Miss Rose Colliflower is crowned the 1940 Cherry Blossom Queen at Tidal Basin ceremonies, trade travel officials said.

The Potomac Park celebration will begin at 4 p. m. with a concert by the Police Boys Club Band. Spectators may then roam among the blooms until the coronation. The United States Marine Band will take part in the main attraction, rendering the new theme song, "Pale Potomac Moon," composed by Arthur Godfrey, radio entertainer.

Folk dances, a "streamlined" version of "Blossom Time" by the Columbia Light Opera Company, and a torchlight parade will follow the coronation of Queen Rose. Fireworks will climax tonight's attractions.

as a lieutenant and captain of Company M, First Maryland Infantry, during the Spanish-American War. In 1916 he was a major, commanding the Third Battalion on the Mexican border and served in the Army during the World War. After the war he became a lieutenant colonel in the reserves.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Frances Riley; a daughter, Miss Margaret A. Riley, and two sons, Hugh R. Riley, jr., sports writer and assistant publicity director at Pennsylvania State College, and the Rev. Joseph Riley, of Smithsburg, Md. A brother, Don Riley, is a Baltimore radio commentator.

The youths were riding in a car driven by Norman D. Gore, 19, of 3133 Connecticut avenue northwest. Gore and Richard Moran, of Chevy Chase, Md., another passenger, escaped injury.

The other machine was operated, police said, by Chauncey Peters, 53, of 5249 Forty-second street northwest.

Peters, who was unhurt, was traveling north on Thirty-fourth street on a green light, police reported, and the students were going west on Woodley road. The traffic light controlling west-bound traffic on Woodley road was out of order and Gore did not see that the opposite signals were green, officers who investigated reported. There were no arrests but the case will be presented to the corporation counsel's office later, it was said.

Rex Briles, 24, of 704 North Emerson street, Arlington, Va., was in serious condition at Georgetown Hospital last night as the result of the accident on Lee boulevard.

Three persons were injured, none seriously, when the automobile in which they were passengers was in collision with another near Melrose crossing in Hyattsville, Md., where four persons were killed by a train early Sunday. Injured yesterday were J. R. Simille, 42, of 4624 Forty-third place northwest; Mary Freeman, 36, of 4418 Davenport street northwest, and Frances Cote, an employe of the Washington Times-Herald.

The automobile in which they were riding, Hyattsville police said, was operated by Mrs. Charles G. Duffy, 39, of 4622 Forty-third place northwest. Police said the other machine was driven by Gordon Kidder, 35, of Chicago.

Inspector Is Witness On Fatal Fire

Flue Official Can't Recall Designing Chimney Blamed In O Street Blaze

The welter of conflicting stories and "I don't remembers" which marked the first two days of the White Court inquest continued yesterday as a coroner's jury, seeking to determine whether negligence contributed to three deaths in the apartment house fire, heard further evidence.

A District smoke inspector testified that he could not recall drafting a plan for reconstruction of the aparument's chimney in 1937, contrary to testimony Wednesday by a witness who described a lengthy conversation with the inspector.

John N. Stewart, the District official in question, said he did not even remember having ever met Stephen Miles Montgomery, who had told the jury Stewart sketched the chimney alteration on paper, until yesterday morning in the inquest room.

Daly Can't Recall Talks

Further confusing Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald and the jury was a statement by James B. Daly, deputy building inspector, that he recalled no discussions of the chimney project with either Montgomery or anyone in the smoke inspector's office.

Montgomery, secretary and rental agent for H. G. Smithy Co., agents for the apartment house at 2131 O street northwest, which burned April 11, had testified in detail of conversations with Stewart and Daly preliminary to granting of a permit for enlargement of the chimney.

Questioning has centered about the chimney since the investigation opened Tuesday because the fatal blaze, according to experts, probably was caused by a defective flue.

Three to Take Stand Today

Resuming at 11 a. m. yesterday following a one-day adjournment, the inquest was expected to end by dusk, but lengthy interrogation of witnesses and the recall of two who had been heard Tuesday forced another carry over.

Coroner MacDonald last night declared three witnesses will be heard today, beginning at 11 a. m., then the case will go to the six-man jury. Concluding witnesses will be Donald Hipkins, chief clerk in the District building inspetcor's office; Jesse J. Kimball, chief field building inspector, who testified Wednesday, and a deputy coroner who will describe how the fire's three victims met their death.

Yesterday's session opened with Alonzo Neil, colored bricklayer, who built an addition to the chimney in the summer of 1937, resuming the stand, amplifying his testimony of Wednesday when he told in detail how the stack was enlarged.

Sure He Made No Drawing

Stewart, who left a sickbed to testify, said he recalled accompanying his chief, Smoke Inspetcor H. Kenneth Kugel, on an inspection of the chimney before it was rebuilt, but insisted he could recall no further business in connection with the alteration project.

"I feel sure that I made no drawing (Montgomery is equally certain he did) because that was out of my line of work," said Stewart.

In reply to questioning, he admitted not knowing whether it was legal to join old and new flue lining in the manner done on the White Court job. He said he issued an approval certificate when the chimney work was completed without checking with the building inspector's office because "the smoke inspector's office does not concern itself with a stack's safety, but only with its smoke elimination behavior."

Daly could not recall issuing the permit for reconstruction of the chimney, admitted to being unfamiliar with his office's procedure in filing permits and said Montgomery "could be correct" in his account of his talk with Daly "but I doubt it."

Regulations Cited

Kugel quoted District regulations to show that a boiler or smokestack permit issued by the division of smoke regulation and boiler inspection, of which he is head, is no certification of safety. It is the duty of the division to detect and prosecute violations of the smoke ordinance, rather than to ferret out their cause, he indicated.

Other witnesses yesterday were:

Roland R. Reutlinger, vice president of the firm which installed a new stoker in the furnace at the time the chimney was built. He said he received no complaints after the job was finished.

William Thomas Townsend, 3012 R street northwest, a linoleum layer who described a job he did in a first-floor apartment two days before the fire.

Janitor Testifies

Cyrus James, colored janitor of the White Court. He said he had never had any trouble with the furnace or chimney during the five years he was on the job and explained that the old linoleum ripped out by Townsend was burned in the incinerator the same day. (A tenant testified Tuesday that, on first smelling smoke, he ran to James' quarters and was told by the janitor that what he smelled probably was burning linoleum in the incinerator.)

Henry Cobb, 210 Ball Court. The colored workman, who was Neil's helper in enlarging the chimney, remembered little in connection with the job.

Norman Leo Roddy, construction engineer in the Veterans Administration. A plan examiner in the District building inspector's office when White Court was remodeled in 1925, he pointed out that the specifications provided for fireproof corridors and doors.

Sergt. Raymond Roberts, of the fire marshal's office. He was called back to the stand to repeat the story he told Tuesday of finding a portion of a brick missing from the lower part of the chimney.

Gillen Named Capital Parks Superintendent

Francis F. Gillen, chief engineer of the office of National Capital Parks, will become acting superintendent of that agency today, according to an announcement yesterday by Associate Director A. E. Demaray, of the National Park Service.

Gillen will serve pending selection of a permanent parks head through a special examination to be given by the Civil Service Commission, plans for which were revealed Monday.

Edmund B. Rogers, acting superintendent of the local park system since last fall, has been returned to his regular post as head of Yellowstone National Park because of the imminent opening of the tourist season there, said Demaray.

Government engineer supervising construction of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial, among his other duties, Gillen entered Federal service in 1899 as an employe of the old Office of Public Buildings and Grounds.

Demaray explained that Frank T. Gartside, assistant superintendent, was not named because to do so might jeopardize his eligibility should he wish to take the special competitive examination for the superintendency.

Do Own Work, Educator Urges U. S. Officials

American universities are too frequently requested to be "service stations" by the Federal Government for the performance of duties which the Government should do itself, President Alexander P. Ruthven, of the University of Michigan, said last night at a dinner of the Washington Alumni Club at the Mayflower Hotel. Nearly 100 alumni and their guests attended.

An increasing number of professors are being asked to come to Washington, Dr. Ruthven said, "for conferences which seem to be spent in discussion—and I hope some day something results from them."

The function of the modern university is "a center of discussion and analysis for human progress . . . a place where one can take the long view," he said. "The university is not designed to operate the machinery of present-day life."

Urging that college professors be kept free to "teach what they want to," Dr. Ruthven declared that Government bureaus should be more efficient so that "their work is done where it should be done."

Durand Springer was toastmaster. President of the Washington club is Herman Schmidt.

State Quota On U. S. Jobs Is Defended

Keller and Nichols Argue for Plan As Ramspeck Calls It 'Unworkable'

The Keller-Nichols plan for applying State quotas in broadening the merit system, under attack by a dozen witnesses, was defended by its authors in a hearing on the Ramspeck bill before the Senate Civil Service Committee yesterday.

Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee said that while he favored a quota system the Keller-Nichols plan was unworkable.

Representative Keller (Democrat), of Illinois, told the committee that, with the quota plan, he was for the Ramspeck bill, without it he was against the measure.

Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, challenged a report of the Civil Service Commission which said the rider would make the bill impossible to administer, and said:

"I'm inclined to agree that it won't be worked, whether its workable or not.

Ramspeck recalled that Keller had drafted the quota provision first, making it apply to future appointments, while Nichols had tightened it to apply to present job holders who might be brought into civil service through the proposed extension.

D. C. Ahead of Quota

The District, Maryland and Virginia are now far over their shares of Government employes in Washington, while 37 States and Territories are in arrears, under the apportionment. The Keller-Nichols amendment bars employes from States over their quotas from sharing in the proposed extension, until the quotas of all other States are filled.

Ramspeck said the plan was "unworkable" and would not accomplish the purpose of its sponsors. Keller declared that since drafting his first amendment, he had come to believe the Nichols measure was right. "Illinois has a right to its quota," he said, "and the District has no right to a 50-fold multiplication."

Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, member of the committee, explained that the quotas got out of balance as a result of the World War, when the Government was forced to draw on nearby sections for its employes.

Civil Service Commissioner Harry Mitchell said that during the last seven years the District's total of employes under the quota had been reduced by 2,000, while Maryland and Virginia had lost 350.

Changes Suggested

Ramspeck suggested amending the provisions in the bill which would permit employes to come into the extended civil service only if recommended by the heads of their agencies, or leave them free to stay in their jobs and escape examination.

"It was not the intent of the House committee to discriminate in favor of the people not even recommended in favor of those who are recommended and fail the examination," said Ramspeck.

Col. Charles I. Stengle, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, warned against placing power to certify employes for civil service in the hands of supervisors, and asked that the Keller-Nichols rider be stricken from the bill.

Jacob Baker, president of the United Federal Workers, asked that WPA administrative workers be included in the merit extension. He asked that provision be made to permit experienced employes who are doing their work well to keep their present jobs, even if they failed examination.

E. Claude Babcock, president of the Federal Personnel Association, said passage of the bill would bring political opposition to the merit system. The National League of Women Voters submitted a statement urging passage of the bill "without crippling amendments added in the House."

Chairman Bulow of the Senate committee, said the hearing would continue Wednesday.

Virginia Heads And Ickes Confer On Yorktown Span

By the Associated Press

Secretary Ickes agreed yesterday at a conference with Virginia leaders to look into a proposal for construction of a toll bridge across the York River, at Yorktown, Va., within the limits of the Colonial National Monument.

Representative Bland (Democrat), Virginia, who accompanied Gov. James H. Price and State Highway Commissioner Henry G. Shirley to the conference, said his bill to authorize the Secretary to grant a right of way across the monument area, had not been referred to the department and had not before come to the Secretary's attention.

The bill is pending before the House committee on public lands.

Writer Lauds Goodwill Unit For Saving Men

Economic and Social Needs Inseparable, Atwood Declares

The greatest conservation program in the world is the conservation of human beings, Albert W. Atwood, writer and teacher, told a group of 200 at the fifth anniversary dinner of the Goodwill Industries at Barker Hall last night.

Pointing out that "economic need cannot be separated from the social, physical and religious," he said that "there is no way of measuring the rate at which people become economically handicapped."

The method of human aid employed by the Goodwill Industries is "conservation in both enonomic and social welfare," he said. He questioned the ability of the Federal Government to solve the unemployment problem "merely by paid employment."

Founder Brings Greetings

Weakness of Government human conservation programs is "the lessening of a sense of responsibility on the part of an individual by turning his problems over to a central force," he stated.

Dr. Edgar J. Helms, founder of the Goodwill movement in America, brought greetings to the Washington group, particularly complimenting the work of the training school in the industries here. Col. E. Goring Bliss, president of the board of trustees, presided.

The progress of the industries in the last five years was described by James C. Dulin, jr. W. Harold Snape, director of the industries, said the goal of the organization next year is jobs for 150 persons daily, as compared with the present 115. The industries would like to train 1,500 handicapped children in useful trades, Snape stated.

Incorporators Present

The invocation was delivered by Dr. John S. German, pastor of the Broadway Methodist Church in Baltimore. Dr. William L. Darby, retiring executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, delivered the benediction.

Among those attending were Hugh Keiser, president of the Self-Help Exchange; Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education; Herbert Willett, director of the Community Chest. Incorporators of the Industries five years ago who attended were Col. William O. Tufts, Col. A. R. Brindley, Mrs. Karl Fenning, James C. Dulin, jr., Mrs. Elizabeth W. Murray and Dr. W. L. Darby. The late S. L. Thomas was represented by his daughter, Mrs. Bonnie King.

Other present trustees attending were Mrs. Howard G. Nichols, Edwin L. Davis, Joseph D. Kaufman, Mrs. Stanley C. Sears and Mrs. Elizabeth W. Murray.

Dr. Kindler Deplores Loss Of Symphony to Children

Director Stresses Orchestra's Creation Of Love of Music

Dr. Hans Kindler yesterday broke the silence he has maintained throughout the current controversy over the National Symphony Orchestra in an interview with a reporter for The Post.

He didn't talk about the situation so much as about the children who will be disappointed if the orchestra is discontinued. That, he said, is "worst of all."

The orchestra, he continued, "has made thousands of children the friends of music."

The threat to its continuance is in a deadlock that exists between the board of directors and the Musicians Protective Union over the question of pay.

Dr. Kindler was philosophical.

"I am heavyhearted, naturally," he said. "This orchestra was started in the depression and rose through it . . . I have always wanted conditions to improve; I have always worked for that for the men."

He repeatedly emphasized that organizations, as such, mean little to him.

"The orchestra knows that," he said.

Music is his religion, he wanted it made known, and his mission "to convey beautiful music to others." He does not know what the outcome of the dispute will be and will not conjecture on it.

In any event, "music cannot be taken away from me."

Meanwhile, the union office and L. Corin Strong, the orchestra association president, said there were no developments in the impasse.

Boy Hated School; Grows Up, Razes It

"He who laughs last . . ."

Thirty years ago a young man named Maurice Stearman was enrolled at the Abbott School. He disliked the place, as many youngsters dislike school.

"If the school would only burn down or if I could tear it down," he would remark.

Yesterday, Maurice Stearman, now 45 years old, chuckled with glee as his workmen started tearing down the old school under a contract with the District government. Stearman is head of the Ace Wrecking Co., and is paying $805 to the District for the pleasure—and for the material. The site at Fifth street and New York avenue northwest will be used for the new No. 2 Precinct police station.

Gas Workers to Get Pay Rise Tomorrow

Part of the new wage scale goes into effect at the Washington Gas Light Co. tomorrow, increasing the company's wage budget by $125,000 annually.

The wage boosts, affecting 1,439 members of the District of Columbia Gas Workers Union, are the result of an amendment to a contract signed with the company in 1937. The new scale goes into effect tomorrow for workers drawing a weekly wage. Those receiving bimonthly salaries will get their increases beginning Tuesday.

Citizens Ask Abbot School On N.E. Site

Brightwood Backs Recommendation Against Locating Unit in Northwest

The Board of Education's recommendation that the new Abbot Vocational School be located at Seventh street and Florida avenue northeast, rather than the proposed Fourteenth and Upshur street northwest site, was unanimously indorsed last night at a meeting of the Brightwood Citizens Association at Paul Junior High School.

Brightwood citizens argued that there was greater need for this type of school in the Northeast section. Charles W. Ray, president, said his group's attitude was one of public service and in no way represented aloofness to that type of institution in the Northwest.

Three other board recommendations were indorsed: That stricken salaries of $3,200 each for two District school vocational directors be restored to the District appropriations bill, that school librarians be granted the same salary scale as public librarians, and that improvements be made at Paul Junior High School consisting of permanent seating arrangements in the school auditorium and a fence around the school, both provided for in original building plans.

A move by John C. Proctor indorsing William A. Roberts, former people's counsel, for the Police Court vacancy, was adopted as was a resolution requesting Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown to study the possibility of forming a Police Boys Club in the Brightwood section.

The Anderson bill was also indorsed by the group. The bill proposes the election of two District Commissioners in Washington in place of Presidential appointment to the post.

The Board of Education proposals were introduced by Charles E. Combs, manual arts teacher at Paul Junior, acting in behalf of Thomas F. Ferry, superintendent of the school, who is ill.

The breaking of ground for the first unit of the $100,000 church and educational building of the Bethesda First Baptist Church will take place about May 12, Dr. J. Raymond Nelson, pastor, announced yesterday.

REV. MR. ECKERT

By Robert Tate Allan

St. Luke's Lutheran Church, new and enterprising congregation of Silver Spring, will formally install its first permanent pastor, the Rev. Frederick J. Eckert, on Sunday, April 21.

Now assistant pastor of Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle, the clergyman will assume his new duties on April 15, and on the following Sunday will hear the installation sermon preached by his boyhood pastor, the Rev. R. C. Sorrick, pastor of the Messiah Lutheran Church, Baltimore.

When he comes to St. Luke's, the congregation of which Dr. M. J. Bieber, mission organizer, has been leading since last September, the Rev. Mr. Eckert will find a congregation growing rapidly, with plans already under way for a permanent church building.

Dr. Bieber, who will preach his final sermon tomorrow at 11 a. m. in the Masonic Hall, temporary meeting place of the congregation, will leave during the latter part of this month to tackle another mission development job in the suburbs of Johnstown, Pa.

He will participate in the ceremony for the Rev. Mr. Eckert, who will be formally installed by the Rev. Edward Goetz, president of the Eastern Conference of the Maryland Synod, president of the Washington Lutheran Ministerial Association and pastor of Zion Lutheran Church.

Dr. Bieber said yesterday that a committee already has been named to arrange purchase of a site for the construction of a brick or stone chapel, the latter costing between $10,000 and $20,000, and with a seating capacity for 250 or 300 people. It might be erected on the Colesville pike.

The committee includes F. R. Heindel, chairman; P. A. Krautwurst and John Braun.

While the group held its first meeting September 10, when the Sunday school was organized, it already has raised over $500 for the building fund. The church, formally organized on January 14, has 118 confirmed members.

Among the leaders of the organization are Carl M. Yost, president of the Men's Brotherhood; Mrs. F. R. Heindel, president of the Woman's Auxiliary; E. P. Krautwurst and Dr. Bieber, director and superintendent, respectively, of the Sunday school, and others.

The Rev. Mr. Eckert, who will be tendered a congregational reception by his flock on April 25, is a native of Baltimore, where he received his early schooling. He was graduated from Gettysburg (Pa.) Academy in 1932; Gettysburg College, 1936, and Gettysburg Theological Seminary in 1939.

He became assistant to Dr. Carl C. Rasmussen at Luther Place Church last May, and from August to November took charge of the congregation while Dr. Rasmussen and family were traveling in Europe.

He has served as adviser to the young people's groups at Luther Place, and has been an active leader in other phases of the congregation's work. Mrs. Eckert, whom he married last June, was also a Baltimorean, and is a Gettysburg College graduate, class of '33.

There will be music by the National Brass Quartette and by vocalists. L. W. De Gast, general secretary of the "Y" will give the invocation; George E. Harris, executive secretary of the Bible Association, will discuss the Westminister Conference, and Dr. Charles E. Resser, president of the District of Columbia Sunday School Association, will give the benediction. More than 400 men and women are planning to attend.

Harris, long active in local Bible work, has been selected as one of the 12 delegates to the Regional Conference of Religious Education at Massanetta Springs, Va., from July 15-22. He will represent the District of Columbia Sunday School Association and the Bible group.

Postlude

By Rav C. B. Brown

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress presents Friday night the opening concert of the ninth festival of chamber music in Coolidge Auditorium. Hans Kindler, conductor; Olga Averino, soprano; Hardesty Johnson, tenor; Yves Tinayre, barytone; E. Power Biggs, organ. Chorus from the New York Schola Cantorum; chamber orchestra from the National Symphony Orchestra.

Invited guests from far and near filled Coolidge Auditorium last evening for the initial concert of the ninth festival of chamber music presented by the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress. Never before, since the inauguration of the festivals in 1925, had so large a proportion of the auditors journeyed from other cities, and the assemblage was more representative of different localities. Of the various possible reasons, the preferable one is that interest in chamber music, and particularly in new works, is waxing.

BROWN

Two compositions, Ildebrando Pizzetti's "Epithalamium" commissioned for the occasion) and Gian Francesco Malipiero's "Quattro Vecchie Canzoni" were performed for the first time. These were held in reserve on the program which began with reminiscences of the first festival in the form of Bach's organ chorale, "To God on High All Glory Be" and Charles Martin Loeffler's "Canticum Fratris Solis." The sounding of the chorale from the enwalled organ without the visible presence of the organist, E. Power Biggs, had the impersonal effect of music creating itself from the void and served to remind one of the insoluble mystery of musical inspiration.

Loeffler's "Canticle of Brother Sun" grows in significance with each hearing and is on the way to becoming a standard American work. The setting of the hymn by St. Francis of Assisi is in keeping with the gentle spirit whose love embraced all beings as brothers, and its impassioned moments are those of a universal affection. The many beauties of the score were disclosed by Olga Averino, who sang with taste and artistic finesse, and by Hans Kindler, who directed the orchestra with insight.

The program proceeded with Carl Philipp Emanuel Bach's third symphony in C major, a sturdy work which Dr. Kindler has conducted for us before. As we look back upon it from a distance of 167 years, it seems prophetic of harmonic and instrumental devices that have become familiar in other men's writing.

Hardesty Johnson was the capable tenor soloist in the first novelty, Malipiero's four old songs for voice and seven instruments. One of the texts, from the sixteenth century, is anonymous, and the others are by Cino de Pistoia, Giovanni Boccaccio and Bonaggiunta Orbicciani. Malipierro, with a return to concordance and even to mellifluous melody, has treated these poems in a manner appropriate to their period. The most charming of the set is the nameless poet's "E per un bel cantar d'um merlo," which has some of the evasive quality of a story heard in a dream. The most interesting, as a close relation between the music and the sharp contrast of two emotions in the text, is Boccaccio's "Grifom, lupi, leon, biscie, e serpenti."

Delicacies of harmonic coloring were plentiful in the quietude of Pistoia's "Fior di virtu si a gentil coraggio" and Orbicciani's "Tutto lo modno si mantien per fiore." The major impression left by the songs at this writing is one of poetic beauty and a sincere evocation of a vanished type of culture.

In contrast to these refinements and ornamentations of literary conceits was Beethoven's "Elegischer Gesang" for mixed chorus and strings. Although its opus number places it in the composer's so-called third period, it is by no means of major import nor it is stamped with his personality. Its revival has full justification, however, for nothing that a master has done is without interest.

Pizzetti's "Epithalamium," a setting for soprano, tenor, barytone, mixed chorus and chamber orchestra of two songs by the Latin poet, Gaius Valerius Catullus, proved to be another striking example of the reversion of modern composers to consonance and melodic grace. A detailed discussion of the work is not possible at this time. Passages which linger most persistently in memory are the barytone solo, "Claustra pandite Ianuae"; the first entrance of the women's chorus, "Hymen o Hymenaee"; the soprano solo, "Hespere, quis caelo fertur crudelior ignis," and the tenor solo, "Hespere, quis caelo lucet iocundior ignis."

The greater part of the solo work is entrusted to a barytone voice, and Yves Tinayre gave eloquent expression to those lines, singing with a pleasant sonority and plastic phrasing. One can imagine what Stravinski might have done with a bridal song by Catullus, but Pizzetti has tried to be neither barbaric nor archaic. There is scholarship in his music, yet he has not been pedantic in his endeavor to reconstruct an approximation to Latin music. This approximation lies in the spirit of the music and not in its harmonic vesture.

"STAND UP, STAND UP FOR JESUS"
--GEORGE DUFFIELD, JR.--

Stand up, stand up for Jesus!
Ye soldiers of the Cross;
Lift high His royal banner!
It must not suffer loss;
From vict'ry unto vict'ry
His army shall He lead
Till ev'ry foe is vanquished
And Christ is Lord indeed.

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

The inspiration for this most widely circulated of American hymns was the last message of Dudley Tyng, a young Philadelphia minister, who had suffered much persecution for his courageous persistency in pleading the cause of the oppressed. His last thoughts turned to the splendor of courage and he said, "Tell them to stand up for Jesus."

'It's a Date' Gives Deanna Seventh Hit

Youthful Star's Latest Found Likeable Film AT RKO-Keith's

"IT'S A DATE," Universal picturization of a screenplay by Norman Krasna, starring Deanna Durbin, with Kay Francis, Walter Pidgeon, Eugene Pallette, Lewis Howard, Samuel S. Hinds, Cecilia Loftus, Fits Feld, S. Z. Sakall, Henry Stephenson, Joe King, Virginia Brissac and Romaine Callender. Directed by William Siter. Reviewed Friday afternoon, At RKO-Keith's Theater.

Deanna Durbin has done it again. Her seventh film and her seventh hit reached the Keith's screen yesterday for what should be, by all rights, an extended stay. Young Miss Durbin has never been in better form. Her singing is, as usual, superb, her supporting cast could not be better. The story is typical Durbin fare—refreshing, deftly played comedy against a background of Broadway, the summer theaters and Honolulu. The comic sequences are perfectly balanced with the touches of wistfulness in which Deanna is so adept at handling.

As the daughter of a royal family of Broadway, whose famous actress-mother covets the role her daughter has won, Deanna is given a neat little problem, which grows more involved when she attempts to give the part back to mother. Into this situation comes a tall, dark and handsome man, getting on in years, who provides an amusing triangle between himself and the mother and daughter. This all sounds very complicated, and so it is, but it works out beautifully in the end and provides very effective comedy of the ilk of most past Durbin pictures.

Kay Francis Scores

In the role of the daughter, Deanna is her usual winsome self. The picture revolves around her and she handles her acting chores with ease and confidence. She is the personification of young girlhood and a delight to watch. But it is when she starts to sing that she is most appealing.

As the attractive mother, Kay Francis has her best role in many months. She is lovely to look at, at ease in a part that fits her years, and sympathetic, which is a change for the usually hard-boiled Miss Francis. One grave mistake that the script writers overlooked was Miss Francis' inability to pronounce "R." The result is rather lispy, but not too annoying.

Walter Pidgeon has an opportunity for much scene stealing as the harassed object of both the leading ladies' affections, and he succeeds in winning many laughs.

Songs High Spots

Another deft bit of comedy is contributed by the too-briefly seen Lewis Howard. As Deanna's adolescent, stage-struck beau, he has some hilarious moments. Particularly the scene wherein he tries to impress a producer that he is the perfect type for the Dauphin, mistaking the word for "dope fiend." Cecilia Loftus is bittersweet and satisfactory as the faithful family retainer.

The songs, of course, are high spots of the picture. They are all beyond reproach. "Is It Love?," "Loch Lomand," and Musette's song from "La Boheme" are particularly well sung, but it is in her heart-breaking rendition of "Ave Maria" that Deanna surpasses anything she has ever done before and brings the picture to a stirring close.

The latest Walt Disney short, "The Riveters," starring Donald Duck, and a newsreel are satisfying supplements to the satisfying bill.

'Rebecca,' Strikingly Unique, Opens at Palace; Earle's 'Too Many Husbands' Is Gaily Laughable

Alfred Hitchcock's Direction Imaginative; Joan Fontaine Scores in Lead

By Richard L. Coe.

Substituting for Nelson B Bell.

"REBECCA," Selznick - International picturization of the novel by Daphne du Maurier, from a screen play by Robert E. Sherwood and Joan Harrison, adapted by Philip MacDonald and Michael Hogan, with Laurence Olivier, Joan Fontaine, George Sanders, Judith Anderson, Nigel Bruce, Reginald Denny, C. Aubrey Smith, Gladys Cooper, Florence Bates, Melville Cooper, Leo G. Carroll, Leonard Carey, Lumsden Hare, Edward Fielding, Philip Winter and Forrester Harvey. Directed by Alfred Hitchcock. Reviewed Friday afternoon, At the Palace Theater.

At last the screen has discovered a new fashion for telling a story. It is in the novelists' oldest and most effective style, the first person singular, and Alfred Hitchcock's use of it in "Rebecca," which opened yesterday at the Palace, is at once striking and illuminating.

Being unacquainted, first hand at least, with Daphne du Maurier's widely-read novel, the writer does not know exactly how Miss du Maurier unfolded the character of the dead Rebecca, but successful as the book has been, it could scarcely have been more effectively achieved than by the method the masterful director has chosen.

To set the key of his experiment, Hitchcock has made the camera his heroine from the very start. His audience becomes the quiet second Mrs. de Winter as in her mind she goes back to the storied mansion by the Cornwall cliffs which was her husband's home. She goes down the road and we feel we have become the first person.

Fascinatingly Different Technique

Her story is her struggle to take the place of the dead Rebecca, the beautiful first wife who seems to haunt not only her husband's thoughts, but his home and servants as well. Gradually in her novel Miss du Maurier revealed that this Rebecca was a hellion and the idea is brought forward ever so gradually on the screen.

The second Mrs. de Winter's obstacles are shown by the director not so much as how they happened, but how they seem to her to be happening. It is an idea which has been broached before, particularly in European pictures, but never so completely nor intensively.

When remarkably transformed Joan Fontaine, in the role of the second Mrs. de Winter, meets the neurotic housekeeper, Mrs. Danvers, for the first time, the Judith Anderson characterization is so focused as though she is seen through the shy, unhappy eyes of the young bride, not from the outside as a less experimental film would have shown her.

Immediately one becomes conscious that this apparent stress of character is not something which just happened, but rather was definitely planned to create an effect which will be copied and more intensively developed in future films.

Sharply Defined Characters

To be sure, he has an excellent corps of actors, but he makes them more than actors. Immediately upon a new character's entrance that figure is accurately and sharply defined. There is never one moment's hesitation about the thoughts, even the souls, of each one of them. From the moment we hear Miss Fontaine's coolly assured "I" at the start of the film, her inherent courage is established.

The beefy American female, most effectively played by Florence Bates, to whom she serves as paid companion, is as instantly defined as we watch her sipping dank coffee in Monte Carlo off season. There is a definite hint from the start that Judith Anderson's housekeeper is unbalanced. From her very dress Gladys Cooper's tweedy Britisher of the upper classes becomes just that. George Sanders' Jack Favell is hateful from his very first entrance—through a window.

Our first meeting with Laurence Olivier's brooding Maxim de Winter is at the edge of a cliff by the sea, a meeting full of the uncertainty and vexed spirit from which the character suffers throughout the story. His Eric is a logical creation after his memorable Heathcliffe in "Wuthering Heights."

But, after the director's triumph, Miss Fontaine's work is the outstanding quality of "Rebecca." Her success as the second and haunted Mrs. De Winter is the more remarkable, for never has the young player given evidence of such depth of feeling and emotional control. It is a characterization which will well stand the test of time.

Also on the Palace screen is "The Domineering Male," a Pete Smith specialty, and "Home on the Range," a color cartoon.

in the leading role of "Rebecca," the Palace's film adaptation of Daphne du Maurier's popular novel. Directed by Alfred Hitchcock, the film employs a refreshingly unique technique. Laurence Olivier and Judith Anderson share the spotlight with the surprisingly excellent Miss Fontaine

Light Farce Stars Jean Arthur, Douglas And Fred MacMurray 'New Faces' on Stage

"TOO MANY HUSBANDS," Columbia picturization of the play by W. Somerset Maugham, adapted to the screen by Claude Binyon, starring Jean Arthur, Fred MacMurray, Melvyn Douglas with Harry Davenport, Dorothy Peterson, Melville Cooper, Edgar Buchanan and Tom Dugan. Directed by Wesley Ruggles. Previewed Wednesday afternoon, At the Earle Theater.

Again the Earle is offering a welcome bill that guarantees brain rest and funny bone exercise. Its new film comedy is a mad farce. "Too Many Husbands," with a trio of expert farceurs, Jean Arthur, Fred MacMurray and Melvyn Douglas.

By stretch of a term long ill used, "Too Many Husbands" might be called naughty, which is quite all right here, so long as it makes you laugh, but this description does not exactly fit. It just worries continually about how naughty it would be possible for an active young woman with two husbands to be. That's as far toward being naughty "Too Many Husbands" ever gets.

But it has plenty of fun worrying about being naughty. Jean Arthur was happily married, it seems. Fred MacMurray was that husband. (Got to keep 'em straight, if you're to understand all this.) He liked sailing. So he sailed away and never came back.

Now all this broke Jean up pretty badly. After all, just a honeymoon and a few months and then no husband is enough to upset anybody. So she cried on the shoulder of hubby's best friend and publishing partner. So he married her. They were dignified but happy.

Dorothy Peterson Amuses

Here, near the beginning, occurs one of the funniest pieces of dialogue the screen has given us this year. Dorothy Peterson, who has acted as secretary to both of Jean's husbands, weepingly tells her she is to be married. Jean, nice girl, is delighted. But not Dot. "You married the only two men I've ever loved" she begins, and we are off in a mutual consolation pact which you'll very likely have to sit through twice to get all the lines.

But, of course, F. MacMurray manages to come back to claim his wife. He is rather pleased to see his old friend Douglas first night back, but does object rather outspokenly when the unhappy Douglas seems too comfortable in the old homestead. For Jean to make up her mind which husband she prefers is the films' plot and we can't very well give it away, because the film doesn't, either!

Of course, this does not have the awkward time situations inherent in the similar Enoch Arden story, but what similarities there are, are treated with mocking amusement rather than tragic mourning.

Unfamiliar Variety Performers

Since the three principals have practically all the acting chores, it is safe to say that much of the picture's lightness comes from them and Wes Ruggles' shiny, smart direction. One might object to "Too Many Husbands" on the grounds that it is a long variation of a single joke, but that, in view of all the laughs that frisk about, is on the unimportant side.

"New Faces" are on the Earle stage this week, performers not familiar to local audiences. Mary Small, whose voice is not unknown to radio listeners, is at the mike with "When You Wish Upon a Star" as her most effective offering. The aptly-named songstress won high favor yesterday afternoon, as did Walton and O'Rourke, whose puppet act had original twists.

Of course, the Roxyettes are in evidence and if their "Bonnet" routine did not seem so well coordinated as these remarkable dancers invariably present, their "Bike" scene made up for that first lack of precision. Joe Jackson, jr., a lad following in his father's footsteps, and the youthful Geraldine and Joe are the other stage performers who support a film that will take your mind from troubles and war talk.

FRANZ SCHOLZ, who wrote "Two Hearts in Three-Quarter Time," changed his name to Francis Spencer, when he became an American citizen. He wanted the name Scholz buried with the ugly memories he had of the conditions which had brought him to this country . . . Billy Wilder, who wrote "Ninotchka," opposed Scholz's name changing, and told him that his name should be perpetuated . . . "No," Spencer insisted. "I prefer to be Francis Spencer, and Franz Scholz will be forgotten" . . . "He won't be," Wilder informed. "When I become an American citizen next month. I'll have the right to select any name I want. I'm changing my name to Franz Scholz."

Hollywood Parade

By Jimmy Fidler

Hollywood, April 12.—From the Pittsburgh Press comes an item about the M. J. Ehrenfelds, "married 64 years without a quarrel." Interviewed, both said, "We've always been happy together."

FIDLER

Further along in their story, one fact jumped out at me: "Mr. Ehrenfeld has always been the breadwinner; she has devoted her entire attention to the homely duties of a wife."

I wonder how long the Ehrenfelds might have remained "happy together" had there been movies 60 years ago and had they been "of the profession." Could they—or any other couple—weather the stormy conditions that surround double-career marriages?

Hollywood is severely criticized for its shocking divorce rate. The public has come to look upon actors and actresses as subnormal human beings, almost incapable of the finer emotions of life. One woman said to me, "Those self-centered egoists think only of divorce and immorality."

That is not true. Hollywood people are like people of any city. The difference is, the rewards of screen success are so great that few actresses are brave enough to quit their careers when they marry. But when an occasional actress does have the courage to retire in order to be a wife (I cite Marian Nixon as proof of my words) she can be as happily married as the Ehrenfelds. Miss Nixon, now 100 per cent Mrs. William Seiter, has made her home, with its three children, a haven of peace and joy.

There are hundreds of potential Marian Nixons in Hollywood. But until they learn to quit work when they wed, or until they quit marriage until their careers are ended, I am afraid the film colony's divorce rate has no chance to lessen.

Being considerate of the other fellow's feelings sometimes pays dividends—even in Hollywood. The other day, at Twentieth Century-Fox, a brace of visiting magazine editors were set-touring under the guidance of a publicity scribe. Meeting George Ernest, kid star of the "Jones Family" series, he introduced the visitors, but, through a slip of the tongue, called George "Johnny Russell." The average actor would have corrected the mistake; George, realizing the publicist's embarrassment, said nothing. And so impressed were the editors by his gesture that he gets a feature'story break in each mag!

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, April 12.

Fannie Brice is supposed to be making money from her interior decorating activities. She'd done an apartment for George Cukor's sister. She's working on Mrs. Ira Gershwin's house—and is doing over Anita Loos' bedroom. But Fannie told me this morning she'll have to give it up if she wants to save her own bankroll—because when she comes across a whatnot which belongs with her scheme of things—and her clients say, "But I can't get that, it's too expensive," Fannie buys it as a present and gives it to them.

HOPPER

Nazimova's here to test for an important role at Metro. And isn't it funny that out-of-town guests who live at the Garden of Allah Hotel here have no idea that it was built around Nazimova's old home? Such is fame.

Shortly we'll have the privilege of seeing Paul Robeson in his old role in a revival of "Show Boat," with Norma Terris, John Boles, and Frances Langford. I wish they'd do what I suggested a year ago for the San Francisco Fair, but couldn't get one producer in town to listen to me—buy an old ferry boat, tie it up to Treasure Island, and revive "Show Boat."

I wonder why people belittle Artie Shaw instead of taking him seriously. His records alone bring him in $50,000 a year, which proves he's anything but a playboy. And he's just signed up with Ed Hurok, who manages the Russian Ballet, for a concert tour of 100 people playing semiclassical and his own compositions, and will limit himself to 30 appearances. He doesn't want Lana Turner to give up her career, but thinks she'd be happier working.

'Dr. Cyclops' and James' Band Prove Novelties at Capitol

"DR. CYCLOPS," Paramount picturization of an original screen play by Tom Kilpatrick, with Albert Dekker, Janice Logan, Thomas Coley, Charles Halton, Victor Kilian, and Frank Yaconelli. Directed by Ernest B. Schoedsack. Reviewed Friday afternoon, At the Capitol Theater.

Imagine waking up and finding yourself about the size of a spring frying chicken. And with a big, black cat chasing you, in the bargain!

This and many worse events befall the little people made out of big people by that mad scientist, "Dr. Cyclops." As a thriller, it looks as though "Dr. Cyclops" is going to set a success record only comparable to that other famed cinema killer-diller, "King Kong," which it recalls—in reverse. Yesterday's audience at the Capitol applauded the little people as they made miraculous escapes and gallant bids against annihilation.

"Dr. Cyclops" mingles fun with its blood-curdling episodes. There's something irresistibly comic about foot-high Dr. Bulfinch shouting, "Go away, you ridiculous creature!" to a hen about to peck him. Pedro slices bologna with a knife twice as big as himself. The whole crew rushes madly to the shelter of a cactus plant when that hungry cat appears. Finally, there's the complete humiliation of having Dr. Cyclops calmly catch Dr. Bulfinch in a butterfly net.

Dressed in Handkerchiefs

This mad yarn is set in the upper reaches of the Amazon jungle, a circumstance giving full rein to excellent work in Technicolor. Against a background of brilliant jungle color, the tiny adventurers meet with terrifying cockatoos, parrots and jaguars, also one demonic alligator. The great adventure starts when a scentific expedition goes to South America to assist the famed biologist, Dr. Cyclops. They soon discover that the eminent Cyclops is completely cuckoo, plan to take his radium mine away from him in the interest of the general good. But cunnning Cyclops lures them into his radium-power trap. They wake up dressed very completely in pocket handkerchiefs, apparently completely in the power of the madman.

There isn't much of what could be called acting in "Dr. Cyclops" outside of Albert Dekker as old Cyclops himself. But there isn't need of any in such a session of pure adventure. The magic of the picture lies in its fantastic story, the direction of Ernest B. Schoedsack, the trick photography of Henry Sharp and fine Technicolor work. The picture should make millions in both first-run and neighborhood houses.

Lew Lehr is the secondary star of the Capitol screen this week. Besides his usual newsreel seance, he has a short on nutsy inventions that had the audience in stitches.

James Fans Riot

Harry James and his orchestra were given a great reception by Friday afternoon's high school sector of the audience. Among the strictly high-test numbers dished up by Maestro James were the new "Boog-It," "Tuxedo Junction," the "Two o'Clock Jump" and a special 1940 version of that oldie, "Sheik of Araby." A dance tempo interpretation of that classic "Carnival of Venice" gave James full opportunity to show off his remarkable flash on the trumpet. The James singer, Dick Haymes, sang "Isle of May" and "Stardust" in beautiful style.

Off the musical side were impersonator Beatrice Howell, who did the funniest impression of Katharine Hepburn you'll ever see; the Three Fonzal Boys, acro-comics, and Jane Fraser, who brought down the house with some highly slippery jive-dancing. The Washington and Lee Glee Club were an added attraction, went over big, especially the soloist and the collegiate finale. They are booked for six performances only.

Yesterday afternoon's audience established a record for ebullience, spurred organist Art Brown into saying with a grin, "I wish I were a truant officer." It must have been especially tough on the W. and L. Glee Club, but they came through it like troupers, won a big hand.

MARY HARRIS.

Howard

A footlight frolic, jampacked with rhythm and starring the Deep River Boys, Butterbeans and Susie, Snookum Russell and his orchestra, with an additional half-hundred entertainers makes a bid for attention at the Howard Theater this week.

Scat-singer Snookum Russell now fronts his own band, a vigorous group of musicians, who zestfully tackle their task and hit the musical mark with "Darktown Strutter's Ball," "Tuxedo Junction," and "T Street Shuffle." Their female heat wave, Hannah Sylvester, brings a rise in temperature with her "Honeysuckle Rose." Bernard Brown proves himself dynamite on the drums as well as a vocalist of note.

After a score of years experience in laff-grabbing, Butterbeans and Susie show no signs of let-up, but are still among the leading sepia fun exponents. Also top-liners are the Leep River Boys whose "Cherokee" and "Balalaika" proves a symphony in vocal harmony.

Other applause seekers were Al and Freddie, two hi-de-ho boys and a ukulele; Taps Miller, clever dancing trumpeteer; Jones and Ray, hot-hoofing duo; Comedians Mason and Vigal, and the well drilled Addison Carey chorines.

On the screen, Wallace Beery, Dolores Del Rio and John Howard are the strange trio in the "Man From Dakota," striving to escape through Confederate lines in a Civil War prison break. The trials and adventures encountered are woven well through a fairly plausable film story.

Nats' Hudson to Make Debut Here Today

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Monty Stratton has announced that he will be back in the pitchers' box for the White Sox before this season is over despite last year's shooting accident which cost him his right leg. "Of course, I'll have some trouble fielding bunts," says Stratton, "but I'll be able to pitch all right."

Povich

Stratton's fortitude is commendable enough and he'll have the good wishes of every baseball fan in the Nation. But he is reckoning without the harsh, selfish side of baseball if he truly believes that he can stage a pitching come-back.

The players on the seven other clubs in the big leagues won't spare Stratton on account of his physical handicap. The first man to face him will probably lay down a bunt, and there will be a deliberate movement to bunt him out of the league. They won't show him any favors.

There may be sentiment in baseball, but Stratton won't be able to count on it. Those guys up at bat won't hesitate to bunt if it means getting on base or pushing a runner around. The big idea will be to win the ball game, and if Stratton can't field bunts it will be simply his tough luck. Managers will order bunts and the hitters will lay them down with alacrity, even if Stratton happens to be the pitcher.

That's the dead-serious side of baseball. Players are paid to win ball games and if the White Sox management exposes Stratton to a bunting attack, it should expect the worst. The White Sox wouldn't pull punches if they had the same opportunity to bunt. And unless the other clubs bunt Stratton out of there, they're apt to get licked because he is a powerful sort of pitcher. Picture, if you can, a team getting licked by Stratton and refraining from trying to beat him with a bunt.

A few years ago Rogers Hornsby tried to stay in the big leagues by moving to third base where there wouldn't be so much pressure on his aging legs. Did the ball players have any consideration for the old man? They did not. They bombarded him with bunts and made him quit.

The other day at Griffith Stadium the Bees stationed a rookie named Joe Gulledge at third base. Early in the game, the Nats felt him out with a bunt and discovered that he was a horrible green pea at the bunt-fielding business. That's all the Nats needed to know. For the rest of the game they bunted in every inning, unbothered by the fact that they were virtually sending the kid back to the minors.

One of the most popular men in the big leagues when he was pitching was Fred Marberry. Ball players not only respected him for his blazing fast ball but they liked him personally. Marberry as a star was no more than a big, bumptious kid, fraternizing with friend and foe alike before and after the game. And then he turned umpire.

One of Marberry's first assignments as an umpire brought him to Washington where he was working at first base. He was in friendly surroundings. Still with the Nats were many of the players with whom he had been on pennant-winning teams for Washington. They wanted to see Marberry make good as an umpire. But what happened? On the first decision Marberry made at first base, one of his old Washington pals all but climbed down his throat.

Eddie Rommel pitched valiently for the Athletics for nearly 20 years. Good old Eddie, who for more than a decade was the only good pitcher with the club. And then he turned umpire. That made things different. The town where they rode Rommel the hardest was Philadelphia and the team that howled loudest against his decisions was the Athletics.

Back in 1925, Walter Johnson, good old Walter was on the mound at Pittsburgh in a world series game for the Nats. It was raining and the pitching mound was a young bog. When the Nats were at bat, the Pirates hauled sawdust to the pitcher's box to give their hurlers a more secure footing. When Johnson walked to the Pittsburgh dugout to request some sawdust for himself between innings, what happened? The Pirates laughed at him, sent him back to pitch empty-handed. The big idea, you see, is to win the ball game.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, April 12.—Wilbur Shaw, the best and most articulate race driver in the world, thinks that pari-mutuels would be the salvation of the slowly disappearing race game.

Today there is only one big auto race, Indianapolis. The midget tracks have sprung up within the last few years, but the big-time ovals for the man-sized cars long since have been slugged into matchsticks. There used to be a regular circuit of them—and big money for the gasoline jockeys who lived long enough.

CONSIDINE

"Pari-mutuels would bring back those tracks," Shaw told us at the Indianapolis Speedway dinner tonight. "You talk about your English derbies and those big European sports events . . . Well, just imagine what Indianapolis would be with mutuels. We get 150,000 people now. We'd get twice that many if a fellow could go up and plunk down a deuce on one of our noses."

Joe Copps, Steve Hannagan's right hand man who handles the mammoth Indianapolis Track for Eddie Rickenbacker and his other owners, looked a trifle severely at the brisk sandy-haired driver.

"Well, you can forget that, Wilbur," Copps said. "There won't be any mutuels at Indianapolis."

"I know," the driver shrugged. "The State just won't go for the machines."

"That's not it," Copps said. "They have trotting races in Indiana and they operate mutuels. We don't have them, and won't have them, at Indianapolis because—well, we built it up on a non-betting basis and we want to keep it that way. It's the only thing of its kind in existence. There's never been a scandal attached to it. It has given something to the auto industry, to public safety . . ."

"And a lot of speed drivers are walking around with patches on their pants, too," Shaw interrupted. "I say mutuels would be a great idea. Tracks would crop up around the country, men would be put to work, we'd get bigger purses and. . . ."

Copps cut in this time. "Yeah, and suppose you held a $10 ticket to win on Floyd Roberts." Roberts, a good friend of Shaw's, and winner of the 1938 race, was killed at Indianapolis last year. Shaw thought that over for a while.

"I'd feel like hell," he mused, "but that's beside the point. You and I knew Roberts, but the people who'd bet wouldn't feel like we would. It wouldn't be much different to them than if a horse stumbled and had to be destroyed."

Shaw has the best record for consistency of any driver entered in next month's 500-mile race, and he thinks his wife has had a lot to do with it. "I wish it was permissible to put her in charge of my pit," he sighed.

"In 1938 my pit crew was giving me fits, so I came in to try to quiet them down. I got out of my car and I was standing there, boiling mad, when some drunk grabbed me by the arm and pulled me toward him. It knocked me off my feet and I fell against the pit rail, and I thought it broke all my ribs. I was so mad when I got up I was insane. All I could do was stand there and howl . . . My nerves were so shot. The next thing I remember they were holding me back from trying to kill him, and one of my men was screaming in my ear that I had wasted 25 seconds. Well . . . I got back in my car, and I lost that race by just 18 seconds. It cost me $25,000, missing first place."

Shaw chuckled. "That wouldn't have happened if my wife had been in there. But this year I've got the next best thing. I'm going to have a fellow sitting in my pit with a baseball bat across his knee . . . and the first guy who tries to grab at me is going to get it over the noggin."

Young Star Faces Orioles At Stadium

Game Will Be Played Unless It's Raining At Starting Time; Hollingsworth Report

The unveiling of blond Sidney Hudson, prize pitching rookie of the Nats, is scheduled today at Griffith Stadium. Manager Bucky Harris will send his highly-publicized young man against the Baltimore Orioles in an exhibition game, weather permitting.

Griffith Stadium officials announced last night that barring rain at game time, there will be a contest. The field was covered by a tarpaulin throughout yesterday's rain.

Hudson, who is being groomed for a starting berth on the Nats' pitching staff despite his meager Class D league experience, will hurl six innings against the Orioles Walter Masterson, another rookie right-hander whom Harris is beginning to vision as an asset, will pitch the last three innings.

Rookie Delivers

The Nats set something of a record when they paid the Class D Sanford Club of the Florida State League $7,500 for Hudson, but the rookie has justified the purchase price in his spring performances. In six starts on the mound for the Nats he has never been unimpressive.

Young Hudson was in a big league park for the first time in his life when he walked into Griffith Stadium this week. Looking about him at the vast outfield space, he observed "This looks like a pitchers' park."

The workout of the Nats scheduled for yesterday was washed out by the day-long rain, but Manager Bucky Harris was not entirely regretful. "The day's rest will be helpful," said Harris. "We've had a game every day for more than a week and the boys have earned a rest."

Hollingsworth Reports

Al Hollingsworth, the pitcher who comes to Washington from Brooklyn in the Giuliani deal, will join the Nats today . . . a few hours before Hollingsworth was assigned to the Nats, the Brooklyn club announced he would be released to their Montreal farm . . . on Monday the Nats will hold a special dress rehearsal in the morning for the photographers . . . the official 1940 group picture is on the program . . . the Nats will be arrayed for the first time in their white home uniforms . . . in company with Secretary Edward B. Eynon, jr., six secret service men headed by Col. Starling inspected the arrangements for the President's excursion into Griffith Stadium for the opening game ceremonies on Tuesday . . . Charley Gelbert has a yen to turn pitcher, but Bucky Harris is frowning on the idea . . . Gelbert was a pitcher throughout his college career . . . Harris rejection of Gelbert's plan is prompted doubtless by the failure of Red Kress on the mound after ten years as an infielder . . . Harris has made no choice of pitchers for the three-game series with the Red Sox, except to announce that Dutch Leonard will pitch the opener . . . Ken Chase, Joe Haynes or Joe Krakauskas may figure in the second game . . . because Haynes is a right-hander and the Red Sox are topheavy with right-handed hitters, he may get the call.

Middleburg Hunt Cup Lists Co-Favorites

Black Sweep, Faction Fighter Reign in 20th Renewal Today

By Anne Hagner

Middleburg, Va., April 12.—Black Sweep, Mrs. Frank M. Gould's good timber topper, and Paul Mellon's Faction Fighter, twice winner of the Carolina Cup, are expected to go to the post as joint favorites in the Middleburg Cup race, which is the feature of the hunt meeting events to be held near here tomorrow.

Black Sweep, who won the cup last year under Mrs. Turner Wiltshire's colors, will also have a stablemate, Hold Forth, in the race. It will be Hold Forth's first start over timber, though he finished third in the Piedmont Hunt point-to-point two weeks ago for Arthur White.

Or Else to Start

William Cochran, jr.'s Or Else, winner of the Virginia Gold Cup, will be making his first start of the season in the cup race. He is also being pointed for the Maryland Hunt Cup by Trainer Frank Bonsal, jr.

Another entrant is Mrs. Robert C. Winmill's Little Duchess, who has carried her owner to victory in several point-to-points this season and is considered one of the best jumping horses in the hunt country.

Mrs. Amory Carhart's Sir Romeo, who ran third at the Deep Run races last week, is another sure starter, along with Richard K. Mellon's Escape III, winner at Deep Run; Mrs. Steyart Spilman's Postman Home, winner of the Sand Hills race early this spring, and Mrs. Turner Wiltshire's Houseman, another recruit from the hunting field.

The first race on the card, which will be called at 2 p. m., has among its entries Mrs. Jane Fowler Bassett's Herroro, winner over the stiff Montpelier course last November, and Paul Mellon's Frozen North, another dependable 'chaser. A newcomer to the game, Whitelaw Reid, of New York, has entered his Dark Finn, which he will ride himself.

The two brush races, which always attract a long list of entries, will see some of the best in action tomorrow. One is Mrs. Lewis Parks' Crooked Wood, who has won two races in two previous starts over the Middleburg course.

Dark Horse Wins Twice in College Golf

By the Associated Press

Athens, Ga., April 12.—Darkhorse Carey Middlecoff, Mississippi's lone contender in the Southern Intercollegiate Golf Championship, stroked his way to the semifinals over two favored opponents today in a determined bid for the 1940 crown.

Middlecoff, after defeating Chuck Alexander, of Duke, 1 up, on the twenty-first green, sprang an upset by ousting highly regarded Henry Castillo, captain of Louisiana State's golf team, 2 up, in the quarter-final.

The raw, blustery day was a hectic one for the collegiate shotmakers and the four top-ranking qualifiers of yesterday's medal play were relegated to the sidelines before sundown.

Skip Alexander, Duke's sharpshooter, went out in the first round after scoring medalist honors.

Diz Dean to Be Back In Uniform Today

'Everything Swell' Between Rebel Hurler and Hartnett; Phil Wrigley Approves $100 Fine for Violation

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 12.—Dizzy Dean will be back in uniform with the Chicago Cubs tomorrow, Manager Gabby Hartnett announced today after a conference with Phil K. Wrigley, owner of the Cubs.

Wrigley approved Hartnett's action of fining the big pitcher $100 at Topeka, Kans., last Wednesday for a curfew violation.

"It's water over the dam," said Hartnett. "I want to forget about it. I'm sure Dean will pay the fine without any more beefs."

Wrigley said the door was open, if Dean cared to discuss the situation with him, but he doubted if Dean would call.

Meanwhile Dean was quartered with his pretty wife, Patricia, at their hotel. When newsmen interviewed him, Jerome Herman gulped, grinned somewhat sheepishly, and said:

"I talked with Gabby this morning and everything's swell between us now. He's square. He said he'd forget all about this thing if I would, and I said I would. We both agreed there's no use bothering Mr. Wrigley with it.

"I admit I was wrong. I came in late at Wichita and I had a fine coming. But Gabby made me mad the way he did it. Instead of going to his or my room he let me have it in the hotel lobby and I was all burned up."

Ol' Diz, however, started cooling off yesterday at St. Louis when he met Mrs. Dean, who pointedly inferred Dizzy was going to be a "good boy" again. And under the somewhat patient won't-you-be-good smile of his wife today, Dizzy "guessed" he'd see about meeting the fine shortly and hoped he'd see action in the city series with the White Sox this week-end.

"Boy, my arm feels fine," said Jerome Herman, warming to a familiar subject. "It has ever since I gave those Browns only two hits in five innings last Monday. I just want to get out there and pitch. Everything's just swell between Gabby and me."

At which Patricia stopped cutting Dizzy's ham, crossed her fingers and grinned:

"Until the next time."

Wrigley implied that Dean was a problem apart from the other players on the club.

"When we bought Dean, we bought insubordination," he said.

"If he breaks the rules, he'll be fined, of course, but you have to expect that. If he contaminates the other players, then we'll get rid of Dean.

"But you've got to expect those things from Dean. He's just a great big kid and has to be handled as such. I don't think much of hard and fast rules. Forty fellows sit up nights making rules and 40 others sit up thinking ways to dodge 'em."

Orioles Lose Final Game Of Play-Offs

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 12.—The Detroit Holzbaugh-Fords trimmed the Baltimore Orioles, 2 to 1, tonight in a tough scrap before 6,000 fans to win the national amateur hockey championship, three games to one.

Two second period goals, by Jimmy Baudino on a rebound shot into an open net and by Bill Jennings on a lone dash, settled the battle although the Orioles, finishing an exhausting schedule, managed a last-period rally for a counter by Ned Vitarelli.

The Detroiters, regular season champions of the Michigan-Ontario League, defeated the favored Orioles twice in Baltimore and lost here last night in overtime. Holzbaugh has yet to complete a post-season playoff series with London, Ontario, M-O League rival.

Champions of the Eastern Amateur League, the Orioles suffered their first defensive lapse after less than two minutes of play in the second period. Goalie Omer Kelly left his post to sto a sharp drive by Wiljanen, and Baudino calmly pushed the loose puck into the unprotected net.

Come What May, Racing Goes On At Bowie Today

Racing will be conducted at Bowie as usual today, General Manager Joseph Farrell said last night, following a day-long rain combined with snow and the threat of freezing temperature during the night.

The official said tractors would be used to work the track throughout the night and he was confident the racing strip would not be frozen for today's program.

Feature of the card will be the $5,000 Southern Maryland Handicap, in which Honey Cloud will be the probable favorite in a field of five.

39 of 76 'Experts' Name Cards

Failure of Senior Circuit Champions To Repeat Makes Choice Reasonable

By the Associated Press

New York, April 12.—Despite the fact that their infield admittedly is shaky, the St. Louis Cardinals are the choice of a majority of the Nation's baseball writers to beat out the Cincinnati Reds in the coming National League race.

Possibly on the knowledge that a champion of the senior circuit seldom repeats, if for no more sensible reason, 39 out of 76 experts polled by the Associated Press pick the Red Birds to play in the World Series next October. Only 34 believe the Cincinnati pitching staff can do it again, while two like the Chicago Cubs and one lone rebel plugs for the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Came With Rush

If the Cardinals should make good for the guessers, their victory would climax one of the most sensational rises to the top in recent baseball history. Two years ago they finished nowhere, and even when the 1939 campaign began they were not considered of pennant caliber.

Yet, after a slow start last year, they suddenly began booming in midseason and before it was over they had given Cincinnati a genuine scare. Only in the final week of the campaign did the Reds overcome them in a crucial series. In that vital series, incidentally, the young St. Louis pitchers held Cincinnati scoreless for one stretch of 22 consecutive innings.

Whichever wins this time, the preponderance of opinion is that the Reds and Cards will finish one-two. Nine voters, however, picked Chicago for the runner-up spot, while six named the Giants, four the Brooklyn Dodgers and two the Pirates.

Complete Tabulation

Otherwise, the experts appear to be pretty well baffled. Two clubs were selected to finish in six different positions each, an obvious impossibility, while Pittsburgh was named to wind up in every spot except eighth. The Phillies had them blocked there.

Figuring on a point basis—8 for a first place choice, 7 for a second, etc.—here is how the voting stands:

St. Louis, 557 points; Cincinnati, 550; Brooklyn, 372; Chicago, 351; Pittsburgh, 340; New York, 331; Boston, 156; Philadelphia, 79.

This virtually is the order in which they finished last year, the only exceptions being that Cincinnati won out over St. Louis and the New York Giants landed a notch ahead of Pittsburgh. The experts evidently figure that Pittsburgh's new manager, Frankie Frisch, will correct that little matter.

Chicago Bears Play Redskins Here Nov. 17

By the Associated Press

New York, April 12.—The Chicago Bears' first National Professional Football League appearance in Washington will feature the Redskins' 1940 home card, it was revealed here today as schedules were announced at the annual league meeting.

The Bears will visit the Nation's Capital November 17. The Redskins face an 11-game schedule, six of which will be played at Griffith Stadium. The club will open with Brooklyn at home September 15 and end its season at Philadelphia December 1. This will make the first time in four years Washington has not closed its campaign with the Giants at the Polo Grounds.

Washington will travel to play New York, Brooklyn, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Detroit.

Storck May Not Be Supplanted

The move inside the league to supplant Carl C. Storck as president lost momentum today as club representatives labored harmoniously through routine matters.

Most of the day was given over to consideration of the 1940 schedules. In the past each club arranged its own program, but under a new arrangement this year the league president drew up a tentative schedule for all clubs.

George Marshall, owner of the Washington Redskins and leader of the group that offered the presidency to Arch Ward, Chicago sports editor, at $25,000 for ten years, emerged from the session long enough to tell reporters that Storck apparently would be retained. Ward two days ago declined the offer.

Marshall said there were no other candidates for the post as far as he knew, but added he did not know how long a new contract for Storck would call for.

The election will be the last order of business and may not be reached until Sunday.

In a straight-player deal, the Pittsburgh Steelers today sent Kay Eakin, former University of Arkansas triple-threat back, to the New York Giants in exchange for the veteran tackle, Ox Parry.

Eakin was the first choice of the Steelers in the loop's annual draft meeting on graduating college players last fall. The only player selected before him was George Cafego, Tennessee back, who was chosen by the Chicago Cardinals. A 185-pounder, Eakin was one of the Southwest's top backs and forward passers last year.

Washington Redskins—September 15, Brooklyn; 22, New York; 29, open; October 6, at Pittsburgh; 13, Chicago Cardinals; 20, at Philadelphia; 27, at Detroit; November 3, Pittsburgh; 10, at Brooklyn; 17, Chicago Bears; 24, at New York; December 1, Philadelphia.

New York Giants (home dates only)—October 13, Philadelphia; 20, Pittsburgh; 27, Chicago Bears; November 10, Cleveland; 17, Green Bay; 24, Washington; December 1, Brooklyn.

Brooklyn Dodgers (home dates only)—October 4, Philadelphia; 13, Pittsburgh; November 3, New York; 10, Washington; 17, Cleveland; 21, Chicago Cardinals.

Challedon Has New Sister; Bay Filly Foaled at Farm

Special Dispatch to The Post

Frederick, Md., April 12.—Challedon, "horse of the year" in 1939, has a full sister, which was foaled at William L. Brann's Glade Valley farm near here tonight. The bay filly is in excellent condition. Frank Grosche, studmaster at the Brann estate, announced. Laura Gal, dam of Challedon, was bred back to imported Challenger II on May 12, 1939, the day Challedon defeated Johnstown in the mud to win the Preakness at Pimlico.

Weather Forces Postponement of Six Local Games

Old Man Weather forced postponement of six local high school ball games yesterday, two of which were to have launched the annual interhigh series.

Roosevelts' tangle with Anacostia was the only game for which a future date was set, the teams to meet on May 28 after the finish of the regular season. Western and Central failed to agree on a date for the playing of their game.

Also indifinitely postponed were the Georgetown Prep-Rockville, Washington-Lee-Falmouth, Tech-Blair and Bethesda-Gonzaga games.

Dizzy Dame Takes Bowie Feature in Rain, Brings $9.70

Daily Double Hits New Low, Pays $8.70

Nick Wall Adds 1 More Winner to Sting in 3d With Flying Waters

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Bowie, Md., April 12.—On a program that began in a downpour, ended in a snowstorm and drew the smallest crowd of the meeting, it was only fitting that a horse named Dizzy Dame should win a feature race called "The Dr. Cyclops Purse." The event, a sprint of 6 furlongs, was dubbed for the movie which opened today at the Capitol Theater, in Washington, and Sam Jack Kaufman, maestro, was on hand to present Hubert (Dynamite) Kerr, owner of the winner, with a gold trophy. Dizzy Dame drove to a two-length victory over J. P. McConnell's Double B. Surprise Box, in the colors of Mrs. A. Knight, was third in the field of six.

Dizzy Dame was under the handling of Apprentice Jockey Selby Clark, who had to pick up some lead to make the 100 pounds the 6-year-old carried. The winner paid a $9.70 mutuel.

Owner Kerr appeared at the winner's circle with a cigar a foot long in his mouth, which did not keep him from grinning from ear to ear. Kerr is a "gypsy horseman," and he's proud of it. He lives in a tack room and has been right here on the Bowie grounds since the meeting last fall. This was his first victory of the session.

Double B Failed

Double B appeared headed for an easy victory as he opened a lead along the backstretch. The 8-year-old shook off a series of challenges to the stretch, and then Dizzy Dame and Young Clark got to work. The mare answered his command with a burst of speed that could not be denied.

Daily double pay-off hit a new low of a meeting of slim mutuels on the twin wager when Miss Maker, a $5.70 shot, teamed with Busy Fingers, a $3.80 proposition, to produce $8.70. Miss Maker won the first race by a lip over Marin in a finish that few believed could be anything but a dead heat. Doctor's Nurse was third in the field of seven going 6 furlongs. Marin was the favorite by 5 cents on the dollar over the winner.

Busy Fingers, the first public choice to win on the program, came from behind to defeat Wildmute. Millchic and four others, including Levena, a first-time starter and a paddock tip. In making it two straight victories, the winner performed in the colors of James Malone and was handled by Jockey Charlie Durando.

Wall Rides Another

Jockey Nick Wall, leading rider at the meeting, added another victory to his string in the third race. He rode Flying Waters and the 3-year-old gelding flew through the mud and water to win by a length over Hazel W., with Rough Biscuit third. The winner and the third horse were co-favorite and the backers of the winner took down $5.30.

J. Y. Christmas' Howard, 9-year-old campaigner, won the fifth race as Jockey Nick Wall apparently went to sleep on Head Hunter, the second horse. Interpreter was third in the field of six operating at a mile and a sixteenth. Howard, far back in the early running, came very wide while making his move.

Selections at Bowie

Dear Al:

It looks as though there's no chance of J. Y. Christmas' Rough Pass getting to the Kentucky Derby. The colt has been ailing this spring and his owner-trainer has taken him out of training. The Brandywine Stable's Bull Whip and others shipped into Havre de Grace yesterday from Florida, where Bull Whip ran second in the closing day stake at Tropical Park. Speaking of optimists, I saw one of the early arrivals at the track yesterday getting his shoes shined. Trainer Buster Bedwell has shipped 12 horses, owned by Gustave Ring of Washington, to Havre de Grace for the meeting which opens Monday. J. P. (Sammy) Smith is sending the Victor Emanuel horses, including Omission, winner of the Bowie Kindergarten, to New York. Jim Obrey is making the saddle engagements for Jockey Danny Driscoll, regular rider of Honey Cloud. Jockey Ralph Neves, contract rider for the Millsdale Stable, has served out his suspension dealt him in California. Neves will start riding today for the Red and White barn. Apprentice Charlie Durando will go to New York today to report to trainer Jim Fitzsimmons. Backers of Marin in yesterday's first race were wishing he had left a day earlier. Leeds Riely, Charles Town's ambassador at large, was a visitor. He reports that the huge new water tank has been installed at the West Virginia track. Apprentice E. Suttle leaves today for Narragansett Park and some Maryland bettors will be glad to hear the news. Art Brown was conspicuous by his absence. But he was here in spirit, having sent out his usual donation by Ray Bell, Capitol Theater publicity man. It is true, last Thursday was my birthday and I was 41. Of course I played 4 and 1 in the daily double. If I had been 88 years old I would have cashed the double. But who wants to be 88 for a $17.90 pay-off. Shirley Povich took a day off from baseball for a fling at the bangtails. Confucius say: LIMERICK will be far from last in the last race.

BILL.

First race—Jadaan displayed marked improvement when finishing third to Grand Duke in good time in his last race. He encounters a cheaper field today and the mud increases his chances. Lifelike was a slow beginner, but finished strongly last start and might be up to challenge the top horse. Hiblaze for show.

Second race—Company Halt, away a long time, has been carefully prepped for this heat by the veteran Whitey Abel and is reported fit. Cleaning Time has been idle since last fall, but figures to provide the stoutest contention on the merits of good races last year. Schley Buck may wake up.

Third race—Cleo Louise sported with a shifty field of juveniles in her debut at this oval. She is pitted against classier company today, but still figures to hold the edge. Pete Jr. came from far back to finish third in the Kindergarten and will be the one to beat. Scout Time is dangerous.

Fourth race—Flagetta indicated her willingness to negotiate the muddy going when second to Dark May last start. The contention here does not appear to be so keen. Nancy Mae has been racing herself into condition and might become a dangerous factor. Rowes Crump can better poor recent races.

Fifth race—Aethelwold proved he was in tiptop shape when he deadheated with Conde Rico in the Bowie Spring Handicap. He has a slight edge over Honey Cloud, winner of the Rowe Memorial earlier in the meeting. Conde Rico figures to whip the others.

Sixth race—Officiate was in all kinds of trouble in his last race. With a fair share of racing luck he should earn the verdict today. Flushing has speed, but is not in his best form. Playmore will like the muddy going and is a possible threat.

Seventh race—Scarlet O finished in third place

Five Baseball Games, Track Meet Scheduled Here Today

Wolverine Nine to Play Terps, Hoyas

Catholic, American And Gallaudet in Meet at Brookland; G. U. Trackmen Busy

By Jack Munhall

Kept idle by yesterday's freakish rain and snow, District college athletes welcomed today's forecast of fair weather in hopes of participating in a heavy and varied schedule.

Weather permitting there is slated for local consumption five baseball games, a pair of tennis matches and a tri-cornered track meet, while in the only out-of-town appearance of a D. C. team Georgetown's cindermen will open their outdoor season at Annapolis.

Maryland and Michigan nines both hope to get in double-headers. The Terps and Wolverines who were supposed to play yesterday rescheduled the game for 10 o'clock this morning. Then in the afternoon Maryland will meet Richmond at 2:30 while Michigan hops over to the Hilltop for a contest with Georgetown at the same hour.

The other diamond offering will bring together American University and Elizabethtown (Pa.) Teachers at 2:30 at A. U. In the triangular track meet Catholic University will play host to A. U. and Gallaudet at 2 o'clock. The two tennis matches pit Maryland and Michigan at 9:30 at College Park, and George Washington and West Virginia at 9:30 at Columbia Country Club.

Fans Go to Annapolis

Although there promises to be sufficient action locally to satify the most fastidious sports fan, more than a few Washingtonians will motor down to Annapolis, there perhaps to view a new world's shot-put record in the making. For Alfred Blozis, the herculean Georgetown sophomore, who holds every worthwhile indoor mark begins his onslaught on the outdoor standards.

Entered in not only the shot-put, but also the discus, javelin and broad jump, Blozis is expected to break Thompson Stadium records for the first three named events and possibly the world's mark for the 16-pound shot. This mark is now held at 57 feet 1 inch by Jack Torrence, mammoth L. S. U. athlete.

Were not Blozis scheduled to compete the Georgetown-Navy meet still could qualify as a first-class attraction because it brings together a pair of powerful and well-balanced squads in 14 events. The Hoyas are strongly fortified in all running contests, and, with Blozis carrying off most of the field events, should pick up enough points to win the meet. However, the Middies are equipped to offer stiff opposition all along the line.

Navy is especially strong in the sprints, where it has Leon Chabot, and in the middle distance with Vinnie Healey and Howard Montgomery. Moreover the hosts figure to have an edge in the hurdles, where Georgetown appears the weakest.

This meet will serve both teams as a warm-up for the Penn Relays April 26 and 27 at Philadelphia.

Two Games Listed

Besides the track meet there are two baseball games, two lacrosse matches and sailing and tennis on the card at Annapolis. The thrice-beaten varsity nine will play Lafayette; the lacrosse team will meet Penn State and the tennis team will face Columbia. Brown will offer sailing opposition while the Navy "B" squad engages Virginia in lacrosse and the plebe baseball team tangles with South River (N. J.) High School.

Georgetown's undefeated nine is expected to be severely tested today when it strives to make Ray Fisher's Michigan Wolverines its fourth straight victim. Michigan recently routed Navy, 13-2, and is said to have an even more powerful club than last season when it won 18 games and lost nine.

Russell Dobson and John Barry, both righthanders, are slated to divide the pitching duties for Michigan while Georgetown will use Vinnie Powers and Bill Wixted, also orthodox flingers. A bright star of the invaders is Captain and Centerfielder Charlie Pink who most likely will be remembered for his feats here last year against both Maryland and Georgetown. A great hitter and a speedy figure in the outfield and on the bases, Pink is accounted by scouts as promising major league material.

Maryland will have its mound aces, the left-handed Pershing Mondorff and the right-handed Pershing Mondorff available for Michigan and Richmond. The Terps boast a three-game winning streak after having dropped their first two starts.

C. U. Trackmen Favored

Catholic University's track team, unbeaten outdoors last season, will be favored over American and Gallaudet although a pair of its keymen are doubtful starters. Charlie Moutenot and Roger Cooper, both crack sprinters, are nursing bad legs. Moutenot, who was to have competed in the 50 and 100 yard dashes and also in the high jump and pole vault, insists he will be ready, but even so he will be greatly handicapped.

Pete Sachon, quarterback of the Cardinals' 1939 eleven, will carry his school's hopes in the field events, being entered in the javelin, discus and shot put, while Capt. Albert Gil Borges is listed for the pole vault despite an injured chest.

American University and Gallaudet both boast the largest squads in their history and will be pointing to reverse the result of last year's meet among the three schools which C. U. won with 87 points to 48 for Gallaudet and 18 for A. U.

The Eagles will rely heavily on Bill Adams in the sprints; Otto Strietsberger in the half mile; John Jablonsky and Jack Boykin in the 880; Jim Flaherty in the low hurdles, and Bob Little in the mile and 2 miles.

Gallaudet's chief hopes are Ed Stevens, who holds the meet record of 5 feet 11 inches in the high jump; Mrkobrad, Roberts and Malzkuhn in the weight events; Dixon and Hinge in the mile and 2 miles; Latz in the middle distance races; Phillips and Showe in the hurdles, and McCoskey, Pollack, Galvin and Brown in the sprints.

Dixie League Opens Season As Fans Shiver

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, April 12.—Overcoated fans braved wintry blasts today to witness the opening of the fortieth Southern Association baseball season. Nashville, New Orleans and Little Rock achieved inaugural triumphs. Only 15,564 saw the three games as temperatures around 40 degrees cut heavily into expected attendance.

The raw, cold weather forced postponement of the opener at Knoxville, where Chattanooga's champion Lookouts were scheduled against the Knoxville Smokies.

Little Rock's Travelers hit timely and took advantage of errors to defeat Memphis, 5 to 3, before 3,083 fans.

With the weather near freezing and fur coats and mufflers plentiful, the New Orleans Pelicans rallied in the last two innings to defeat the Birmingham Barons, 6 to 5, at Birmingham. Only 4,275 fans saw the contest.

The Nashville Vols jumped on the deliveries of Larry Miller early, took a 6-0 lead and coasted to a 12-to-8 victory over the Atlanta Crackers before 8,206 fans. The weather was around 39 degrees.

St. Louis Clubs Name Moundsmen For City Series

St. Louis, April 12 (AP).—Johnny Whitehead for the Browns and Fiddlin' Bill McGee for the Cardinals are probable starting pitchers in the first game of the St. Louis City series tomorrow.

The remainedr of the Browns' line-up probably will be the same that starts the American League race in Detroit next Tuesday, but two important Cardinal cogs will be missing—Johnny Mize and Jimmy Brown, infielders.

Both have been in St. Louis for treatment of injured knees. The club surgeon has assured Manager Ray Blades they can play in the National League opening game with Pittsburgh here next week.

Otherwise, says Blades, his team is in good shape.

Fred Haney, boss of the Browns, reports his club in fine condtion and stronger than last year in the infield, outfield and pitching. He needs a topnotch catcher.

Jean Bauer Wins Asheville Golf

Asheville, N. C., April 12 (AP).—Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., fired a 1-over-par 36, 42—78 through cold winds on the Biltmore Forest Country Club course today and won the Land of the Sky women's 72-hole medal play tournament with a 330.

A stroke behind was Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., whose final round was 42, 40—82. She had led the small field of 17 at the end of yesterday's 54 holes by 3 strokes. Eliza Coze, of Asheville, wound up in third place with 386 strokes by today's 48, 49—97.

Corrine Hauser Tops Independent Bowlers

Corinne Hauser's 133 game was highest in the Independent Ladies Bowling League last night at Arcadia, as two pinwomen tied for high game. Both Anna Daut and Marguarite McDermott rolled 340. Chestnut Farms swept team honors with 538 and 1,540.

Sons of Navy Men, 60 Strong, Box for Junior Titles Today

'Gnats' to 'Super Heavies' Scrap In 21st Meet for 30 to 130 Pounders

Sixty healthy youngsters, most of them sons of naval officers, will compete at 10 o'clock this morning in Spike Webb's twenty-first annual Navy Junior Boxing Championships at Annapolis. The youths will weigh in from the gnat weight of 30 pounds to "super heavyweights" tipping the scales at about 130 pounds.

Fifteen champions will be on hand to defend their honors in the same ring that is used for the varsity ring matches and the ringside will be crowded with mothers and relatives, many of whom will act in eapacities ranging from trainers to managers.

Four movie newsreel cameramen will be there to record the results for all posterity and what with gay banners decorating the huge gym the affair will take on a Roman holiday touch.

Some of the competing youngsters are sons of naval officers who 15 or 25 years ago were entered as 35-pounders but who now command destroyers and submarines for the United States Navy.

According to Spike Webb, coach of all boxing at the Naval Academy, some of the Middies' good varsity fighters have sprung from this junior tournament, the most recent, Bill Godfrey and Russell Willson.

Stant took the measure of Bob Harmon, 1 up, giving the Cards an even break for best ball in the second foursome. His partner, Jerry Ledrina, was beaten by Maryland's Bill Kimball, 4 and 3.

Maryland swept the first foursome when George De Witt defeated Jack O'Leary, 5 and 4. Bill Rea beat Carmen Pirro, 4 and 3, and the pair combined for a best ball of 6 and 5.

Illinois' U. S. Gym Crown Threatened

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 12.—Illinois' bid for a second straight team title will be challenged by the United States Naval Academy and the University of Minnesota tomorrow night in the national collegiate gymnastic championships at the University of Chicago.

Navy holds a victory over Army and the Eastern Intercollegiate title, while Minnesota won the recent Big Ten championship, with Illinois second by only half a point. Other institutions entered include Chicago, Temple University, Eastern titlists in 1938 and Denison University.

Joe Giallombardo, Illinois' captain, will be the only defending champion in the field. Last year he won the tumbling and all-around performance crowns. Another outstanding individual competitor is Stanley Ellison of Navy, who already holds two records in the rope climb.

Washington Lacrossemen Face Baltimore

Open Home Season At Central Stadium; Other Sports on Card

Lacrosse, step-child of college sports, comes back to Washington this afternoon at Central Stadium where the newly organized Washington Athletic Association ten faces the Baltimore Athletic Club in its first home engagement of the season at 3:15.

The match features a field day program sponsored by the association which hopes to enlist all Washington's adult athletes under its banner in an effort to promote amateur sports in the city. Badminton, horseshoe pitching, wrestling and track are scheduled.

The program opens with a flag-raising ceremony at 2 o'clock. Badminton, horseshoe pitching and wrestling will follow immediately. Track events, consisting of 220-yard flat and low hurdles races and a pole vault exhibition, will be staged between halves of the lacrosse match.

Sothoron Injured

Washington will be without the services of "South" Sothoron, crack defense man who was injured in the Johns Hopkins fray last Wednesday. Sothoron's side was stove in when accidentally tapped by a Hopkins man and he will be out for several weeks. Coach Joe Deckman will start Ed Fletcher in Sothoron's position this afternoon.

The starting lineup will have Johnny Muncks at goal; Jim Laughran, point; Oden Bowie, cover point; Fletcher, first defense; Rod Brooks, second defense; Milt Roberts, center; Harry Hamilton, second attack; Jack Badenhoop, first attack; Leo Hantske, out home; Temple Jarrell, in home.

Lacrosse will be played regardless of weather conditions. Baltimore, comprised of former Maryland and Hopkins players, got off on the wrong foot last week, bowing to Hopkins. Last year the clubmen lost only to Mount Washington, defeating Princeton, Montclair, Crescent A. C. and Maryland. The Orioles always have figured importantly in the fight for the national club championship, won last year by Mount Washington.

Weather Hampers Team

This year Washington, ably coached and gradually rounding into peak condition, has an excellent chance of being the first club to win the title its first year in the field. Unfavorable weather has hampered the team thus far, but a victory over Baltimore would be a step in the right direction and afford proof of its prowess.

Frank Cronin, Logan Schutz and Hermie Evans—all former Marylanders—and Charley Shinn head the cast of trackmen who will display their talents this afternoon.

Bill Shreve and Max Farrington, second and third ranking singles players in the District, respectively, will manufacture the badminton exhibition.

19 Schools Enter Duke Track Meet

Special Dispatch to The Post

Durham, N. C., April 12.—Trackmen for 19 southern high and prep schools will battle it out in Duke Stadium tomorrow for the championship of the seventh annual Duke invitational interscholastic track and field meet.

First of the events—the pole vault, high jump, javelin and shot put—will be staged starting at 1:30 o'clock but the main show will not begin until 2:30 when the first running event, the 440-yard relay, is held.

Officials would not predict a possible winner but if there was a favorite it was the Jefferson High team of Roanoke, Va., which last year was defeated by half a point by the Riverside Military Academy. The Riverside boys are not entered this year.

In addition to the Roanoke outfit, the following teams are entered: Central, of Washington, D. C.; Lanier, of Macon, Ga; Newport News, Va. High; Durham High; John Marshall, of Richmond, Va.; Hargrave Military Academy, of Chatham, Va; Maury High, of Norfolk; Thomas Jefferson, of Richmond; Asheville School for Boys; Male High, of Louisville, Ky.; Chapel Hill High; Boys High, of Atlanta, Ga.; Episcopal, of Lynchburg, Va.; Academy of Richmond County, Augusta, Ga.; Henderson High; Washington and Lee High, of Clarendon, Va.; High Point High, and Hampton, Va. High.

Four crack relay events will feature this year's meet. In addition to the 440-yard relay, there will be a special medley spring relay and relays of 880 yards and a mile. Plaques will be presented to the winning teams in these events with medals going to the four members of each of the winning outfits.

The points will also be doubled for relay participation. They will go 10-6-4-2 for the first four places respectively where in other events the points as usual will be awarded 5-3-2-1.

With the exception of Riverside, all former champions will take part in this year's affair. They are: Durham High, 1934 champs; High Point, 1935; John Marshall of Richmond, 1936; Maury of Norfolk, 1937 and 1938.

Other events to be staged in addition to the four relays are the 100, mile run, high hurdles, shot put, discus, pole valut, high jump, javelin and broad jump.

Weary Rangers Seek To Clinch Cup Tonight

Fresher Toronto Club Confident of Evening Series for Stanley Trophy in Match on Home Ice; Injuries Handicap New York

By the Associated Press

Toronto, April 12.—In contrast to their standings in the Stanley Cup playoffs of the National Hockey League, the New York Rangers were moody and not particularly confident today while the Toronto Maple Leafs exuded enthusiasm for tomorrow night's sixth session.

The Rangers were dead tired from the 91 minutes of play it took to down the Leafs, 2-1, last night and move out in front in the playoffs, three games to two. It was the second overtime struggle of the series and the gruelling play has told on the Broadway Blue Shirts.

Alex Shibicky, who sprained his ankle in the third game, attempted to play last night but the pain was so severe he had to leave the bench before the game was over. Others had lesser aches and pains.

"We just haven't got a substitute player around whom we feel we can call on with the expectation of getting major league ability," admitted Manager Lester Patrick ruefully. "The crop at our Philadelphia farm this year was the worst in a long time."

On the other hand Toronto called on four reserves last night and even though the maneuver failed to win, Coach Dick Irwin declared, "I was completely satisfied with the way the replacements went." He added that some of the four might be kept in uniform again tomorrow night.

This feeling that they were fresher and had an advantage in reserves bolstered the Leafs for the crucial sixth game which could mean the Stanley Cup for New York if the Rangers win.

"I'm not worried the slightest about tomorrow's game," asserted Irwin. "The advantage is still with us because we are physically stronger and because we'll be on our home ice."

If a seventh game is necessary it will be played here next Tuesday.

Jake Powell Called 'Very Sick Man'

Ashland, Ky., April 12 (AP).—Physicians reported Jake Powell, New York Yankee outfielder, as a "very sick man" today and barred all visitors.

Powell was injured in an exhibition game here between the Yankees and the Brooklyn Dodgers Wednesday when he crashed into the rightfield fence.

Physicians at the Kings Daughters Hsopital said x-rays disclosed a fractured skull.

Rockville High Crowns 3 Table Tennis Titlists

Snouffer beat Robert Carter, 25—23, 21—18, in the junior high boys' play.

In the doubles, Burke and Pesterman beat Waitsand Bob Slater, 21—19, 21—18, 22—20.

Cold and Snow Halts Indians and Giants

Cleveland, April 12 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians' scheduled first 1940 appearance here was called off late today. Club officials said tomorrow's exhibition game with the New York Giants at League Park could not be played because of snow and cold, but Sunday's tilt would go on, weather permitting. The Indians' game with the Giants today at Bluefield, W. Va., also was called off because of rain and snow.

Buddy Scott To Work Out In Public

Foe of Hassett on Arena Card Seeking Big Outdoor Match

With his eyes on an outdoor shot here this summer, Buddy Scott, Washington heavyweight, today goes through his final paces for Monday night's ten-round feature match with Irish Danny Hassett, Philadelphia fighter, at Turner's Arena.

Scott omitted his training routine yesterday, believing himself in form, and his handlers say he is stronger and hitting harder than ever before. The former George Washington University athlete completes his drills in public, starting at 12:30 today at Huron's gum, 511 Eleventh street northwest.

Meanwhile from Philadelphia came the report that Hassett is coming here determined to erase Scott as a local favorite. Herman Taylor and Pete Moran, who know plenty about fighting flesh, will watch when Hassett goes into action. With a draw with Lou Nova, and recent victories to his credit over George Brescia and Sonny Jim McVey, Hassett will be no underdog in the Monday match.

Matchmaker Gabe Menendez has rounded out his supporting card. It shows two eights and a six.

Carl (Red) Guggino, local lightweight with three straight wins here, meets Tommy Fontana, Brooklyn battler, in an eight-round semi-windup. A newcomer, Paul Cortlyn, of Texas, who yesterday was given a boost by Kenny Overlin and Ben Brown as the coming knockout king of the welterweight class, has been signed for an eight. Cortlyn meets another new face, Mike Destafano, of Philadelphia, who recently lost a split decision in Philadelphia to the Cocoa Kid. Cortlyn had Brown, LaSalle and Frizzie Zivic on the deck in matches with them.

Mader Substitutes For Lee Savold

St. Louis, April 12 (AP).—Eddie Mader, New York heavyweight, was selected today to substitute for Lee Savold as the opponent of Johnny Whiters, Detroit Negro, in the feature 10-round bout of a boxing show here Thursday night.

Savold, Des Moines heavyweight hope, broke his thumb in knocking out Eddie Boyle, of Cleveland, last night at Des Moines and had to cancel his scheduled appearance against Whiters. The Negro won a decision from Savold in a 10-round meeting here March 28.

Mader was chosen as Savold's replacement after an unsuccessful effort was made to obtain Clarence (Red) Burman, Jack Dempsey's heavyweight protege.

Women's Golf Matches Are Rained Out

Members Face a Busy Program Next Week; Schedule Is Same

The 9 o'clock downpour yesterday morning at Argyle and Chevy Chase golf clubs forced a postponement of the Women's District Golf Association first and second team matches, and also threw the linkswomen into a busy program next week.

Mrs. J. C. Dale, team captain, and Mrs. Robert A. Lacey, president of the association, postponed the matches until next Wednesday, April 17, with the same pairings and starting times to prevail. The first teams will play at Argyle and the second at Chevy Chase, as scheduled.

Thursday the Washington Golf and Country Club women golfers stage the annual Phyllis Keeler Miller Memorial Tournament, and on Friday the second round of the team matches is scheduled, the first teams at Woodmont and second at Washington.

Several of the players were already on the course yesterday, but the officials decided on the postponement before a majority left the tee.

Boston Bees Option Two Players to Farm

Boston, April 12 (AP).—The Boston Bees' squad was reduced to 31 players today when Outfielder Ralph Younker and Pitcher Wilber McElroy were released on option to the club's Hartford farm in the Eastern League. Those three players, however, will continue to work out with the Bees until the Hartford team returns North next week.

Vidmer Picks Nats To Finish 4th in A. L.

Yankees With Abundance of Stars Figure to Win as They Have in Past; Red Sox and Indians Should Finish Near Top

By Richards Vidmer.

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

The return of the Yankees and Dodgers to our midst—or should I say mist?—calls attention to the fact that the baseball season is practically upon us. It had been my intention sooner or later to get around to the annual spring madness of forecasting the finish of the race and suddenly I am struck by the realization that if this little matter isn't attended to now it will be too late.

Of course this practice of picking the winners and the order in which the other seven clubs will wind up in each of the major leagues is strictly silly. In fact it is foolish to predict in April anything that will be in October, especially in these turbulent times. Besides there is nothing to be gained. If you pick the obvious you are charged with being a conservative. If you make a wild guess on a long shot you are pointed out as an exhibitionist. Even if your long shot comes in no one calls you a super-expert; he just calls you lucky.

VIDMER

So perhaps the best thing to do is simply to state the situation as it appears to me, reminding what readers are left at this point that these things are merely a matter of opinion at best, and seldom are at best. It seems that the readers have a habit of saving these little predictions and tossing them back at you, with or without cause. For instance, only yesterday I received a clipping of a volumn written last April, which wound up with the following facetious phrases:

Brooklyn Not Included

"The experts have been saying that any team can win the National League pennant this year, but one look at the Dodgers cuts the possibilities to seven. Not Brooklyn!"

And Donald W. Clement, the column collector of Brooklyn, attaches a note in which he pleads: "Don't make the same blunder in writing your opening-day baseball column this year as you did last!"

You see how it is—what blunder? Saying that the Dodgers would not win the pennant? Well, they didn't, did they? But I suppose that when a fellow has saved up ammunition for a whole year and doesn't get a chance to hit anything with it, he just fires it into the air anyway.

But let's get back to the business at hand, and just so we won't shatter Mr. Clement's dreams right away, we will leave the National League for the moment and turn our undivided attention toward the American.

This seems a very easy task for a rainy day, as there doesn't have to be any speculation about who will win the pennant. The Yankees always have, and it looks as though they always will. They have virtually the same club as they had last year, and last year it was good enough to win by 17 games.

Youngsters Offset Veterans

Of course it may be pointed out that some of the Yankees are a year older, but as a matter of fact all of the Yankees, by some strange coincident, are a year older. And where a year might be a cause for concern in the cases of a few, like Red Ruffing, Bill Dickey, Frank Crosetti and Lefty Gomez, at the same time, just to keep the books balanced, a year should be an advantage to others, like Joe Gordon, Killer Keller, and several of the pitchers—Chandler, Sundra, Russo and Donald, just to name a few.

So it all evens up at the end of a year, as the poker player said with the firm conviction that he was going to win a fortune on New Year's Eve.

The Yankees made up what we will call Section 1 of the American League race. Section 2 seems at this point to consist of the Boston Red Sox and the Cleveland Indians. If anyone should beat the Yankees it will have to be one of these two clubs, with the Red Sox seeming to have slightly the better chance, although neither can be called a distinct threat to the supremacy of Joe McCarthy's mighty machine.

The Red Sox have a fine ball club, well balanced and packing plenty of punch. But the Yankees are even a finer club with definite better pitching and catching.

The Indians have a rather impressive pitching staff, headed by the brilliant young Bobby Feller who may win any given number of games this year. The Indians seem to have improved considerable over last season's entry with a rookie named Boundreau at shortstop as the chief improvement. But it is doubtful if the Indians have improved enough to make up the difference of more than 20 games by which they trailed the league leaders.

Breaks Will Tell

Section three consists of the Tigers, White Sox and Washington Senators, and putting them in their proper places offers the first difficulty we have encountered. They may finish fourth, fifth and sixth in any order, and perhaps, in the end, it will depend chiefly on the breaks they get in the way of injuries, the development of their youngsters and the unpredictable elements that every team bumps into in the course of a campaign.

All that seems certain about the Tigers, White Sox and Senators is that none of them are good enough to finish better than fourth, and none of them seems bad enough to finish any worse than sixth. Not at least, with the Athletics and the Browns still in the league, which, I believe, they are.

The Athletics and the Browns, of course, form section four of the American League parade, and their battle to keep out of the cellar may prove to be the most exciting struggle that the so-called race produces between next Tuesday and the end of September. The Browns at the moment are generally favored to finish last, possibly because Connie Mack has returned to health and to the bench for the Athletics.

Anyway, there is the American League as it appears at this distant date to the finish of the campaign. It is doubtful if there will be many changes made in the course of the season. Specifically, they should march through most of the summer and down to the end in the following order:

1, New York; 2, Boston; 3, Cleveland; 4, Washington; 5, Detroit; 6, Chicago; 7, Philadelphia; 8, St. Louis.

Richmond Dash Star 'Discovered' By Accident

Richmond, Va., April 12 (AP).—It was by accident that Coach Hank Noble discovered one of the most promising dash men John Marshall High School had produced in years.

He is Jimmy Dominick, who gave the appearance of being a slow starter in his first workouts and was listed as a 440-yard entry by Noble. Dominick proved a fair 440 man, finishing fourth in the recent Central District meet, and probably would have remained there if Noble had not clocked him inadverdently the other day for the 100.

Jimmy's first try at that distance in a meet against Hopewell this week saw him cover the distance in ten seconds flat, a tenth second under the district record.

Bladensburg High Golfers Defeat Blair

Score a 7-2 Victory Before Snow Starts; Others Postponed

Bladensburg High golfers went into second place in the Metropolitan sector of the Schoolboy Golf League, defeating Blair, 7-2, yesterday morning at Manor. The boys played before the snowstorm that canceled the other scheduled matches.

Redmiles, captain of the Prince Georges County team, defeated Buddy Clark 1 up in the feature of the match. It was Bladensburg's third victory against one defeat, while Blair's record is the opposite.

Redmiles (Blad.) defeated Clark, 1 up; Waters (Blad.) defeated Pence, 4 and 2. Best ball—Bladensburg, 2 up.

Bowie (Blad.) defeated Parsley, 2 up; Mulligan (Blad.) defeated Altemus, 5 and 4. Best ball—Bladensburg, 4 and 2.

McKimmie (Blair) defeated Sweeney, 4 and 3; Tailor (Blad.) defeated Grove, 6 and 5. Best ball—Blair, 2 and 1.

745 Takes 5th Place In ABC Pin Meet

Detroit, April 12 (AP).—Maxie Stein scattered the pins with a vengeance today in the American Bowling Congress tournament, rolling a sensational 745 in the doubles to tie for fifth in the all-events at 1,901.

Stein's big count and Carl Stoerkel's 520 gave the pair 1,265, good for a piece of prize money. Stein, holder of the ABC all-events record of 2,070, had a 278, 210, 257 doubles series. His 1,901 all-events tied him with Charles Need, of Columbus, Ohio.

Infielder Joe Gulledge, a Hartford player taken South with the Bees, was returned to that farm team.

Women Confer On Fellowships In Winchester

Winchester, Va., April 12.—One of the objectives of the American Association of University Women—an endowment making fellowships available for women who desire to continue postgraduate studies—was discussed here today at the opening session of the sixteenth annual conference of the Virginia division.

Mrs. W. S. Garrett, of Roanoke, pointed out that there are few such fellowships available for women and that the Virginia chapter along with the national organization is endeavoring to supply the need.

Mrs. Gillie A. Larew, president, of Lynchburg, presided at a luncheon this afternoon.

At 7 o'clock tonight, Miss Lola Moore, president of the Winchester branch, presided at a banquet at which Dr. Dorothy Stimson, dean of Goucher College, was the speaker.

Tomorrow morning there will be a business session, followed by an address by Dr. Meta Glass, president of Sweet Briar College and past national president of the American Association of University Women.

Contract Bridge

A young man at Williams, member of Sigma Phi, wishes he had had psychic powers to visualize the end-play he could have developed to win his contract of two hearts on today's hand.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1NT	Pass	2 ◇	2 ♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: A ♣.

He discovered the winning line of play, but unhappily after the hand was over.

He says, "I am inclosing a hand which occurred at an informal after-dinner game. Its main interest lies in the fact that I, South, thought I had missed game when dummy went down, to find myself the disillusioned possessor of only seven tricks.

"The bidding is slightly peculiar, but South must really be on the ball to make his two hearts. West led the club ace, switched to diamonds, which East won with the ace, returning a spade. South put up the king, which lost to West. East ruffed a club on the next lead and returned a spade, and here South's troubles began. I counted West for the king-jack-three of trumps, but I got all mixed up in the play and finally lost to the king-jack for down one.

"Double-dummy, the hand is fairly simple. North wins the fifth trick with the spade queen, trumps the spade jack in South's hand, cashes the club king and trumps the diamond king in dummy. Then the club jack is trumped, and the diamond eight trumped in dummy. This strips West of everything but hearts, and on the throw-in he can only win one heart trick.

"South loses the three aces, a club ruff and one heart for his two hearts."

ICC Approves Reorganization Of New Haven

Common, Preferred Equities Eliminated; Fixed Charges Cut

By the Associated Press

The Interstate Commerce Commission issued a plan of reorganization yesterday for the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad company which reduces capitalization from $464,833,806 to $365,000,000, and annual fixed charges and guarantees from $19,531,323 to $8,232,331.

The I. C. C. made no provision for the participation of holders of common and preferred stock in the reorganization, finding that their equity was of no value.

The plan calls for inclusion of the Providence, Warren & Bristol, the Hartford & Connecticut Western, and the Boston & Providence railroads in the reorganized New Haven system.

Old Colony Ignored

In view of the unfavorable earning position of the Old Colony Railroad, the I. C. C. made no provision for its reorganization at this time. The Old Colony had submitted a reorganization proposal calling for the transfer of its Western and cape group properties to the New Haven.

The plan provides a total fixed interest debt of $137,059,266 for the reorganized New Haven system. This would include $12,872,000 of equipment trusts, $22,422,000 of underlying bonds, $12,834,905 of collateral trust notes, and $88,930,361 of fixed interest 4 per cent bonds.

Capitalization Is Expanded

Additional capitalization would include $88,786,567 of 4½ per cent income bonds, $70,525,061 of 5 per cent preferred stock, and $68,629,160 of common stock.

Present equipment obligation of the New Haven would remain undisturbed, while the New York & New Haven Railroad company—Boston Terminal first mortgage bonds, and the Dutchess County Railroad first mortgage bonds would be paid off in cash.

The New York, Providence & Boston Railroad general mortgage bonds, Naugatuck Railroad first mortgage bonds, the Harlem River & Port Chester Railroad first mortgage bonds, and the Providence Terminal first mortgage bonds also would remain undisturbed.

The following treatment is provided for other holders of outstanding securities:

Housatonic Railroad bonds, 100 per cent in fixed interest bonds; New England Railroad bonds, 85 per cent in fixed interest bonds and 15 per cent in income bonds; Danbury & Norwalk bonds, 20 per cent in fixed interest bonds, 40 per cent in income bonds and 40 per cent in preferred stock; Boston & New York Air Line bonds, 50 per cent in income bonds and 50 per cent in preferred stock; New Haven & Northampton bonds, 50 per cent in fixed interest bonds, 25 per cent in income bonds, and 25 per cent in preferred stock; Central New England bonds, 100 per cent in fixed interest bonds; bonds secured by first and refunding mortgage, 20 per cent in fixed interest bonds, 40 per cent in income bonds, and 40 per cent in preferred stock; 15-year secured gold bonds, 45.35 per cent in fixed interest bonds and 54.65 per cent in income secured notes held by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Railroad Credit Corporation would be exchanged for new collateral trust notes.

The New Haven has been in reorganization proceedings under section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act since October 23, 1935.

Traders Proceed With Caution, Watching Scandinavian War Developments in Light Day as Air Issues Clamber to New Highs

New York, April 12.—The stock market continued to proceed with caution today as the street tried to appraise the effects on business of the quickly shifting events abroad.

The result was a day of relatively light trading—only 826,270 shares changing hands—and an irregularly lower price movement similar to that of the previous day. The composite average closed off 0.27 point with all the major groups somewhat lower.

Exceptions included a number of the air transportation issues and the shares of shipbuilding companies, the latter on the prospect of large naval orders. Twenty-four highs for the year were scored.

Steel Cut a Feature

Featuring domestic trade news was the cut of $4 a ton in the price of hot and cold rolled sheets. Automobile manufacturers will be the chief beneficiaries of the new price schedule.

Steel stocks were lower, but trading was not large. Fractional losses were sustained by United States Steel, National and Republic.

American Air Sets High

The best performance was turned in by air transport stocks, all five closing with plus signs. Featuring was American Air Lines, which closed up nearly 4 points and made a new high for the year. Eastern Air Lines added 1⅛ and T. W. A. 1⅜.

Action of the Senate Appropriations Committee in approving a record peacetime Navy bill, which had already been approved by the House, spurred speculative activity in the shipbuilding shares. International Mercantile Marine was active and edged up an eighth and Electric Boat was up about a point.

Speculation in the paper and pulp stocks, which got under way when the Germans first moved into Scandinavia, continued at a brisk pace but prices reflected profit taking. Willys Overland was the day's most active stock, advancing a good fraction to a new high. Most of the motors were little changed.

Noteworthy in the rail list was heavy trading in New Haven issues, which went to new lows and approached the vanishing point on announcement of the reorganization plan, which makes no provision for the common and preferred. Among the oils, Standard of New Jersey went to a new low.

Scandinavian Bonds Drop

Fresh unsettlement developed today in various foreign dollar bonds of countries in the circle around Germany. Scandinavians plunged, as did Belgian issues, while the rest of the foreign section was easy. United States Treasury and best grade corporate bonds held around previous levels. Speculative issues of the domestic group drifted lower. Turnover was about $6,000,000.

Belgian bonds fell 5 to 7 points and reached lowest levels of the year. Norwegian and Danish bonds fell 1 to 6 points. Italian 7s declined abruptly. Even Japanese issues were lower. German bonds were dull and uncertain, while Canadian and Australian issues hardly moved. Latin Americans were irregular.

Speculative corporation issues of the domestic section took a course toward moderately lower levels.

Tests Show Diesels Can Be Put in Use For Freight Trains

Omaha, April 12 (AP).—R. K. Evans, vice president of General Motors in charge of Diesel developments, asserted today tests of a new streamlined freight locomotive have shown "complete Dieselization of entire railroad systems" to be practicable.

He said his statement was the first public announcement of test results which began five months ago. He foresaw a "new and perhaps more important field of service" for application of Diesel power as a result of the freight showing.

United Gas Fights Holding Company Act

The United Gas Improvement Co., of Philadelphia, replying to integration proceedings by the Securities Commission, declared yesterday that its own "long-standing policy" of closely linked utility operations removed it from the scope of the 1935 Holding Company Act.

"A proper and complete examination," the company said, would show that the system was operating wholly within the law.

New Offerings Of $75,626,132 Keep up Trend

By the Associated Press

New York, April 12.—Public offerings of new securities continued on schedule this week despite the sudden shock of Germany's latest expansion.

Poor's Publishing Co. reported that new issues during the week ended yesterday totaled $75,626,132, the largest volume in six weeks.

Only 11 per cent of the total represented a demand for new money, but analysts found encouragement in the large volume of industrial bond offerings and stock financing.

Investment banking circles noted with satisfaction that the new issue market was relatively insensitive to the latest European crisis, especially since the invasion of Poland in September had paralyzed financing activities for more than two months.

Offerings last week were $49,315,540 and $51,142,309 a year ago.

New Fuel to Cut Car Engine Size, Scientist Says

Columbus, Ohio, April 12 (AP).—An era of big automobiles propelled by engines the size of a suitcase, thanks to the development of super-power motor fuels, was envisioned here today.

Dr. Gustav Egloff, research expert on motor fuels, told the American Petroleum Institute that laboratories had produced a motor fuel which would enable automobile manufacturers to cut the size of engines in half.

Dr. Egloff described triptan, a fuel of 125 octane rating and possessing twice the combustive power of regular grade gasoline of 75 octane. The laboratory cost has been reduced from $3,600 a gallon to $50 and research workers hope eventually to bring it down near the present popular price levels of gasoline, he added.

Further Advance In Car Production Held Unlikely

Detroit, April 12 (AP).—Reporting a slight rise in production of automobile plants to an estimated 102,940 cars and trucks, Ward's Automotive Reports said today no further gains appeared in prospect but the level of operations should cotinue fairly steady through the month.

The total output compared with 101,655 last week and 88,050 this week a year ago.

Cold In South Boosts Cotton 1 to 13 Points

By the Associated Press

New York, April 12.—Forecasts of freezing temperatures in important sections of the cotton belt didn't look so good for crop prospects today and futures prices were bid up 1 to 13 points. New crop months far outdistanced old.

Forecast of continued cold weather over the weekend furthered buying and transferring to new crop deliveries.

The market was steadied by upturns in overseas centers at the outset and when trade demand expanded, the list rapidly showed ahead. Textile markets slowed down a bit after several days of vigorous turnover.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures abruptly declined late today. The market closed 6 to 7 points lower after having scored similar gains earlier. Prices tumbled, traders said, after issuance of a surprisingly large March oil consumption figure failed to attract broader speculative interest. Sales totaled 81 lots: May, 6.81 bid; July, 6.90; September, 6.95; October, 6.95. Crude oil held steady at 5¾ cents a pound bid in the Southeast and Valley. Texas reported modest business at 5¾.

The Census Bureau reported yesterday that cottonseed crushed in the eight-month period August 1 to March 31 totaled 3,777,306 tons, compared with 3,840,523 tons in the corresponding period a year ago.

Cottonseed on hand at mills March 31 totaled 316,355 tons, compared with 516,740 tons a year ago. Cottonseed products manufactured in the eight-month period and on hand March 31 were reported as follows:

Crude oil, 1,192,906,740 pounds, compared with 1,196,700,924 pounds in the corresponding period a year ago, and on hand, 186,124,479 pounds. Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press

London, April 12.—Stock market prices drifted lower today, but the revisions were due more to small support than concerted selling. The approaching weekend, plus fast-moving war news, kept commitments down. Kaffirs bucked the main trend with modest gains. Losses among industrial leaders were confined mostly to a few pence. Government bond declines ranged to ¼ point. Buyers nibbled at a handful of coppers, but most commodity stocks tended downward.

Paris—Prices drooped in the bourse today as traders fretted under the threat of expansion of the war. Selling was not especially large, but declines in domestic stocks averaged around 3 per cent. Scandinavian issues dropped 10 per cent of more. Rentes finished 20 to 70 centimes off.

Amsterdam—Price curves were downward in the bourse today. A short-lived recovery developed in domestic stocks, but at the finish losers ranged to 5 points. American issues fluctuated uneasily over a narrow range.

Liverpool—Cotton futures advanced 5 to 8 points today.

London Doubts Nazi Economic Gains In North

Hitler Risks Defense On British Doorstep For Vital Iron Ore

New York, April 12.—While warships and airplanes were determining whether Hitler had won another political victory in his lightning occupation of Denmark and Norway, his economic gains in any case were held questionable in London, according to a cable dispatch from John F. Chapman, foreign editor of Business Week, who is now in England.

"Hitler has undertaken to defend a long, new frontier that is virtually at Britain's doorstep," said Chapman. "The fact that he has assumed the risks involved is taken as proof that the Allies have forced Germany to come out from behind her defenses to protect one of the two raw materials that she absolutely must have from abroad without interruption.

Must Have Iron

"First is iron ore from Sweden (and to a lesser degree from Norway); these are the last important supplies of foreign iron available to Germany and are so vital that, even in a stalemate war, she could not afford to do without them. The second essential war material that Germany must have from abroad is oil. Berlin's main sources of petroleum products, following the tightening of the blockade, are now Rumania and Russia.

"It is acknowledged in official circles here that Allied strategy must be aimed at forcing Germany to draw on her limited stocks of food and military materials before she gets a chance to augment them in any important way from Russia and the southeast. The German trade deal with the Soviets is working better than either Berlin or Moscow expected."

Economic Gains Slight

Chapman said that while the seizure of Denmark gives the Reich decided military advantages, the economic gains are temporary. Beyond the initial economic fat which the Nazis obtain from Denmark, the country probably will prove a liability.

Denmark, he explained, is only a "food factory." While one of the world's great suppliers of butter, bacon and eggs, it is not a self-contained agricultural state. Now its required supplies of foreign fodder are presumably cut off. And so are many of the imported raw materials on which its industries are almost wholly dependent.

Norway has greater potential resources for the long pull. Her iron, chrome, and molybdenum deposits would be welcome additions to the Reich's meager supplies.

Lehigh Portland Cement Co. reported net profit for the 12 months ended March 31 of $2,156,423, equal to $2.58 a share on common stock. This compared with $1,043,234, or $1.08 a common share, in the preceding 12-month period.

Sheaffer Pen Co.

The Sheaffer Pen Co., of Fort Madison, Iowa, reported to stockholders net profits for the year ended February 29, 1940, totaled $744,295, equal to $4.66 a share of common stock. This compared with $691,112, or $4.30 a share in 1939.

Speakers Stress Trust, Insurance Estate Connections

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Responsibility of life underwriting and fiduciary institutions in planning and coordination of proceeds from life insurance contracts and estates of clients was stressed last night at a meeting of Washington Life Insurance Trust Council at Willard Hotel.

Attended by more than 160 life insurance, bank and trust officials, the assembly was addressed by Merle E. Selecman, deputy manager, American Bankers Association, and Roger B. Hull, managing director and general counsel, National Life Underwriters Association.

Discussion of functions and purpose of the trust counsel movement revealed that life insurance companies and trust institutions as respective creators and conservators of estates, exercise functions which are essentially related; that a sizable part of the large volume of life insurance in force in Washington is involved in estate plans.

Cooperation Is Emphasized

In formulating plans for administration and management of these estates to minimize inheritance tax liability and avoid undue shrinkage in value, the paramount importance of close cooperation between life insurance representatives, trust officials and their clients was emphasized. This is particularly applicable to the District of Columbia where per capita life insurance in force is nearly twice as great as in country as a whole.

Aubrey O. Dooley, assistant trust officer, Hamilton National Bank, and president of the council, presided and there were talks by Ord Preston, president of Union Trust Co., and District of Columbia Association, as well as Joseph A. Marr, Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co., president of District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association. Guests included officers and members of the Baltimore Life Insurance Trust Council.

Wheat Prices Drift In Calm Day's Trading

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 12.—The wheat market, which usually is extremely sensitive to war developments, continued today to take European news calmly as prices drifted through a fractional range above and below previous closing levels.

Traders who spent much time scanning war bulletins exercised unusual caution in the futures pit in view of conflicting and confusing reports. Spreading warfare and cold weather over the domestic grain belt inspired some buying that lifted prices as much as ¾ cent at one stage but this was offset by profit taking.

Wheat closed near the day's lows, or unchanged to ⅜ lower compared with yesterday's finish, May $1.07¼-½, July $1.06¼-⅜. Corn was ⅛-⅝ off, May 59¼-¼, July 60⅜-½; oats, ¼ lower to ½ higher; soy beans, 1½ lower to ¼ higher; rye, ⅛-⅜ down and lard, 5 higher.

Chrysler Sales Set a Record

Detroit, April 12 (AP).—K. T. Keller, president of Chrysler Corporation, reported today first quarter 1940 sales, covering domestic and export shipments from plants in the United States and Canada, were the highest for any first quarter in the corporation's history.

Iron and Steel Scrap Consumption Drops

Domestic consumption of iron and steel scrap in March at 2,932,000 gross tons showed only a fractional decline from the 3,054,000 tons of February, but represented a substantial increase over the 2,634,000 tons melted in March, 1939, according to the Institute of Scrap Iron & Steel Inc., New York.

In the first quarter, domestic consumption of scrap totaled 9,761,000 tons, compared with 7,442,000 tons in 1939. Foreign trade in scrap is rapidly falling behind 1939.

Canadian Discount Is Held Incompatible

The present discount or the Canadian dollar in the United States is patently not compatible with the strength of the current Canadian monetary position, but rather would seem to be due to the typical apprehensive attitude which always arises toward a debtor nation in a period of shock or crisis. This opinion is expressed in a study entitled "The Canadian Dollar and Capital Movements," written by Courtland Elliott, economist of A. E. Ames & Co., Inc., New York, and published by that firm yesterday.

SEC Urges Rejection Of Flour Mill Plan

The Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday filed an advisory report on the reorganization of Flour Mills of America, Inc., concluding that the plan filed by the trustee, together with the amendments "is neither fair nor feasible," and recommended its disapproval.

"It is further the conclusion of the commission," the report said, "that the plan filed by the Vincent noteholders' protective committee is both fair and feasible, and the commission recommends its approval."

Carnegie Cuts Rolled Steel $4 Per Ton

Jones-Laughlin, Otis Other Competitors Meet New Prices

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, April 12.—Renewal of the steel industry's "price war" in a spirited struggle for the rolled steel trade was seen in the disclosure today that major producers had trimmed their second-quarter prices $4 a ton on hot and cold rolled sheets.

Carnegie-Illinois Corporation, the Nation's biggest producer, was the first to make the announcement. Jones & Laughlin, Inland, Republic and Otis Steel quickly matched the United States Steel subsidiary's prices and others were expected to fall in line.

Price War Is Recalled

The price cut, which the trade heard was initiated by an Eastern and a Midwestern producer, recalled the price war that brought prices down as much as $8 to $11 a ton last year before the war trade revived the market. Informed quarters viewed the reductions as bids for the business of the automobile industry, biggest buyer of sheets.

Carnegie-Illinois simply said the market had weakened and that it was cutting prices immediately to meet a competitive situation. New prices at Pittsburgh were $38 per ton on hot rolled sheets and $37 per ton on cold rolled sheets.

Other Products Unaffected

Some regarded the price war as the direct outgrowth of the construction of big, highly mechanized mills and the effort to keep the mills busy during a period characterized by a steady drop in operations. Such mills make possible greater production at lower costs.

Prices of other products were not affected by today's announcements and trade sources expressed belief the reductions would not spread because of foreign and domestic demands. Export orders now are reported to be about 15 per cent of total shipments.

Department Store Sales Drop 5 Pct.

The Federal Reserve Board estimated yesterday that department store sales in the week ended April 6 were 5 per cent below the corresponding week last year. Sales for the four weeks ended April 6 were 5 per cent below the corresponding week last year.

Offices Moved

Chicago, April 12 (AP).—Headquarters of the board of directors of the Chicago and North Western Railway have been moved from New York to Chicago, R. L. Williams, chief executive officer, announced today.

Brazil Frees Part of Funds Of U. S. Firms

Rio de Janeiro, April 12 (AP).—Twenty-three United States companies doing business in Brazil received today from the Banco do Brasil a payment of one-third the profits and dividends which have accrued to them in the last 28 months.

The payment, in dollars, can be transmitted to the United States, thus freeing much of the blocked funds which have accumulated here since December, 1937, when the government suspended all payments on foreign debts and took control of foreign exchange.

The remaining two-thirds of blocked funds will be released within 60 days.

Informed sources said "special arrangements" had been made with Emprezas Electricas—the electric utility company operating in several Brazilian cities outside the capital: This is an affiliate of Electric Bond & Share Co.

Anthracite Shipments

Shipments of anthracite for March, as reported to the Anthracite Institute, amounted to 3,207,973 net tons, an increase of 45,371 tons over February, and 23,956 over March, 1939.

D. C. Employe Salary Lien Test Started

Debt Attachment Exemption of 12,000 Workers Assailed

The exemption from attachment for debt of salaries paid by the District government was assailed by Attorney Richard B. Talley in a test case in the Municipal Court yesterday.

The decision is expected to have far-reaching effects on the credit rating and business standing of the District's 12,000 employes.

The law has been assumed to be that private creditors cannot attach the pay of District employes any more than they can the pay of persons directly employed by the Federal Government. However, the Supreme Court recently decided that no such immunity is enjoyed by employes of such corporate Government agencies as the Federal Housing Administration.

12,000 May Be Affected

Tally contends that this ruling brings District workers within reach of the bill collector who goes to court.

The District government, Tally argues, is a corporation vested with the courts and thus is just as liable to the power to sue and be sued in the courts and thus is just as liable to be served with attachments by creditors of its employes as any private company.

Defendant in the test case is James A. Sullivan, 1349 Randolph street northwest, against whom the Phillip P. Peyser Realty Co. obtained a judgment for back rent on a house at 613 Rock Creek Church road northwest. Talley filed an attachment against Sullivan's pay.

The attachment directs the District government to tell the Municipal Court what money it owes Sullivan and whether it holds any property that belongs to him. Should the District fail to answer, Talley might ask that the District be ordered to pay the $157.

President Frees Witness Against Benny, Mrs. Lauer

The Justice Department announced yesterday that President Roosevelt had commuted the sentence of Albert Chaperau, convicted of smuggling, to the time he already has served in the Federal House of Detention in New York City.

Chaperau testified for the Government in the cases of George Burns and Jack Benny, radio entertainers; Mrs. Edgar Lauer, wife of a former New York State Supreme Court justice, and others indicted for customs laws violations in connection with the entry of jewelry into the United States from Europe.

Benny paid a $10,000 fine; Burns, $8,000, and Mrs. Lauer served a three-month jail term.

Creditors to Sue Mrs. William Fox

Camden, N. J., April 12 (AP).—Creditors of the one-time multimillionaire motion picture magnate, William Fox, said in Federal Court today they would sue to recover $9,000,000 they contend is due them from a company headed by Mrs. Eva Fox, his wife.

Attorneys for the Chicago Trust Co. and the Capitol Co., of Chicago, made the statement to Judge Avis who ruled three weeks ago that they might have 30 days to approve or reject a compromise offer of $500,000. The creditors contend Fox turned over his personal assets to the All-Continent Co., headed by his wife, in 1931, before starting bankruptcy proceedings.

RATTI, GINO A. In sad and loving memory of our dear husband and father who passed away three years ago today, April 13, 1937.
Gone is the face we love so dear,
Silent is the voice we love to hear,
Too far away for sight and speech.
But not too far for thought to reach,
Sweet to remember your Gino, dear,
And soft absence is just as near.
Lovingly LINA AND CHILDREN.

Three of the gentlemen most vitally interested in the success of the Wirth Brothers' Circus for the benefit of the Children's Hospital were over to WJSV for a broadcast last evening and your agent is currently saving pennies so he can buy enough pink lemonade to wash down the peanuts next week at Riverside Stadium.

The broadcasters were Rear Admiral C. Russell Train, retired; Phil Wirth, once one of the world's greatest riders and now an entrepreneur, and Jerome Harrington, an adjective assassin that puts any other press agent I ever heard to shame.

Admiral Train is in charge of the drive to raise funds to help the Children's Hospital, Wirth is representing his circus, and Harrington is doing the press work. In order named, the admiral said it was a worthy cause, Wirth said it was a crack show, composed of some of the circus' grandest performers, including the immortal Poodles Hanneford, and Harriman, being the press agent, said exactly what you would expect him to say.

All three were pretty vehement on one subject. They want it well understood that this circus is no sop for contributions to a worthy cause. It is an honest, big league circus worth every nickel of the admission price, whether the money went to professional promoters or to a worthy charity.

The Wirth people are extremely anxious to play return engagements in Washington so they have spared no expense in rounding up acts, clowns, freaks, animals, musicians and just about everything that goes to make up a good circus.

Phil Wirth, who has played in every corner of the globe was particularly enthusiastic about the Riverside Stadium, where the circus will play matinee and evening performances for a full week beginning Monday.

LEAP YEAR LADY by ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY

SHAMROCK O'TOOLE—Known to her friends as Smoky, and pride of the neighborhood.
CLANCY O'TOOLE—Retired firefighter and father of Smoky.
MRS. HETRICK—Mother of Karl, to whom Smoky is engaged.
KARL HETRICK—Young fireman and protege of Clancy, who has just inherited a small fortune from an uncle.
DAGNE OLSEN—Another girl of the neighborhood, with whom Karl is secretly in love.

While Smoky, her father, Clancy, and Mrs. Hetrick are making preparations for Smoky's marriage to Karl Hetrick, word comes to Smoky from Dagne Olsen that she and Karl are being hurriedly married. Smoky is broken-hearted, but tries to hide her grief. Finally she tells Clancy what has happened.

Chapter 5

At dusk, Smoky put on her coat and pinched and rouged her cheeks and splashed lipstick in a wide swath across her drooping little mouth and went down to the corner to do her marketing. She smiled and greeted old friends and neighbors with her head up and prayed that no one would ask her when Karl was coming home. Fortunately, no one did.

She and Clancy made a gallant effort to eat the delicious vegetable soup she had prepared with toast and pears, and afterward in the living room Clancy turned on the radio and took out his table and began to play solitaire as if nothing had happened.

But Smoky could not stand the jazz band that blared from the instrument, reminding her of the times she and Karl had danced at Rocky Point in the summer, Zimmer's Beer Garden and Neposito's, when they had spaghetti and dropped nickels into the recording machine.

CLANCY saw her small hands tremble over the theatrical magazine she was pretending to read and he pushed the table away and said gently: "We'd best be talkin' a few things out, darlin', if you'd like to. I've been thinkin'."

"So have I, Pop." Smoky went over and sat down on the floor and laid her head against the couch where her father could play with her hair.

He had always loved the feel of the silken red strands in his strong fingers and never in her life had Shamrock suffered anything Clancy couldn't cure with the gentle stroking of his great hands on her tired head.

"We're both agreed on one thing," the fireman began glibly. "That you're a lucky girl this business happened now! Because you can take your old father's word for it, the man is a born chiseler, and he would have broken your heart after you had a family to take care of, maybe."

Smoky nodded her head in agreement and Clancy went on:

"The most useless pastime anybody ever indulged theirselves in, darlin', is carryin' a torch for some one who isn't worth it. Mopin' around and bein' a martyr over somethin' that's past and gone!"

Smoky nodded again.

"Of course," Clancy sighed, "I'm mighty ashamed that it's me that got Karl in the Fire Department. That's the worst part of the whole thing. I'm tellin' you right now, he'll turn out to be a damn kink chaser."

That was about the worst thing one fireman could say about another. Smoky looked up, surprised: "Do you really think so, Pop?"

I'm sure of it!" Clancy nodded grimly. "But that's neither here nor any other place, me darlin'. We're not worryin' about him or that woman he's bringin' home as his wife. Let them live their own life and you just act like they never existed. What you got to do for a while is keep busy. And a little change would do you good, too. Maybe you'd like to go to college?"

Smoky's Plans

"Oh, no!" Shamrock protested. "Thanks, darlin', but I wouldn't be spending your money on anything so foolish. I'm almost 20."

"Then," Clancy went on stroking her head, "what's on your mind, hon? You said you'd been thinkin'."

"I'm going on the stage,' said Smoky quietly.

"Well, now,' the father said enthusiastically, "that's an idea! Sure I always did feel sorry you didn't do something about your dancin'. But your heart was set on makin' a kitchen wench out of yourself."

"I was a sap," Smoky sighed. "Oh, wasn't I a fool! Not getting a job dancing because Karl didn't like the idea of my being a chorus girl! That's a laugh!"

Clancy did not like the bitterness in her voice and he said soothingly: "Water over the dam, kid. Forget it! You're only a baby, and twice as beautiful as you was at 16. Filled out and more womanly. And you've got more brains. Now you'll know how to take care of yourself."

Smoky laughed unpleasantly. "You bet I'll know how to take care of myself! No man will ever make a fool of me again. You just watch me!"

Clancy hid the fear in his voice and said lightly: "Sure, I know you could stand the whole male population up and shoot 'em full of holes, but go easy, darlin'! Remember your poor old father's a man, too."

"I won't drown you, Pop." Smoky looked up to smile wanly. "Because you're different."

"Oh, am I?" Clancy grinned. "I've had me moments."

A New Fur Coat

"Well," Shamrock said a little later, sitting on the couch beside her father with a theatrical magazine on her lap. "I've got plenty new clothes to start out lookin' for a job in."

"And anything else you'd be wantin' you know who the banker is, baby," Clancy lit his pipe, glad the worst of their heart-to-heart talk was over. "Tomorrow you go out and buy yourself a fur coat."

Smoky's eyes grew wide. "You don't mean it, Pop! You can't afford it."

"Oh, can't I?" Clancy took a puff. "I took a little flyer in the stock market last week and made $300. I was savin' it for a weddin' present for you. You'll be gettin' the coat!"

Clancy was sorry he had said wedding present, but it didn't seem to bother Smoky. She smothered him with kisses, and tears of gratitude stood in her eyes.

How like her mother, Clancy sighed! Down in the depths one minute and hitting the stars the next! But he knew her excited joy was only a temporary thing and that a great long while would pass before his child would find another happiness to take the place of Karl.

As much as he would miss her, Clancy hoped she would get into a show that would take her away from New York where she wouldn't suffer the agony of living next door to Karl and his wife. It wouldn't be easy to hold her chin up on the street where she was born and raised, with curious eyes and wagging tongues surrounding her.

Her Father Worried

Clancy, knowing Smoky's great bitterness, and that back in her head was the idea that some way, any way, she must show Karl and Dagne and the world that a little thing like being jilted don't matter to her, grew increasingly worried.

Suppose her great tragedy changed her and in her desire to get even she went out and made a mistake she could never erase?

The next morning before Smoky went over to New York to buy her fur coat Clancy reminded her: "Remember, darlin,' some day this will all hand you a laugh. You'll be glad it happened when you're a famous actress. Things always turn out for the best."

"Old stuff!" Smoky kissed him, and in her eyes was a recklessness that made her father wince.

"Smoky," he warned her from his wheel chair, turning his head and looking out the window, "you'd best be gettin' ahold of that damn O'Toole pride now. It'll be gettin' you in trouble some of these days."

Smith Presses His Own Bill On Wagner Act

Asks Norton Measure Be Brought to Floor Open to Amendments

While William Green and John L. Lewis locked horns over merits of the Norton bill amending the Wagner Act, the way was being paved yesterday for possible House consideration of the much more drastic amendments proposed by the Smith committee.

Representative Smith, of Virginia, chairman of the special committee investigating the Labor Board, yesterday introduced a resolution to bring the Norton bill on to the floor of the House under an "open rule" which would permit it to be amended in any respect or to be replaced by his own bill.

Declaring that he was "tired of playing around," Representative Smith indicated that he would press forward his resolution next week unless Chairman Norton of the Labor Committee takes immediate steps to bring the proposed Wagner Act amendment to the House floor. Mrs. Norton has been attempting to bring out her bill under conditions that would permit no amendments.

Cox Backs Move

Another resolution to bring the Smith bill up for House consideration had already been introduced by Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, one of Smith's most active supporters.

Meanwhile, President Green, of the A. F. L., yesterday wrote all members of the House that the Norton amendments are "reasonable, highly necessary, and if adopted will promote a better and more satisfactory administration of the National Labor Relations Act."

The Norton bill includes the key "A. F. L. amendment," protecting craft unions.

Held "Best Means"

President H. W. Brown, of the International Association of Machinists, A. F. L. affiliate, similarly urged passage of the Norton bill, declaring that the craft union amendment "is the best means of preserving the National Labor Relations Act as a vital force for industrial peace."

At the same time, Brown denounced the Smith bill "categorically and without reservation" as "vicious and destructive of the purposes of this law."

And C. I. O. leaders were congregating in Washington to lobby against both Norton and Smith bills in response to a letter from their chieftain, John L. Lewis, urging them to "mobilize labor's full strength" against the proposed amendments.

Songs That Ease Finns' Sorrow To Be Sung at Folk Festival

Miss Elsa Perala, of Mountain Iron, Minn., with the kantele, or harp, made in Finland by her father. The instrument is one of the few to be found in this country. The kantele's many strings require frequent tuning. Inset—Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Ruohoniemi, of Floodwood, Minn., 60 per cent of whose population is of Finnish descent. Like their cousins in Finland, these Minnesotans take to skis in winter. The couple will present Finland's songs and dances at the National Folk Festival here April 25-27

"Song will help sorrow," runs an old Finnish proverb. The type of song Finland sings in this hour of her greatest sorrow will be heard at the National Folk Festival here, April 25, 26 and 27.

Sons and daughters of Finland will come here from Minnesota, bringing with them the ancient kantele, or Finnish harp, to share their heritage of song and dance with their fellow Americans.

No other country can boast a folklore so filled with pride in fatherland, love of liberty and devotion to the beauty of the homeland. And few countries have succeeded so completely in preserving their folk heritage. In the words of the great Finnish epic Kalevala, still chanted by the Minnesota Finns:

Let us clasp our hands together,
Let us interlock our fingers;
Let us sing a cheerful measure,
Let us use our best endeavors,
While our dear ones hearken to us,
And our loved ones are instructed,
While the young ones stand around us
Of the rising generation.

According to S. B. Ruohoniemi, of Floodwood, Minn., who with his Finnish-born wife, will come to the festival at his own expense, the dance-songs came into being during the long winter evenings in central and northern Finland.

The common plan for country estates consisted of a large building with spacious rooms, surrounded by small cabins used as servant quarters. In the evening the young people from the cabins gathered in the main building and whiled away the hours with dancing. For lack of other accompaniment, they sang as they danced.

Miss Marjorie Edgar, of St. Croix, Minn., will bring another group of singers and dancers.

In Miss Edgar's party will be Miss Elsa Perala, of Mountain Iron, who will sing to the accompaniment of the kantele which her father made in Finland before migrating to Minnesota 35 years ago.

Tickets for the seventh annual National Folk Festival are available at The Post, Pennsylvania avenue and E street northwest. Matinee tickets for the three performances, April 25, 26 and 27, are priced at 50 cents, 75 cents and $1; tickets for the evening show range from 50 cents to $1.50.

House Decides To Continue Planning Unit

Reverses Stand After Urgent Plea From Roosevelt

By the Associated Press

The House reversed itself yesterday and voted funds to finance the National Resources Planning Board for another year after President Roosevelt said in a letter that he must "earnestly plead" for the agency's continuation.

By a roll-call vote of 184 to 129, the House accepted a Senate amendment restoring $710,000 for the planning board to the $1,120,243,328 independent offices approbiation bill, despite bitter Republican denunciation of the unit as "wasteful" and "vicious." Frederic A. Delano, uncle of the President, is chairman of the board.

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, a leading economy advocate, urged approval of the appropriation for the planning board, reading a letter in which President Roosevelt said, "I really believe that the appropriation of this sum will actually save many times the amount in preventing duplication of work or unplanned budget recommendations."

Rayburn Recalls Origin

Although the Senate already had approved the bill, it must go back to that body for approval of two minor House amendments, which do not affect its total.

Acting Speaker Rayburn (Democrat), of Texas, reminded Republican members that the board first was created to "help President Hoover," declared "we did not treat your Presidents like you treat Democratic Presidents."

Representative Mott (Republican), of Oregon, declared the planning board was "outstanding" in the category of Government agencies that are "harmful and even vicious."

Ship Mortgages Questioned

The bill's total as finally approved, including funds for independent Government agencies such as the Interstate Commerce Commission, Veterans' Bureau and the Federal Housing Administration, was $74,460,945 below President Roosevelt's budget estimates and about $39,000,000 less than the Senate originally recommended.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, said there was a "smelly situation" in the Maritime Commission's $11,500,000 mortgage on 14 ships of the American Presidents Steamship Co., formerly the Dollar Line. The Illinoisan said one of the ships was 9 years old and the others between 19 and 20 years old.

'It's Wonderful!' D. A. R. Girl Pilgrim Says of Washington

But Luray, Colo., Must Be Heaven, For That's the Place Minnie Bell Boyd 'Really Loves'—You See, It's Her Home

Rain and snow didn't spoil Washington yesterday for Minnie Bell Boyd, Colorado's D. A. R. Good Citizenship Pilgrim, as she arrived at the end of her first railroad journey.

She had stopped for a few days in Denver as the guest of Mrs. Earl H. Latcham, Good Citizenship chairman for her State, and there visited parks, art galleries, museums and theaters, and shopped in the city stores.

"It's wonderful to be in Washington, and I certainly liked Denver, too—but Luray is the place I really love," said Minnie Bell.

She lives on a 120-acre ranch 3½ miles from Luray, a town of 700 inhabitants. Every day she and her younger sister and two brothers ride to school in the school bus. She is taking, among other subjects for her senior year, journalism and English literature, looking toward her ambition to be a newspaper woman some day—preferably a foreign correspondent.

Dramatics is another major interest and she gave up a part in a play to be presented April 20 by the Christian Endeavor in order to come here as the guest of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Elevators give her an "odd feeling." But she likes elevators and she was thrilled to see the inside of a newspaper office. She is on the staff of the school paper but they do things a little differently on that than on a big daily, she decided.

Minnie Bell wore a cadet blue dress trimmed with dull silver buttons, a smart little blue straw hat to match and a tweed coat, with a transparent raincape over-all. Her dress matched the grey-blue of her steady eyes, shaded by long lashes, and her cheeks were bright with color that came from Colorado sunshine—riding the range on her pony—and not out of a compact.

Someday maybe Minnie Bell will be one of the newspaper girls in Washington. If she should be, don't be surprised if she says again—"but Luray is the place I really love."

'Play the Game' In Labor Disputes, Steelman Urges

American labor and American management were called upon yesterday by John R. Steelman, director of the United States Conciliation Service, to "play the game" and thus settle their labor differences.

"Do not expect too much of government," Steelman told delegates to the twenty-first convention of the International Union of Operation Engineers, meeting at the Raleigh Hotel. "Pass whatever laws you will—they merely set up rules for the game, and the game itself remains to be played." Economic democracy, he declared, cannot be legislated.

Senate Approves Reapportionment

The Senate approved and sent to the White House yesterday a bill providing for reapportionment of the 435 House seats on the basis of the 1940 census.

The measure was passed by the House Thursday after a provision to exclude aliens in determining the new apportionment was eliminated. The Senate previously had passed similar legislation. Today it approved minor House amendments without dissent.

The legislation provides for an automatic reapportionment on the basis of the 1940 population.

Missionary Blames Different Sects For India's Unrest

Miss Lillian Picken, noted missionary to India, attributed unrest and disorders in that land to differences in religious beliefs between the Mohammedans and Hindus, the strongest of the nine principal sects.

Eighty-million Mohammedans worship one God—Allah—and abhor idolatry, while the Hindus, with 330,000,000 separate gods, worship the sacred cow, she said.

Miss Pickens spoke at the opening of a week-end interdenominational lecture series in the First Congregational Church.

As a feature of the dinner which opened the meeting, children of the junior choir of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, who have been studying Indian customs, sang in that language. They, as well as the girls who served as ushers, were garbed in saris. The boys wore turbans. The series is sponsored by the executive committee of Congregational Women of the Washington area. Mr. Alexander Hops On Chance To Set Free His Hopping Guests

By the Associated Press

Pearl River, La., April 12.—Three hundred and seventy-four cottontail rabbits bobbed merrily into a chilly swamp today to end another chapter in the woes of Station Agent R. H. Alexander.

Scores of empty crates, however, only reminded Alexander that possibly 400 more bunnies will be in tomorrow or within the next few days.

To Alexander, there just isn't any end to the world's rabbit population, to say nothing of rumored thousands of squirrels, raccoons and opossums en route here by train.

The deluge of rabbits began arriving last Friday from Byron, Okla., consigned to W. C. Forbess, Texas oil magnate who wanted them to stock a 10,000-acre preserve here. Forbess authorized payment of C. O. D. charges on the first two consignments of 144 each, asking that they be released in his swamp.

Then more arrived daily and Forbess' representative refused to pay the charges on fresh shipments. Desperately, Alexander and his 13-year-old daughter worked overtime feeding the living, burying the dead and nursing the new arrivals. Today 170 more rabbits came in.

"I can't stand it," wailed Alexander. "Nothing like this ever happened before. I smell so much like rabbits that last night I hung my pants outside the house for an airing and this morning a dozen rabbit hounds had them up a tree."

Agents from the S. P. C. A. arrived today from New Orleans with a supply of carrots and cabbages. They took one look at the crates bursting with bunnies and went back to consult their lawyer.

Then Alexander wired the station agent at Byron and received the prompt reply that charges would be paid there if Alexander couldn't collect.

Alexander acted:

Smith Presses His Own Bill On Wagner Act

Asks Norton Measure Be Brought to Floor Open to Amendments

While William Green and John L. Lewis locked horns over merits of the Norton bill amending the Wagner Act, the way was being paved yesterday for possible House consideration of the much more drastic amendments proposed by the Smith committee.

Representative Smith, of Virginia, chairman of the special committee investigating the Labor Board, yesterday introduced a resolution to bring the Norton bill on to the floor of the House under an "open rule" which would permit it to be amended in any respect or to be replaced by his own bill.

Declaring that he was "tired of playing around," Representative Smith indicated that he would press forward his resolution next week unless Chairman Norton of the Labor Committee takes immediate steps to bring the proposed Wagner Act amendment to the House floor. Mrs. Norton has been attempting to bring out her bill under conditions that would permit no amendments.

Cox Backs Move

Another resolution to bring the Smith bill up for House consideration had already been introduced by Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, one of Smith's most active supporters.

Meanwhile, President Green, of the A. F. L., yesterday wrote all members of the House that the Norton amendments are "reasonable, highly necessary, and if adopted will promote a better and more satisfactory administration of the National Labor Relations Act."

The Norton bill includes the key "A. F. L. amendment," protecting craft unions.

Held "Best Means"

President H. W. Brown, of the International Association of Machinists, A. F. L. affiliate, similarly urged passage of the Norton bill, declaring that the craft union amendment "is the best means of preserving the National Labor Relations Act as a vital force for industrial peace."

At the same time, Brown denounced the Smith bill "categorically and without reservation" as "vicious and destructive of the purposes of this law."

And C. I. O. leaders were congregating in Washington to lobby against both Norton and Smith bills in response to a letter from their chieftain, John L. Lewis, urging them to "mobilize labor's full strength" against the proposed amendments.

Songs That Ease Finns' Sorrow To Be Sung at Folk Festival

Miss Elsa Perala, of Mountain Iron, Minn., with the kantele, or harp, made in Finland by her father. The instrument is one of the few to be found in this country. The kantele's many strings require frequent tuning. Inset—Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Ruohoniemi, of Floodwood, Minn., 60 per cent of whose population is of Finnish descent. Like their cousins in Finland, these Minnesotans take to skis in winter. The couple will present Finland's songs and dances at the National Folk Festival here April 25-27

"Song will help sorrow," runs an old Finnish proverb. The type of song Finland sings in this hour of her greatest sorrow will be heard at the National Folk Festival here, April 25, 26 and 27.

Sons and daughters of Finland will come here from Minnesota, bringing with them the ancient kantele, or Finnish harp, to share their heritage of song and dance with their fellow Americans.

No other country can boast a folklore so filled with pride in fatherland, love of liberty and devotion to the beauty of the homeland. And few countries have succeeded so completely in preserving their folk heritage. In the words of the great Finnish epic Kalevala, still chanted by the Minnesota Finns:

Let us clasp our hands together,
Let us interlock our fingers;
Let us sing a cheerful measure,
Let us use our best endeavors,
While our dear ones hearken to us,
And our loved ones are instructed,
While the young ones stand around us
Of the rising generation.

Of Finland's folk dances, the best-loved ones are the "dance-songs," comparable with the singing games popular with American children.

According to S. B. Ruohoniemi, of Floodwood, Minn., who with his Finnish-born wife, will come to the festival at his own expense, the dance-songs came into being during the long winter evenings in central and northern Finland.

The common plan for country estates consisted of a large building with spacious rooms, surrounded by small cabins used as servant quarters. In the evening the young people from the cabins gathered in the main building and whiled away the hours with dancing. For lack of other accompaniment, they sang as they danced.

Miss Marjorie Edgar, of St. Croix, Minn., will bring another group of singers and dancers.

In Miss Edgar's party will be Miss Elsa Perala, of Mountain Iron, who will sing to the accompaniment of the kantele which her father made in Finland before migrating to Minnesota 35 years ago.

Tickets for the seventh annual National Folk Festival are available at The Post, Pennsylvania avenue and E street northwest. Matinee tickets for the three performances, April 25, 26 and 27, are priced at 50 cents, 75 cents and $1; tickets for the evening show range from 50 cents to $1.50.

House Decides To Continue Planning Unit

Reverses Stand After Urgent Plea From Roosevelt

By the Associated Press

The House reversed itself yesterday and voted funds to finance the National Resources Planning Board for another year after President Roosevelt said in a letter that he must "earnestly plead" for the agency's continuation.

By a roll-call vote of 184 to 129, the House accepted a Senate amendment restoring $710,000 for the planning board to the $1,120,243,528 independent offices approbation bill, despite bitter Republican denunciation of the unit as "wasteful" and "vicious." Frederic A. Delano, uncle of the President, is chairman of the board.

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, a leading economy advocate, urged approval of the appropriation for the planning board, reading a letter in which President Roosevelt said, "I really believe that the appropriation of this sum will actually save many times the amount in preventing duplication of work or unplanned budget recommendations."

Rayburn Recalls Origin

Although the Senate already had approved the bill, it must go back to that body for approval of two minor House amendments, which do not affect its total.

Acting Speaker Rayburn (Democrat), of Texas, reminded Republican members that the board first was created to "help President Hoover," declared "we did not treat your Presidents like you treat Democratic Presidents."

Representative Mott (Republican), of Oregon, declared the planning board was "outstanding" in the category of Government agencies that are "harmful and even vicious."

Ship Mortgages Questioned

The bill's total as finally approved, including funds for independent Government agencies such as the Interstate Commerce Commission, Veterans' Bureau and the Federal Housing Administration, was $74,460,945 below President Roosevelt's budget estimates and about $39,000,000 less than the Senate originally recommended.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, said there was a "smelly situation" in the Maritime Commission's $11,500,000 mortgage on 14 ships of the American Presidents Steamship Co., formerly the Dollar Line. The Illinoisan said one of the ships was 9 years old and the others between 19 and 20 years old.

But Luray, Colo., Must Be Heaven, For That's the Place Minnie Bell Boyd 'Really Loves'—You See, It's Her Home
